

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement . . ." Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Fight forecast over garage if...

An Arlington Heights dentist has predicted the village "will be in for a fight" if businessmen on the north side of the Chicago and North Western Ry. tracks are assessed for a parking garage proposed on the south side of the tracks.

Frank J. Psota, 106 N. Evergreen Ave., was one of about five persons who voiced objections Thursday night to proposed improvements in the Arlington Heights central business district.

The village board's special committee now considering improvements for the downtown area has recommended that two 500-car parking garages be built in the central business district as the first steps in luring new

42% say they'll shop in village

A preliminary analysis of downtown improvement surveys returned by residents shows that 42 per cent will shop in downtown Arlington Heights more often if parking garages are built.

The 1,900 surveys also showed 70 per cent will shop downtown more often if parking, marketing and shops are improved.

The questionnaires were sent to

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velveteen wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

Appeals court upholds firing of teacher

by DOROTHY OLIVER

The Illinois Circuit Court of Appeals has upheld Arlington Heights Dist. 25's firing of a junior high school teacher for striking students.

In a unanimous decision, the court overturned an earlier verdict by a Cook County Circuit Court judge that the district should reinstate teacher John Fender, who was fired in 1972 for repeatedly using corporal punishment.

The opinion was handed down Thursday by Appellate Court Judge Edward F. Healy. The case has been in the Appellate Court nearly three years.

FENDER'S ATTORNEY, Edward Jackson, said Friday "We don't wish to make any comment at this time," when asked if he would now take the case to the Illinois Supreme Court.

The court decision stated that Fender "admitted striking students on the face or head on four occasions during the school year. Parents complained of (his) actions and in one instance, filed criminal charges against him."

The court found, "In light of all the evidence before it, the board was justified in finding (Fender) guilty of the charges set forth in the notice of dismissal."

In his lawsuit against the board, Fender charged that at the time he was fired he was president of the Dist. 25 teachers union, had received "no disciplinary sanctions from the board" and his evaluations as a teacher were good. Fender said he was "chosen for dismissal in retaliation for his activities on behalf of the teachers association."

HIE ALSO CHARGED that the board should have given him written notice to cease corporal punishment before charges were brought against him and that the board's attorney was acting as prosecutor and at the same time acting as counsel for the school board.

The lower court upheld the contention Fender should have been given written notice and that the attorney was acting in two conflicting roles.

The Appellate Court rejected the charge that Fender was fired because of his union activities, stated the hearing was fair and impartial and that he received due process by the board.

Fender, a language arts teacher for 10 years, taught at Miner Junior High School. Battery charges were filed against him by parents of one of the students he allegedly hit. He was found innocent of the charge by a Cook County Court jury.

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

Commuter fare increases delayed

Commuter rate increases on the Chicago and North Western Ry. have been delayed at least three months with Friday's approval by the Regional Transportation Authority Board of a $900,000 grant to the commuter railroad.

The grant of $300,000 a month for three months is designed to aid RTA negotiations with the Chicago and North Western Ry.

A similar grant was awarded to the Burlington Northern R.R. There has been no indication of whether the railroads will accept the grants.

Stavros refused change in sentence

Convicted extortionist James Stavros Friday was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence," but his attorney predicted he will be released from jail this summer. U.S. District Court Judge Herbert Will, who sentenced the former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman to a four-year prison term in 1974, said he would reconsider the plea for a corrected sentence after the July parole hearing. Stavros is in the Federal correctional institution at Sanstone, Minn.

Court upholds teacher's firing

The firing of an Arlington Heights Dist. 25 teacher for striking students has been upheld by the Illinois Circuit Court of Appeals. The decision overturns an earlier Cook County Circuit Court verdict that John Fender should be reinstated to his junior high position. Fender has contended the board of education fired him in retaliation for his activities as president of the Dist. 25 teachers' union and that he was denied due process in his dismissal.

2 bodies found in car at O'Hare

The decomposed bodies of a man and a woman were found Friday in the trunk of a car with Michigan license plates parked since early December in the O'Hare airport lot, police said. Police said the discovery was made by persons who had gone to the lot to repossess the car, a 1973 Chevrolet Nova with 1975 Michigan license plates VFV 352. They opened the trunk to get the spare to replace a flat tire, and discovered the bodies. Police here said the car was registered to Walter Sims of 6484 Wayne St., Romulus, Mich.

SATELLITE PHOTO taken at 11 a.m. Friday shows heavy cloudiness, associated with a low, covers the Mid-Atlantic and Northeastern States. Low uniform and layered clouds along the snow cover are visible over the northern tier of states and portions of the Rockies. Thin high clouds whisk across Southern Texas northward over the Great Plains and into the Great Lakes area.

If the railroads discontinue negotiations with the RTA, the grants would be repaid to the RTA within 90 days.

Commuter rate increases have been sought by both railroads. The Chicago and North Western has sought approval from the Illinois Commerce Commission to increase rates approximately 40 per cent.

A funding policy for bus systems was also approved Friday after suburban board members were assured that it would not discriminate against suburban bus systems.

The policy calls for 100 per cent funding for bus systems that maintain a ridership level of 1.75 passengers per revenue mile. Systems that do not meet this standard will receive a reduced subsidy.

Several suburban board members said they were voting for the policy only because of staff guarantees that it would not decrease funding for the suburban bus lines.

"IF THE SUBURBANITES on this board have become paranoid about the issue of local funding, it is only because of their sorry experiences last June 30," said D. Daniel Beldino of Evanston, referring to promises of suburban funding made last year.

RTA Chairman Milton Pikarsky said only two or three suburban bus systems did not meet the 1.75 passenger per revenue mile standard. He said therefore in most cases local communities will only be required to subsidize their routes if they want a reduced fare program.

Board action on the funding policy came shortly after approval of a $473,678 grant to the North Suburban Mass Transit District for the period July 1, 1975 to March 31. Backup statistics showed that NORTAN would not have qualified for full funding during this time period if the funding policy had been in effect.

2 jets miss each other by 20 feet

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Hughes Air West DC-9 skimming low over a runway at Spokane, Wash., in an aborted landing Thursday almost crashed into a Northwest Airlines DC-10 jumbo jet taking off from the same runway, the Federal Aviation Administration said Friday.

Aviation sources said the Air West pilot reported overtaking the Northwest jumbo from behind and passing within 20 feet of it. A 400-foot cloud ceiling and patches of light snow and fog restricted visibility around the airport at the time.

The two planes carried a total 181 persons. The FAA said no injuries were reported.

FAA Chief John McLucas expressed "deep concern" at the near disaster, which included many circumstances similar to those surrounding a 1972 crash that claimed 10 lives at Chicago's O'Hare Airport.

The National Transportation Safety Board — aided by the FAA, the two airlines and safety teams from the Air Line Pilots' Assn. launched an immediate investigation to find out why the two jetties nearly collided.

A safety board spokesman said investigators have "a wealth of material," including flight recorders from both planes and control tower tapes, to determine how far apart the planes really were and whether an air traffic control system failure was involved.

The Spokane incident occurred just one day after the board, citing four near in-flight collisions late last year, urged the FAA to make sure controllers realize that "sophisticated equipment is no substitute for constant vigilance, sound judgement and proven control techniques."

FAA records show a total 267 near midair collisions were reported in 1975, including 62 in which later investigation showed there was no real hazard.

An FAA spokesman said the near collision at Spokane International Airport involved Northwest Flight 603, which took off at 9:30 a.m. Chicago time Thursday, and Air West Flight 5, which was making an instrument approach to runway 21 at the same time.

An Air West spokesman said the DC-9, arriving at Spokane on a flight from Calgary, Ont., carried 56 passengers and a crew of five. A Northwest spokesman said there were 111 passengers and 9 crewmembers aboard the DC-10, which was bound for Seattle.

The FAA said it learned of the near midair collision through an internal "alert bulletin" based on a report filed by the Air West pilot from Las Vegas, his next stop after Seattle. Aviation sources said the Northwest crew never knew there was any danger.

FAA and ALPA officials said the Northwest DC-10 apparently climbed into the air — just in front of the Air West DC-9.

A FIRE in an eight-story building Friday near downtown St. Louis quickly spread to nine adjacent structures, engulfing more than three square city blocks. Southerly winds of up to 20 miles per hour hampered firemen. Secondary blazes broke out on rooftops as far as a mile away. Five firemen were treated for smoke inhalation and minor burns.

Jobless rate drops to 7.5%

by SARA FRITZ

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More Americans had jobs in March than ever before, the Labor Dept. reported Friday, while unemployment continued its unusually long decline.

The report said the number of employed last month reached 86.7 million, an increase of 375,000 over February and the highest in the nation's history. Joblessness decreased by 0.1 per cent to 7.5 per cent of the work force.

The March drop brought unemployment to its lowest level in more than a year, capping a steady five-month decline from 8.6 per cent last October. Not since 1962 has there been such a sustained decrease.

Unemployment has declined a substantial 1.4 per cent since the recession peak last May, and President Ford's economic advisers anticipate it will fall below 7 per cent by the end of 1976. The March unemployment rate was the lowest since December 1974.

Ford, campaigning in Milwaukee, called the report "encouraging news"

Upswing in Chicago area

Illinois' labor picture improved in March with the unemployment figure dropping three-tenths of a percentage point, from 7.6 to 7.3 per cent, figures released by the Illinois Labor Dept. showed.

Total unemployment for Illinois for March was set at 365,600, down from the February figure of 380,500.

Most of the state's improvement came in the six-county Chicago area where 13,000 employees returned to work. For the area, the unemployment rate dropped from 7.9 to 7.5 per cent.

Donald A. Johnson, department director, said the upswing in the Chicago area indicated a return to work of many previously laid off construction workers.

Johnson also said many retail stores, reporting substantial sales gains during a period of an improving economy, had hired additional workers to prepare for spring and summer sales.

and said: "We're making real progress in reducing unemployment and at the same time increasing employment."

But Leonard Woodcock, president of the United Automobile Workers, told a House Labor subcommittee the unemployment rate is close to the peak during the 1958 recession, and that Ford's plans to reduce unemployment to 5 per cent by 1981 are not adequate.

There were 7 million unemployed persons in March, a decrease of 100,000 from February. This reflected a 30 per cent recovery from the depths of the nation's worst recession since World War II.

Both in March and throughout the recovery, women benefited most from the increase in employment. Unemployment among blacks showed the biggest monthly improvement, dropping 1.2 per cent to 12.5 per cent. But this too benefited black women the most.

Unemployment continued to decline among manufacturing workers and Vietnam veterans. Some 75,000 persons were added to factory payrolls in March, mostly in transportation and electrical equipment. Employment also increased in retail trade and government.

The ranks of the "discouraged" unemployed, who have given up looking for work, dropped by 940,000 during the first quarter of 1976 from a 1.2 million high.

For the first time, the Labor Dept. gave unemployment figures for both male and female heads of households: 9.4 per cent for women, 4 per cent for men.

Despite truce, 30 killed by snipers in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Moslems and Christians laid down their arms Friday at the start of a 10-day truce to let politicians try to work out a lasting peace. Heavy fighting of the past few weeks ended but snipers killed 30 persons in Beirut during the day and there was occasional mortar fire.

Moslem leftists agreed to the truce provided that parliament convene and elect a new president to succeed Suleiman Franjeh, a Christian who so far has refused to resign. The Christian side hinted that this might not be possible and that parliament might not even be able to assemble.

Even with the sniper fire Friday and the occasional crump of a mortar shell, for Beirut residents used to far worse urban terrorism, the day was a relief. In previous days they have come directly under mortar and artillery fire themselves.

U.S. special envoy Dean Brown met with Moslem and leftist leaders Friday, but the Palestinian guerrilla leadership called on leftists to "reject and foil" Brown's mission.

Colombia acts to curb unrest

The government in Bogota, Colombia, ordered its troops Friday to open fire on student demonstrators and strikers if attacked. The order was one of a series of drastic measures aimed at ending a leftist-inspired wave of student and labor unrest the government said threatened the security of the country. Troops seized the National University, scene of frequent violent rioting, and said they would occupy it indefinitely.

Action on sterilization bill delayed

Legislators in a western state in India voted Friday to send a compulsory sterilization law to committee for study, delaying for at least three months passage of the measure, the first in the world's second most populous nation. The bill, introduced Tuesday in the assembly of Maharashtra, an Indian state of some 55 million persons, would order more than 2 million couples with three or more children to undergo tubectomies or vasectomies. Refusal to comply is punishable by six months in prison and fines of about $57. Legislators had expected the bill to become law by the end of the week. It would have been the first law in this nation of 604 million people making sterilization compulsory.

Schism threatened in Lutheran Church

The president of the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod Friday in St. Louis removed four dissident district presidents — an action that almost certainly will lead to a schism in the 2.8 million-member denomination. The Rev. Dr. Jacob A. O. Preus, synod president, said he felt "very anguished at having to do this." The leader of the so-called moderate faction opposed to Preus' conservative leadership, the Rev. Dr. John H. Tietjen, said the action "touches the life of the church directly. Its significance just cannot be fathomed."

Airline extortionist tricked by FBI

A young man who attempted to extort $300,000 from Eastern Air Lines by threatening to bomb an airport was paid off with a truck full of loot that contained only a few good bills, officials in Atlanta indicated Friday. The FBI confirmed that a package, presumably the one that was supposed to contain the $300,000, was placed aboard an Eastern flight from Atlanta to Greenville, S.C., Thursday afternoon. Agents said, however, the "extortion demand was not met." The package was believed to contain a few good bills and enough stuffing to make it look authentic.

164 weapons stolen from Tenn. armory

A bold band of burglars surprised a sleeping guard at a U.S. Marine-Navy Reserve armory in Knoxville, Tenn., Friday, tied him up and then carted away 164 weapons, including machine guns, and more than 2,500 rounds of ammunition. The weapons stolen included 140 M-16 rifles, four M-14 rifles, 18 .45-caliber revolvers, two M-60 machine guns, plus 1,440 rounds of 5.56 mm tracer ammunition and 1,140 rounds of 5.56 mm blanks for the rifles.

Ford hits back at Reagan

by United Press International

President Ford Friday claimed Ronald Reagan's recent television speech was "filled with misleading statements."

Reagan responded by saying his criticism of administration policy "apparently touched a nerve" that provoked Ford's longest attack on him yet.

In the Democratic campaign, Jimmy Carter said he is "unbeatable" in the race for the presidential nomination.

Ford, campaigning in Wisconsin, said parts of Reagan's Wednesday night speech "were a fabrication and invention."

Reagan, at a Beverly Hills, Calif., news conference said he would be happy to debate Ford. But the President said, in reference to his opponent in Tuesday's Wisconsin primary:

"Any debate with a person who is not familiar with the facts, I don't think would be very helpful."

Ford also said Reagan's charge that the Soviet Union is militarily superior to the United States is a "distortion" that "could alarm the American people, it could have an adverse effect on our allies and it could encourage our enemies."

Ford's new campaign manager, Rogers Morton, said Reagan's inaccuracies and negative statements make his credibility "suspect" among Republicans and harms his chances of being the President's running mate.

When asked about Ford's statement that the remarks about Sec. of State Henry Kissinger's views were not accurate, Reagan said "Then he (Ford) is speaking in a rather loose and unjustified way. It seems we touched a nerve."

Carter, who again Friday portrayed Hubert Humphrey as a loser, topped the Minnesota senator in the latest Gallup poll of Democrats, 30 to 29 per cent.

But the big surprise was California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., a "native son" presidential candidate, who scored 9 per cent, ahead of long-time candidates Henry Jackson Morris Udall and Fred Harris.

Brown said Friday the United States should re-examine its "reactionary" foreign policy "from Korea to Rhodesia and from Angola to Brazil. That takes a new generation without the baggage of the last 20 years."

Carter, campaigning for next Tuesday's primary in New York, said, "I think I'm unbeatable now, barring some unforeseen circumstance — and that doesn't include anyone I see on the political horizon now."

Earlier, Carter said if Humphrey wins the Democratic nomination it would be a "political miracle . . . when he runs he doesn't win, and when he doesn't run he looks very good."

'The Final Days'

Nixon wasn't demented, or near suicide: David Eisenhower

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rejecting opinions attributed to him in a new book, David Eisenhower said Friday he never thought Richard Nixon was "demented" or near suicide during his last days in office.

"I reject categorically the implication I saw or thought anything suggesting President Nixon was demented in the closing days of his administration," Eisenhower said in a two-page rebuttal to points contained in the forthcoming book, "The Final Days."

"I never feared President Nixon would commit suicide . . . I observed nothing which remotely indicated he contemplated suicide. I shared a widespread concern for his health."

Eisenhower, Nixon's son-in-law, delivered his rebuttal personally to news agencies and began it like the law student he is, labeling his points (1) and (2) as he dealt with some of the more sensational revelations pegged to him in the book by Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein.

But plain emotion broke through when he dealt with their contentions that Nixon family relationships had become strained and cold.

"The Nixon family is a close family," he said. "The love and respect of each for the other is a beautiful thing. Beating the bushes for evidence to the contrary may conform with a pre-disposed conclusion about Mr. Nixon and his 'inhumanity,' but in my view it is the lowest aspect of this obsessive hatred for Mr. Nixon and is inexcusable."

He said he prepared the statement because his efforts "to clarify the impressions and statements attributed to me in The Final Days have been futile."

In their book, excerpts of which are being published by Newsweek magazine, the authors describe a White House family gathering on the Friday before Nixon resigned and just after his lawyers discovered the tape recording they felt incriminated him in the Watergate coverup conspiracy. The book said:

"For months, David had been 'waiting for Mr. Nixon to go bananas,' as he sometimes phrased it . . . David thought the President might commit suicide . . . David seemed convinced he would never leave the White House alive."

Rejecting both points, Eisenhower said "rumors of his instability were essentially press-generated and . . . as I told Mr. Woodward, I saw the Nixon too frequently to take the rumors seriously."

He implied Woodward distorted his views.

"Expressing relief Mr. Nixon had carried off a situation like his . . . farewell speech to his staff is not the same thing as saying we stood by that morning waiting for him to 'crack,'" Eisenhower said.

Requests boom for Newsweek's Nixon chronicle

A Herald staff report
The current issue of Newsweek, carrying excerpts of a book detailing the last days of the Nixon White House, is termed a "runaway success," by magazine officials, and local distributors are placing additional orders to meet the demand.
Robert Roirdan, Newsweek circulation manager, said the issue was expected to be a sellout, but the run on newsstands is just "remarkable."
"We don't have exact figures yet,"

Roirdan said. "But we know it will be sensational. It's selling out within hours in the major markets. It's a runaway success."
Bert Maxson, executive vice president of North Shore Distributors, Inc., said he increased his normal order of the magazine in anticipation of the demand, but still it was not enough.
"WE MANAGED to get some but not enough to meet the demand. We normally order about 3,000 News-weeks each week and this week we ordered 3,400 and then we ordered 500 more. I don't have any copies in the (ware) house and I'm still getting calls from retailers," Maxson said.

Books Unlimited, 22 S. Evergreen Ave., Arlington Heights, reported only two copies were left on the shelf Wednesday, but a dozen more are expected today. A saleswoman said about 15 advance orders for the book, "The Final Days," by Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein, were placed in one day.

The Book Store, 5 W. Campbell St., Arlington Heights, had no copies left by Wednesday afternoon. Usually the magazine is available through the end of the week.
A SALESMAN SAID "maybe Hustler" is the only magazine to move off the racks faster.
Despite the rush in some stores, others reported sales were no faster than usual, despite massive pre-publication publicity on television and in other magazines.

Edward Hauser, owner of Elk Grove Drugs in Elk Grove Village, said he had not noticed any big surge in sales.
But the rush on the newsstand was in full swing at Palatine Drugs, Inc., in Palatine. "There's been such a run on them," reported a clerk there.
Roirdan said Newsweek had a larger-than-usual press run this week, which will be increased still further for next week's edition, when the second part of the series appears.
HE SAID THE edition has eclipsed the previous record-holder, the August 19, 1974 issues, in which Nixon resigned and Gerald R. Ford assumed the presidency.

However, at least one retailer is not handling the magazine.
Jack Keefer, owner of Keefer's Pharmacy in Mount Prospect, said he returned all 20 copies he received.
"I'm a real solid American. This type of pinko reporting is for the birds. This type of phoney journalism emasculating one president after another — first Kennedy and now Nixon — stinks. Let the dead dogs sleep," Keefer said.

Underwriter's insurance role cited

Economic conditions and a trend toward increased government interference in the insurance business broadened the underwriter's role in determining an insurance company's profitability, said a Des Plaines industry spokesman.
Paul Blume, vice president and general counsel for the National Assn. of Independent Insurers, was a speaker at a recent Chicago Conference of Casualty Insurance Companies.

"The era of cash flow decision-making in the insurance business is over and 'claim flow' has replaced it — something that should have been the case all along," Blume said.
"Underwriting profits have finally reached respectability again," he said. "No longer can companies rely on investment income to maintain rank in this highly competitive business. Careful risk is an absolute necessity today."

A social action philosophy among insurance regulators and state legislatures caused serious problems in the industry, Blume said. He predicted increasing government intervention will force underwriters to use "boldness and imagination to carry out their responsibilities in these important times."

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Sheen," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Homesick.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

Cafeteria 'stickup' leads off students' debate class

by KATHERINE ROYCE
It was like a scene from "Police Story."

Two youths, their faces distorted by nylon masks, grabbed the cashier in the Arlington High School cafeteria Friday and fled with the contents of the cash register.

But, just as in the filming of the television series, the event was staged. It was an enactment of one of a series of crimes staged by students at Arlington as part of a course in legal and parliamentary debate.

The course, taught by Wayne Wagner, is part of the speech curriculum at Arlington, and teaches students the principles of legal debate. The students will get the chance to put their skills into practice during the next few weeks, when the youths come to trial in Wagner's classroom.

STUDENTS WILL act as judge, defense and prosecuting attorneys, bailiff, and witnesses, and an impartial jury will be selected by the student attorneys from students sitting in study hall.

"It's a debate situation, but in a different context," Wagner said. "Instead of having two people argue some esoteric topic, we let them be a bit more creative."

Wagner and his students have been enacting crimes at Arlington for several years. Friday's robbery began when a fight broke out between two students in the cafeteria. The ruckus was a diversionary tactic staged so the robbery would go unnoticed. The robbers, however, were quickly apprehended by hall monitors and delivered to the administration office.

WAGNER'S CLASS of 24 students is now trying a murder case, also an enactment. A kidnapping, attempted arson and battery case are also planned for this semester.

In past years students have taken up the defense of a teacher who was fired for allegedly printing an inflammatory article in the school newspaper. The school store once was robbed, and cheerleaders were tried for creating excessive noise in violation of a village ordinance and for destruction of private property. The cheerleaders traditionally "decorate" the homes of varsity players before a big game.

WHEN STAGING an event, Wagner takes precautions to make sure no one is injured or takes the enactment too seriously. Teachers, administrators and the school police counselor are usually notified and the event often is staged out of the view of most of the student body. The students themselves select the crimes to be staged.

The students who elect to take the one-semester course have an interest in debate and some hope to study law following graduation. It's not an easy course, said Wagner. The students

"work like devils."

The attorneys actually prepared legal briefs in arguing their cases. As part of the course, students tour the legal division of the Arlington Heights Memorial Library and have access to law books there.

Buckholz tops list for police captain

Lt. Paul A. Buckholz Jr. is the leading candidate for police captain to be named Monday by the Arlington Heights Police Dept.

Lt. Buckholz, 49, is at the top of the captain's eligibility list released Friday by the Fire and Police Commission, ahead of three other lieutenants. But Police Chief L. W. Calderwood Friday afternoon refused to confirm that Buckholz would get the job.

He is trailed, in order, by Leroy J. Weith, George D. Ekblad and Phillip M. Olszewski.

Buckholz was congratulated by a number of village officials Friday afternoon and was given the impression he had received the promotion, but Calderwood said he will not make any appointment until Monday.

THE APPOINTMENT is to fill the vacancy created last September when Capt. Jack Aldrich retired to become police chief at Barrington Hills.

Calderwood, technically, may appoint any one of the top three applicants, but it has been a common policy for the village to appoint the top scorer.

Final approval of Calderwood's nomination must be received from Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson.

Buckholz, who has been on the Arlington Heights force for 16½ years, currently heads the department's juvenile division.

'Torrid tale of temperance' on stage at Hersey High

A "torrid tale of temperance and temptation" will be told at Hersey High School in the form of a melodrama, "The Drunkard," Thursday through Saturday, April 10, at 8 p.m.

This much booed, hissed and cheered version of the story by W. H. Smith written in 1844 revolves around a young man of property and good social standing, played by Dennis McSherry, and his bitter struggle with "demon rum." In the early 1950's the play ended a 20-year stand before a combined audience of two million in Los Angeles.

Tickets for the performances, which will be held in the school theater, 1900 E. Thomas Ave., Arlington Heights, are $1.50. They may be purchased at the door or by calling 259-8500 ext. 71 during business hours. The management reserves the right to reserve seating for parties larger than 15 people.

Junk shops occasionally will yield a bargain

Who says there are no longer any bargains in antiques? Rummaging in a junk shop a few weeks ago, I found a beautiful (well, to primitive lovers it is beautiful) old preserve jar covered with cobwebs, dirty, moldy inside, but the lines were good and I thought I could discern a handsome color of brownish gold under the "crud."

The proprietor said he had been obliged to buy the jar in order to get some furniture from a "picker" (pickers are those who buy and sell, supplying various shops) who came through the town just that day, and since I visit the junk shop quite regularly, I didn't doubt his word. He didn't like the jar, he said, because there was no market for "them permatives," as he called them. They just didn't sell, but I wanted it for what he paid, $5 it was mine.

I bought it, took it home and scrubbed it with a steel wool pad, and what emerged was a really nice piece of Mississippi Valley red clay with lead glaze, with the maker's monogram, a "W" impressed, and the capacity, three gallons, inscribed in the BARGAINS occasionally turn up in junk shops. That's where columnist Dahlberg found this jar, a kind of pottery made of Mississippi Valley red clay.

clay with a free hand "3."

I WOULD LIKE TO call this a piece of Galena pottery, which would make it quite valuable, but the color is not quite right. Much pottery was produced at Galena, Ill., and around that entire area north and south a hundred miles or so in each direction, all along the Mississippi, and all of which wares fall into a general classification of galena (meaning lead) glazed pottery. Galena is redware made for household use during the last century before glass and stoneware came to supplant it.

Galena pottery, the "real" thing and its look-alikes, is admirable for its strong simple shapes and for the interesting haphazard "coin" spots of color and splashes of reds, greens and browns that often appear in the glaze. It is very similar in shape and color to pottery produced in the New England states somewhat earlier, but there are differences, subtle but telling to a collector of either ware.

Eastern pottery is usually completely covered with glaze, often has spots of brown which looks as if it were spattered onto the ware before firing, and most of the Eastern pottery has no edge molding. All Galena wares have definite rims or edging. Some have "piecrust" type, some have inside rims for covers to rest upon, and some (such as the piece I found) have a perfectly flat top for a weighted cover.

My jar is a rich brown color with lighter tan blotches and "burned" marks from the kiln.

THE VARIATIONS in color of the pieces occurred when the heat in the kiln raised or lowered. Lower heats resulted in a characteristic "pumpkin red" color, and higher heats made colors darker, to reach the greens and browns, and causing the dark splashes to occur. Imperfections in the glaze add to the beauty, according to collectors.

Preserve jars were probably the most numerous of the articles made in the many potteries in the entire area. Other pieces were flower pots, churns, jugs, butter jars, tiles, pitchers and bottles. Some decorative animals, such as dogs, were turned out, but mostly the wares were utilitarian.

Collecting

with Grace Carolyn

Be sure, if you should visit Galena, to look in the shops for examples of the famous pottery. Once you've seen it, you will recognize it, for its characteristics are easily learned when viewing the actual products.

The town of Galena has an adventurous history, and I'm sure many readers have visited its historic places, including Gen. U. S. Grant's home. The word "galena," as I mentioned, means sulphide of lead which was smelted there and in nearby places, then shipped out by keel boat and later by steamer. Through the Blackhawk Indian Wars of 1832 Galena served as a stockade and place of safety to the pioneer settlers.

THE TOWN'S contribution to the Civil War is considerable, for it can count nine generals including Grant as famous sons. Once as important a trade center as Chicago, Galena grew until the later years of the 19th century, but declined due to a slump in the lead market and the progress of the railroads.

A booming town such as Galena needed many objects for its thousands of householders, and this need contributed to the area's development as an important center of pottery making. Today, owning a genuine piece of Galena pottery is considered quite a coup, and although my jar is a nice example of the type, it is not the "real thing."

But then, the $5 I paid is a long way from the $100 or so a genuine piece would have cost. Any old piece of Mississippi Valley redware is fun to own, and looks handsome with tall weeds or perhaps pussy willows or forsythia in the spring.

If you have questions, please write Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, enclosing SASE.)

Martha Gorman - Vernon E. Weiss

The bride did an Irish jig with some of her family and the groom a Russian bear dance with friends at the reception for Martha and Vernon Weiss. The party at the Arlington Park Hilton followed the couple's 3 p.m. wedding March 6 in Our Lady of the Wayside Church, Arlington Heights.

Martha is the daughter of the John C. Gormans of Arlington Heights and Vernon the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Weiss of Chicago. The newlyweds met three years ago as students at Western Illinois University from where both were graduated. The bride is also a graduate of Arlington High School.

She chose Sandra Conkey of Rockford as her maid of honor for the double ring rite. Nancy Ryan, Rock Island, Carol Schurwanz, Park Ridge, and the couple's sisters, Valerie Serzen, Itasca, and Monica Gorman, were the four bridesmaids.

ALL THE GIRLS wore forest green satin embroidered in tiny peach, cream and blue flowers and accented with an ivory lace yoke and collar. Crescent bouquets of spider mums and baby's breath completed their attire, along with baby's breath tiaras over their hair.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin with lace collar and yoke and with accordion pleated ruffles at the hem and cuffs. Her fingertip tulle veil was attached to a Juliet cap of lace. White roses with spider mums and baby's breath were in her bouquet.

Vernon chose Victor Petik, Des

Plaines, as best man. Groomsmen included Jack Theden, Rockford, Michael Tarr, Chicago, John Gorman, brother of the bride, and Glen Montgomery, Chicago, the groom's cousin.

After a week in Florida with a stop at Disneyland, the newlyweds settled in Hanover Park. Vernon is employed in Chicago for Studio Seven, Inc.

Susan Corbett - Barry G. Gardner

It was while working for the Slavic Gospel Association in Wheaton that Susan Eleanore Corbett of Arlington Heights and Barry Charles Gardner of South Holland met. Susan is still at the Slavic Gospel Mission as executive assistant, but Barry, who was attending Wheaton College, has since graduated and is now working on a master's at the University of Chicago.

He and Susan were married March 6 at 11 a.m. in St. Peter Lutheran Church, Arlington Heights, and then feasted at a wedding breakfast at Itasca Country Club.

Parents of the couple are the Robert Corbetts and the Charles Gardners.

Kent Gardner, Barry's brother, was best man and also soloist for the double ring ceremony, accompanied by the church organist and two violinists from Wheaton College Orchestra. Christine Araman, college friend of the bride, sang at the reception.

SUSAN'S ATTIRE was a white satin jersey gown with lace medallion appliques and a fingertip mantilla veil edged in matching lace. She carried white orchids, yellow roses, aqua baby's breath and white stephanotis.

Weddings

Catherine DeGroot - John Roach

Next-door neighbors on Princeton Court, Arlington Heights, were married March 6 in Our Lady of the Wayside Catholic Church, uniting Catherine Ann DeGroot and John Frederick Roach.

Catherine is a graduate of Rockhurst College, Kansas City, Mo., and John graduated from Southern Illinois University after a period at Western Illinois and the University of Illinois.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger J. DeGroot are parents of the bride and Mr. and Mrs. Donald H. Roach parents of the groom.

THE WEDDING service was held at 6:15 p.m. with a dinner following at Carson Inn-Nordic Hills. The couple then honeymooned in New Orleans.

Mary Jo DeGroot was her sister's maid of honor and William Roach his brother's best man for the double ring ceremony Christopher and John De Groot, brothers of the bride, ushered.

Catherine chose an ivory sheer bridal gown with white lace trim and a satin and lace headpiece to hold her fingertip veil in place. She carried spring flowers in white with a touch of peach. Her sister wore peach Quiana and carried spring flowers in peach interspersed with white.

The doctor says
by Lawrence F. Lamb, M.D.

New treatments for cataracts

I am going to have a cataract operation and my doctor said he can put in some permanent contact lenses because my eyes are healthy. He said they sew them in and they are permanent. I have talked to a lot of people who have had this done and they are happy because they don't have to wear any other glasses and they don't have to take them out.

What could you tell me about this or can I have the other operation and put contact lenses on and wear other glasses besides the contact lenses? Are these permanent glasses that the doctor wants to put inside my eyes approved?

I would sure hate to lose my eyesight. I am 60 years old and never wore glasses when I was young.

I wish I could give you a definite answer. Certainly implanting the artificial lens inside the eye is a very promising technique. Eventually I would guess that it will become the standard procedure in all healthy eyes, but I don't think we are at that stage yet. There are a number of eye specialists in the country who are very enthusiastic about this procedure and they have reason to be.

Let's start at the beginning. A cataract is an opacification of the lens in the eye. All of the light that enables you to see must pass through the lens. The cataract operation simply removes that opaque, clouded lens.

Before contact lenses were popular, individuals who had cataracts removed were very thick lenses that magnified images 25 to 30 times their normal size. This greatly distorted the field of vision.

The successful development of contact lenses has been a great benefit. The amount of magnification and distortion by the contact lens resting on the outside of the eyeball after the cataracts have been removed is minimal.

NOW WE HAVE IMPLANTS of a new lens into the eye itself. Since these are internal they require none of the usual care attended to contact lenses. The amount of magnification and distortion with such lenses is really minimal.

If there is other disease inside the eye, then the use of an implant may not improve vision nor will an external contact lens or ordinary glasses. At least the amount of improvement will be limited by the degree of other disease in the eye.

Some specialists who have been implanting lenses have seven to eight years experience now and to date there have been no serious complications. The problem is, in advising people who may read this column, that there is no experience over a longer period of time. How will these lenses work in 10 or 15 years? That would be important in a young person.

You will have to depend on your doctor's recommendation and your own feeling about it. You could wear contact lenses and you could wear contact lenses plus ordinary glasses if you needed the same kind of effect that bifocals provide for some people

Experts agree silver can go in dishwasher

Such a flurry of mail over one small column item. The reader asked if sterling silver could go into the dishwasher. The answer was yes. No, no, no! was the response from scores of others. So it was back to the checking — with the manufacturers (like Gorham), sellers (like Tiffany, Michael Fina, Hess) and a dozen other experts.

Only Tiffany said no. All the others, including Good House-keeping, said yes. It says yes, firmly, even in the brochure of the Sterling Silversmiths Guild of America, supposedly the No. 1 authority. This doesn't apply to knives with cemented handles.

One assumption is that many people say no because they've had spotting troubles. Detergent grains can get on silver before the water runs into the dishwasher, so one reasonable precaution is to place the silver as far as possible from the detergent cup. Hard water is probably a problem, too, so it's wise to use a rinse-aid.

If spots do appear, the wise thing is to clean them off immediately and let the silver dry thoroughly before putting away. Everything checked and considered, the answer is still yes.

Dear Dorothy: Some readers might like to know a good way to freshen up marshmallows quickly. Use an airtight plastic bag or one of the heavy plastic containers, put in as many marshmallows as wanted, seal the container and dunk it in a sink of warm water for three to five minutes. Then remove and all's ready — K. Guest.

Dear Dorothy: Here's a hint for suede-shoe lovers. About to leave home. I shuddered over a messy-looking stain on my black suede shoes. No suede cleaner around — but there was white vinegar. It worked beautifully. — Jennie Martel.

Dear Dorothy: When recipes state that milk, water or any liquid should be lukewarm, what temperature does this mean? Also, please give the temperature for the scalding of milk.—Jessie L. Fehl Harnish.

Your questions led me into quite a search, and it's easy to see why you ask them. There are countless cookbooks, but precious few deal with such specific temperatures. Anyway, the research disclosed one standard — that lukewarm liquid means 80 to 90 degrees. To scale is to heat liquid just below the boiling point, which is 212 degrees. But if one used a thermometer to check, the liquid would be beyond the scalding point.

What the good cooks follow as a scalding rule is to remove the liquid from the heat the moment tiny bubbles form around the outside edge. As for lukewarm, the oldest practice of all is a drop of liquid on the wrist.

Wrap the avocado in foil (so that no air gets to it) and leave it on the counter until it's just right.

Four seek three-year terms in Dist. 59

There are four candidates for three 3-year terms in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Emil Bahnmaier, Erwin Poklacki and Judy Zanca. Newcomer Charles Canupp Jr.

Endorsements: None.

The Issues: The Dist. 59 board has wrestled with money problems all year and now is discussing what the impact of a balanced budget will have on the district. The district has been operating at a deficit for more than 15 years and the board was forced to borrow money by issuing teachers orders, a form of script, to pay the faculty for several months.

The board also successfully passed a tax rate increase referendum this year, but sees a need for another down the road if the financial picture does not improve.

Also at issue is the unit district study now under way by a citizen's committee, the unit district would combine elementary and high schools under one board and administration and would require two of the high schools now operated by High School Dist. 214.

Teachers in the district have grown increasingly aggressive in contract negotiations over the years and are now closely watching the board to see if staff cutbacks go beyond an amount which would be in proportion to the 4 per cent of declining enrollment in the district.

The board this year also introduced the concept of converting one of the district schools into an alternative school, where a more traditional structured approach to education would be stressed. Although the community opposed the idea in a series of public hearings, the board is interested in investigating the concept further.

Erwin Poklacki

"I have experience to bring to the board that is needed at this time," said Erwin Poklacki, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board candidate.

Poklacki, who was appointed to the board last summer, also served on the board from 1971-74. He said through "the experience of being a board member you learn what is the best thing to do despite what the taxpayers think. It's sometimes a difficult, lonely situation."

He said during his years on the board he has come to realize "communications with the community will always be a problem. I don't see any solution to the problem" because the "education language must be learned."

POKLACKI SAID he also advocates looking into alternative schooling options in Dist. 59. "I pushed my fellow board members into this alternative school thing this year. It didn't turn out the way I'd hoped it would," he said. The alternative school was voted down for next year.

He said the major problem in holding hearings on the alternative school idea was that parents didn't realize it wouldn't jeopardize the programs in the regular schools.

On other issues Poklacki said:

• Deficit spending. Poklacki said he favors deficit spending. Before cutting programs, he said he would go into deficit spending because budget cuts "should mean a less educated student coming out of our schools." He said "deficit spending can be handled very efficiently. It's easier than raising the tax level."

• Budget cuts. "We shouldn't go into panic cutting of programs at this time," he said he is "very happy with the way the district is handling budget cuts — a little from everything — rather than cutting total programs." He wants the board to "make a commitment now" about what it will do if it faces an inflation factor greater than 5 per cent, the figure used in setting the current budget. Poklacki said he voted against the recent bud-et cuts "in principle" because all areas were cut at least 4 per cent, including special education, which is not suffering declining enrollment.

• Closing schools. "It won't come for a few years. I'm not in favor of pushing it, but if there is no program in a school to keep it open, it should be closed. The majority has to be served."

• Teachers strikes. "It's very possible, especially this year, to have a strike in Dist. 59. All the ingredients are there." He said if a strike hits the district, he would continue negotiating, close schools and seek mediation.

• Teachers unions. "It hasn't provided any benefits to the district or teachers for the last number of years. Probably the salaries would have been about the same without negotiations — a salary he says is "equitable." He said the union, however, doesn't necessarily represent the teachers.

Charles Canupp

Charles Canupp decided to challenge the three incumbents up for reelection to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education because of his interest in the district.

"It was projected to be an uncontested race and I have had a great interest in Dist. 59 — my two children. I wanted to take the opportunity to get more involved in the decision making of the district," he said.

Canupp said one of his "prime" goals is to improve communications between the board and the community.

"I want to get more public involvement with the board," he said. Canupp suggested that the board send out newsletters more often and questionnaires to get residents' suggestions. He also wants information about the topics to be discussed at board meetings available to the public in advance to "help get the people out to meetings."

Canupp said the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic are the most important subjects taught in the elementary schools because they set the base for future study. He advocates a "curriculum that would best give a strong education that would let children expand as they get older."

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "I would like to move toward a balanced budget. The cost of borrowing money can get quite expensive," he said he wants to get a date for "getting the district in the black" and work to meet it.

• Budget cuts. He said he would "have to really get into the details and look at what areas could survive a cutback." If programs had to be cut back, he said he would "pick a program with as little impact as possible" and avoid touching the basics.

Charles Canupp

He said the district should also look at the individual schools and assess their needs when cutting back staff and other areas rather than taking "one That is the worst mistake you can make."

• Closing schools. When a school's enrollment drops to about 50 per cent of its capacity, the district should "implement a study to see what would be the most economical way to go" — closing it or maintaining it, he said.

• Referendum. He said all sources of revenue should be examined to see if there is "an alternative source of money" before the board tries for a tax rate increase. "If referendum is the only way to get out of deficit, then pursue it."

Judith Zanca

The problems confronting school boards from declining enrollment and rising costs to dropping revenue require "experienced board members to be around," says Judith Zanca who is running for her third 3-year term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 board.

"I've been on the board six years and feel I've done a good job. I want to continue," she said.

She said one of the major accomplishments during her time on the board was firing former Supt. James Ervill. "I don't know if it is something to be proud of but it was necessary."

MRS. ZANCA SAID she is pleased with the current administration under Supt. Roger Bardwell. "We have an administration that is more responsive to the community," she said.

She also feels the current board is "responsive to what we hear from the community. Our phones are in tune." The board also is planning to hold community forums every three months to answer questions and listen to problems. She said she hopes this program will bring more parents in contact with the board.

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "We're at the mercy of inflation and negotiation settlements. I don't know how we can get out of part of our revenue being tax anticipation warrants," a form of borrowed money. She said the board is "going to strive to make the bottom dollar balance" but still needs to borrow.

• Budget cuts. She said the "largest place to save money is with the teacher ration." By increasing the student/teacher ratio by one, she said the district could save about $250,000. She said the board also developed a list of "27 sacred cows" that would have a "terrible effect" on the district if cut. She said "before attacking the 27 cows, there must be input from the community, principals and teachers."

• Closing schools. "When enrollment gets below 150 kids at a school, we would have to consider closing schools," she said she is not in favor of changing school boundaries to enable the district to close a school.

Judith Zanca

• Alternative schools. "In the 60s, everyone said there is only one way of learning. I do not believe that. We must offer the alternatives." She said the district should offer a range of teaching styles from a very structured program to an open school set-up.

• Teachers strikes. If Dist. 59 confronted a teachers strike, Mrs. Zanca said she would "keep the schools open. I don't think the community would stand for closing the schools." She said she would continue negotiating and would not seek a court injunction to get teachers back in school.

• Teachers unions. "The only issue I ever hear about is money and now some about job security. We also don't hear from anybody but the leadership," she said Dist. 59 teachers are paid "just about right. We're competitive with our neighbors."

Emil Bahnmaier

Emil Bahnmaier wants to "keep the good things in this district" as he seeks a second term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board.

"I've learned a lot about Dist. 59 and education during the last three years. I've done my apprenticeship," he said. "We're going to be going into a rough year. Experience is going to be invaluable."

He would like the district to do more evaluation of programs. "I want to see if we are getting maximum education value out of a program or if other programs are better," he said.

ONE AREA he feels has improved during his term on the board is the board's contacts with the community.

"I think we have opened up. I like to think I was part of that because I came on the board with a hangup about it," he said.

He would like to improve the board's communication further by setting up parent advisory committees at each school. "They would be advisory, to bring the views of the community into the schools," he said.

He also is pleased with the establishment of a gifted program for talented students in various areas. He sees the "talented program as a way to have fall-out to the regular classroom" on special programs and indivisualized instruction.

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "Right now there is no way out of tax anticipation warrants," a method of borrowing money, he said. "We hope for, and I support, a balanced budget for this year but the balanced budget depends on the outcome of teacher negotiations."

• Budget cuts. The first area to cut back would be the teaching staff, he said. Bahnmaier said he would consider increasing the student/teacher ration to cut back on the number of teachers needed. "Only when that would hurt the education would I touch any education programs. Our special programs are things that make our district unique."

• Closing schools. "The present position is we would not close them down until enrollment reaches 125 students. It is conceivable the time will arrive when it will be financially unfeasible to keep a school open."

• Unit district. "I think the taxpayers should have the right to determine if they want a unit district. I lean towards a unit district. I have seen figures that show financial advantages" for Dist. 59 forming a unit district.

• Referendum. He said the earliest he would ask the taxpayers to support a tax rate increase would be during the 1979-80 school year.

Unit plan to aid only Dist. 59: study

by JUDY JOBBITT

The proposed unit school district for the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 area would be financially beneficial to that area but would hurt the remaining portion of High School Dist. 214, according to figures presented to the Dist. 59 citizens committee.

The figures also showed the possibility of the proposed unit district having a balanced budget with a lower tax rate than would be needed to balance the budgets of Dist. 214 and Dist. 59.

Key Club to elect officers this weekend

The Illinois-Eastern Iowa District of Key Club, the young men's service organization of Kiwanis International, will elect officers this weekend at the Arlington Park Hilton.

More than 600 high school boys from the district are attending. Worldwide membership in Key Club numbers more than 80,000.

Beer can fete at Randhurst

A beer can-orama will be held at the Randhurst Town Hall, lower level, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and Sunday.

Collectors will be allowed to buy, sell or trade.

For more information, call 253-4909 after 6 p.m.

The figures show the combined tax rates for Districts 214 and 59 would have to be $3.32 per $100 assessed valuation next year for the budget to balance, but the proposed unit district would only need a tax rate of $4.83 per $100 assessed valuation for a balanced budget.

THE ILLINOIS SCHOOL Consultants, hired by Dist. 59 to provide information on forming a unit district, also presented projections showing the proposed unit district needing a tax rate of $6.21 for a balanced budget by the 1980-81 school year and Districts 214 and 59 needing a combined tax rate of $6.78 for a balanced budget that year.

If Dist. 59 formed a unit district, the remaining Dist. 214 area also would need to increase its tax rate by about 56 cents by the 1980-81 school year for a balanced budget above the needed increase for the current Dist. 214 area to have a balanced budget that year.

According to the report, the proposed unit district could set a higher tax rate despite the state's requirement for the high school district to cut its tax rate. Dist. 214 currently is required by the state to cut its tax rate, although the residents have approved a higher tax rate.

The consultants also presented figures showing a Unit Dist. 59 having a cumulative deficit of about $9.7 million by the 1980-81 school year if the maximum tax rate of $3.93 per $100 assessed valuation is used. Dist. 59 would have a deficit of about $10.7 million by that year.

DIST. 214 WOULD have a deficit of about $43.8 million by the 1980-81 school year and, a deficit of about $38.9 million if Dist. 59 withdrew and formed a unit district.

In addition, Dist. 214 would have to give the proposed unit a percentage of the total high school district's assets, which would be about $10 million in addition to the two high schools in the proposed district's area.

The figures also show Dist. 214 would have $1,722 available per student next year under the current set-

Parks offer reduced swimming pass rate

Swimming pool passes for the Arlington Heights Park District will be available at reduced rates between April 5 and May 7.

The regular rate of $35 for a family pass and $16 for an individual pass will be reduced to $30 and $11 during the period. The passes will be sold at Camelot, Frontier, Olympic, Pioneer and Recreation parks Mondays through Fridays from 1 to 5 p.m.

Pass holders are asked to bring their present passes for revalidation, to eliminate the need for new photographs. Passes will be valid 12 months from the date of purchase, or 12 months from the expiration date of present passes.

up but would only have $1,627 available per student if Dist. 59 formed a unit district.

The figures also show the unit district would have $2,196 per student on the high school level next year.

The charts also show the Dist. 59 area is paying about $2,161 per high school student compared to the general Dist. 214 rate of $1,410 per student. The Dist. 59 area has about 27 per cent of the total Dist. 214 student body and has about 40 per cent of the high school's assessed valuation.

The report stated that the proposed unit district's board also could divide the total per pupil resources differently than currently is divided between Dist. 214 and Dist. 59 and spend more on elementary students.

Dist. 214 currently spends about 54 per cent more per pupil than Dist. 54. This difference is comparable with other high school districts and their feeder elementary districts.

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper Community College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli.

Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two things are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

NIE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says:

Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelors' degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal 41, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issues, Carponelli said:

Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

Faculty relations. "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college," Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 45, of N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum, "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study," she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:

Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

Faculty Unionization. "Up to them." Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

Two seats open

Dist. 23 election uncontested

There are only two candidates running for two 3-year terms on the Prospect Heights Dist. 23 Board of Education elections April 10 — making it the only district in the Northwest suburbs with an uncontested election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Alan Krinsky and Sallyann Okuno.

Endorsements: None.

Alan Krinsky

Alan Krinsky, 38, of 2027 Rosehill, Arlington Heights, decided to seek his third term on the board because he believes he has "done a good job and that I can continue to do a good job." School board positions have to be filled, and he noted that there "were not too many volunteers this year."

Finances. "School is going to go on" no matter what happens, Krinsky said, but the state legislature is making it very difficult for school boards to plan their budgets.

"This whole finance thing depends on at what rate the state is going to fund us," Krinsky said. He said the district will not be in as bad financial shape if it is fully funded this year as it would be if funding were dropped 85 per cent, as has been rumored, he said.

Even if full funding is realized, the district will still be in some financial trouble this year because of declining enrollment, he said.

"We have only one small section of housing construction in the district, and the rest is apartments and condominiums, which just don't bring kids," he said.

Referendum. Krinsky does not believe passing a tax rate increase referendum would be of much value to the district generally although it might help in the building fund.

"We're already taxing at maximum in the education fund," he said, which would mean that if the tax rate were increased, the state would withhold some of its state aid.

Budget cuts. Krinsky said he has no desire to cut anything out of the budget, but if cuts had to be made, he would cut last those items which directly affect the educational process.

"I'm not saying we should cut administrators or maintenance or any-

Sallyann Okuno

Sallyann Okuno is seeking her second term on the board because she believes it takes a board member one term "just to get into the swing of things."

Mrs. Okuno, 35, of 2 Garden Ct., Prospect Heights, said she is still interested in the board and in making decisions on the financial and educational concerns of the district.

Finances. Mrs. Okuno believes it will take "a long time" to reach a point where the district can operate without going into tax anticipation warrants, which is borrowing on the next year's anticipated tax revenues.

It is especially difficult to plan a budget for next year because "we don't know what aid will be coming from downstate, and so we can only assume — and hope our assumptions are right."

Referendum. "I don't think a referendum would pass," Mrs. Okuno said. "That's why we're talking about making some cutbacks. We don't want to go to more tax anticipation warrants."

Budget cuts. Mrs. Okuno disagrees with some district boards that are making extracurricular activities cutbacks before anything else.

"Extracurricular activities are part of the makeup of the district and are part of a well-rounded education," she said.

Mrs. Okuno would consider raising the average class size slightly to save money, but "I wouldn't want to go over 30 kids in a class. Each child is different and has individual needs." She said if declining enrollment shows "definite proof" that fewer teachers are needed, she would be willing to release some teachers. "But I want to keep the level of education where it is and I would want to be sure that there were really no positions available."

Mrs. Okuno would prefer "to modify" several programs rather than cutting one out completely. "We would have to see how much we could cut and still maintain the educational value."

Teachers union. "I think there is a lot of good rapport between the board and the union," Mrs. Okuno said. She said she knows the Dist. 23 teacher salaries "are lower than some other districts, but with the amount we have to work with, we're doing the best we can."

Communication. "I think we have had fairly open and good communication with the public," Mrs. Okuno said. "We send home newsletters after the board meetings, and people at board meetings are allowed to speak. But there's always room for improvement."

developers to the area.

THE COMMITTEE recommended that the first garage be built on the south side of the tracks, on village-owned property at Vail Avenue and Sigwalt Street.

The second garage should be built on the north side of the tracks, the committee's motion said.

Tentative financing plans for the two garages and pedestrian shopper malls include a special tax district confined to merchants and landowners in the central business district, federal funds to be received by the village through the Community Development Act, parking funds paid to the village and long-term leases of parking spaces in the garages.

Psota warned the committee Thursday that north side businessmen will object to paying for south side improvements.

"I will be willing to give 50-to-1 odds that if a parking garage is built on the south side, you'll never see one on the north side," Psota said.

HE SUGGESTED two separate special tax districts be established if the village goes ahead with the proposed improvements.

Other residents spoke against the parking garage and mall proposals, saying "better selection" is the key to rejuvenating the central business district.

"You're under a delusion if you think people are going to come downtown and use a garage if they're going to have to pay for it. If you're going to get shoppers, you need a better selection of stores," said Eugene Wagner, an Arlington Heights resident.

Wagner said the board should only take "moderate" action until future plans have been justified.

Improvements need to be made to the downtown area before a garage is built or it will go unused, businessman James Coyne said.

about 22,000 households last month. The results show only 3.6 per cent of the residents shop downtown daily, 21.3 per cent shop there twice a week and 34 per cent shop in the central business district weekly. About 22 per cent of the residents "seldom" shop downtown.

The surveys reported that the major reasons residents don't shop downtown is that there is not a wide variety of goods and because prices are not competitive.

A majority of the residents who returned surveys also criticized the amount of free parking, congestion and access to the downtown area.

Saturdays," Coyne said. "I think the reason developers want to see a garage down there is so they can build highrises and fill them up with offices."

Most members of the committee responded that a parking garage is needed as an "incentive" for the future development of the downtown area.

"The garage is not a panacea, but it is a first step. It must be coupled with malls and have proper promotion," businessman Michael Witt said. "If we don't do something we're going to end up with nothing."

Donald F. Morton, president of Arlington Federal Savings, said that development also will be spurred if the village abolishes its parking ordinance that requires downtown businesses to donate $1,600 in lieu of each off-street parking space they are required to provide.

The way we see it

Revenue sharing has worked well

In the current debate on federal revenue sharing, no one is arguing that it is the perfect tool to resolve local revenue problems. That, however, is no reason for abandoning it.

Congress is presently wrestling with an extension of the four-year-old program. To date, its efforts have been lackadaisical. After all, 1976 is an election year in which much public business will be postponed until after the November elections.

Revenue sharing, adopted under President Nixon as a device to funnel federal tax dollars to local communities, has been modestly successful. But it certainly can stand review and improvement. On balance, however, the program has proved itself to be worth renewing.

One of the main criticisms of revenue sharing is that it should more directly serve our hard-pressed central cities and poor rural areas. It is argued by some that the affluent suburbs should be the last to receive this revenue aid.

We disagree. Revenue sharing in the Northwest suburbs has met a variety of worthwhile governmental and human needs. And local municipalities, as pointed out in a Herald report on Thursday, are facing a severe financial pinch.

We do, however, believe Congress should look at the system by which revenue sharing is funneled to the communities.

As reported by Herald metropolitan staff writer Kurt Baer, revenue sharing is calculated by an intricate computer formula. The system is supposed to provide more funds to communities with low per capita incomes and high taxes.

Two Northwest suburban communities with comparable populations — Elk Grove Village (25,000) and Rolling Meadows (20,000)—have received $1.4 million and $834,000, respectively. The reason? Rolling Meadows is rich with sales tax income, and lacks local property tax. Thus it suffers by comparison when the money is handed out — even though its needs are comparable to those of Elk Grove Village.

Perhaps such differences are merely a quirk of the complex formulas. But we think Congress must consider how well the formula works for the benefit of all of the communities it serves nationally. Then it must address itself to some of the social questions that revenue sharing's critics are asking.

In this year of declining state support for local services, federal revenue sharing is especially important, for it helps fill the gap in meeting certain local needs.

It isn't a perfect program, but it should be renewed after Congress has diligently repaired these failings.

See you in summer?

Forsythia stands proud in her boldest color; lilac buds are pregnant with the season; everywhere the gray-brown of winter is yielding to green.

Ah, Spring! The season of renewal. The time for new life and for hope.

The time, also, when some unpleasant facts of life become more apparent.

Along with the buds, spring seems to bring out the nuts. Several parents have called The Herald to say their child had been approached by a stranger with a car.

We urge parents to take this opportunity to renew warnings against such individuals.

Spring also means more chances for children to get into trouble on their own. The first really warm day will see some kid, somewhere, out on a raft on one of the small lakes in the area, not following sound safety precautions, removed from help.

Last year several children drowned under such circumstances.

The season also brings longer days. Kids will be outside playing ball, flying kites, running in to streets at dusk. Drivers and parents should be alert to the increased chance of accidents.

Spring is a glorious time. Enjoy it gloriously.

But enjoy it prudently. We want you around to enjoy summer, too.

Formula affects our area

Sharing: complex matter

by KURT BAER
A news analysis

An intricate formula that only a computer can fully understand is used to determine the amount of federal revenue sharing the Northwest suburbs and 39,000 other U.S. communities receive each year.

The two most important factors are what the U.S. Treasury calls a community's "adjusted taxes" and its estimated per capita income.

A community's population and the amount of revenue sharing paid per capita throughout the state also sometimes enter into the government's calculations.

BUT THAT IS only the beginning, explains Dave Segal, Illinois' revenue sharing representative in Washington, D.C.

The computer compares the vital statistics for all the communities within Cook County, then matches Cook County with all other counties in the state, and finally looks at Illinois in light of the other 49 states before it coughs up the figures that eventually appear on the face of the checks the government sends out.

"That's why you have the computer to figure it all out. Any other way would take years," Segal said.

In general, revenue sharing is intended to give the most money to communities with low per capita incomes and high taxes, because "these two together indicate a town's willingness to help itself," he said.

IN THE CASE of the Northwest suburbs, above average taxes (considered a plus in the revenue sharing formula) are somewhat canceled out by high per capita incomes (a negative element in the formula).

"The formula is relative. You cannot sit down and figure out just one government's entitlement, or predict what a future entitlement will be," Segal said.

The following example points up some of the variables in the revenue sharing computation:

After 4½ years, Rolling Meadows, with an estimated population of 20,000, will have received a total of $834,595 in federal revenue sharing by June 30.

Elk Grove Village, whose estimated population is 25,000, will have received $1,440,521 in federal revenue sharing, 50 per cent more than Rolling Meadows.

A close look at the formula for 1975-76 shows that what the Treasury Department calls "adjusted taxes" — all non-education and non-transfer taxes — apparently account for the difference between the two towns.

ADJUSTED TAXES for Elk Grove Village are given as $3,431,847; while Rolling Meadows is $2,239,739. Per capita incomes of the two towns are relatively close: Elk Grove Village $4,447 and Rolling Meadows $4,762.

Apparently the revenue sharing formula is "rewarding" Elk Grove Village on the basis of its higher adjusted taxes.

Sales tax income makes up the bulk of Rolling Meadows' revenue. The city does not levy any local property tax.

"When the revenue sharing act was written, they were trying to base it on need," Segal said.

Various proposals are now before Congress to modify the program if it is to be extended beyond the present Dec. 31 expiration date. But it is unlikely, given the nature of Congressional programs, that the formula will emerge any more simple.

Cowards greet flu shot plan

"Have you read any good books lately?" has recently taken a back seat as the number one conversation starter. Since President Ford's proposal to inoculate everybody in the country against swine flu, all I hear is, "Are you gonna get the shot?"

I have been taking notes on the response and would send my findings to the President except since North Carolina I hate to add to his troubles. Analyzing comments I have heard leads me to suspect that I run with a pack of cowards, and never mind that it takes one to know one. I'll get a shot if you will.

"I will if you will" has been the most repeated response in my unofficial survey, my respondents probably figuring they're safe with anyone who's too chicken to get her ears pierced.

ONE OF MY MORE cowardly friends reasons that if everybody else in the country gets the flu shot she won't have to because there'll be nobody to catch the flu from. When I said, "What if everybody feels the way you do," she said, "Well, keep it under your hat, Bismouth, and nobody'll know I'm not getting the shot."

A nice old Jewish lady of my acquaintance said, "So ha on you, goy. I don't eat pork how could I catch the — you should excuse the expression — swine flu?"

A chicken lady at work says she'll get the shot provided it's scheduled for a Monday. She recalls the company program of free flu shots several years ago and everybody got shot on Friday so they could get sick from the reaction on their own time over the weekend.

Another acquaintance doesn't like the President's comment, "There's just going to be some sore arms for a few days." She's a bowler and says that if her arm is sore for the big tournament she's going to vote for Mickey Mouse in November.

CONVERSELY, another friend is happy to hear about "sore arms." She rides horses a lot.

The way I figure it, we have nothing to fear but fear itself — and the whole country getting sick before Congress gets around to acting on the President's request for money to finance the project.

No doubt Ford's proposal has been referred to a committee which has appointed a subcommittee. Of course, Congress will want to be sure that there's an even distribution of cowards and heroes, Republicans and Democrats, AMA friends and faith healers, bowlers and horseback riders, so it may take awhile.

Nevertheless I'd better be prepared for the fact that Ford's plan will probably be approved, and as an exercise in courage I will get my ears pierced. But not today.

'Wheeling mass transit lacks planning'

Trustee Kerr's recent remarks that village officials "have made every effort possible to continue bus service" here in Wheeling is subject to serious questioning. In designing the routes to be used by the bus was there an open town meeting here in Wheeling, where the public's input could be obtained? (No, a person had to travel to Glenview to express his/her opinion on the bus system for Wheeling, is what this person was told.) If the potential users' input was not sought, then was there an effort made by village officials to identify the major population centers within the village undertaken? Is the Village Hall a major population center — the schedule seems to indicate that it is one of the most important population centers in the village, even though there are very few residents living in that area? (Village officials, are we showing our egotism again?) Why is it so difficult to use the schedule to figure out how to go between the east side and west side of the village?

How is it that from noon to around 3:15 or so, the schedule has the bus in two places at the same time (for instance at 3:05 — Sunset/Manchester and 12th/Strong)? The part of the schedule beginning after the bus has completed its morning runs to Northbrook to where it begins its runs to Northbrook in the late afternoon is very confusing. Maybe two schedules should be set up; one for the Northbrook runs and the other for the internal village runs.

Why were the Wheeling Industrial and the Northbrook Industrial Area ignored completely in developing the routes for the bus?

Mass transportation is needed because it is going to cost this village's taxpayers more to maintain and repair roads than to support a mass transportation system that takes cars off the roads. Village officials have no right to claim that the public is not interested in a bus system particularly when it is apparent that not enough planning has gone into this village's mass transportation needs.

'Gazebo choice made with care'

I want to thank Joann T. Holderman for taking the time to express her views regarding the location of the gazebo to be constructed in downtown Mount Prospect.

Many considerations went into choosing this site. One concern was for the safety of the gazebo. Vandalism is an ever-present threat to all public and private buildings. Erecting the gazebo in a well-traveled, well-lit area will hopefully prevent vandalism and the high costs of repair.

A downtown or central location seemed to be the best for all the people of Mount Prospect.

Future redevelopment plans for downtown Mount Prospect will enhance the area surrounding the gazebo. Long-range redevelopment plans call for moving the gazebo to a grassier area in the downtown area, which is our "fancy of shady lawns and tree-edged town square."

I hope this reply will help to clarify our decision on the matter.

Ask Andy

Column relies on books, experts

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica of Science and the Future to Jack Stanton, 11, of Spokane, Wash., for his question:

HOW DOES ANDY FIND ANSWERS TO HIS QUESTIONS?

Andy is a pixie-type character who keeps out of sight. He claims to be around 5,000 years old, and most of that time he has been busy answering the questions of young persons. He enjoys his work very much and tries to explain things so that you will share his enjoyment. Naturally, he does his best to find accurate, up-to-the-minute answers, and sometimes this calls for a lot of help.

Every question in Andy's mailbag is interesting. But the most interesting ones, as a rule, are the hardest to answer. Andy's pen pals go to a lot of trouble to write down their questions — along with their names, ages and home addresses. And they do not go through all that effort if the answer can be found in the library, a schoolbook or from some printed material around the house.

As you may have guessed, Andy is a great one for reading. He regards this as a basic tool, and many of his best helpers are librarians. Many answers Andy gives result from hours spent in the library digging through many books, finding a fact here and another fact somewhere else. Finally, when enough information has been gathered, he sits down armed with oodles of bits and pieces and puts together an answer. Libraries are chock-full of fascinating information, and a helpful librarian is the key that will unlock its secrets.

Many questions require the knowledge and experience of an expert. So Andy sharpens his pencil and goes where the expert is. These experts do not work for Andy, but they are more than willing to share their knowledge with him. Before Andy goes anywhere, however, he reads up on the subject so that he can ask intelligent questions. Sometimes being able to ask the right questions makes Andy's job ever so much easier.

From Andy's typewriter to your newspapers is a long trip for an answer to make. Many people retype what Andy has written, and each time there is a chance for an error to creep in. Sometimes a "10" will appear as "100" in your daily paper, or perhaps "some" will mysteriously turn into "one." No one tries to make a mistake — but it does happen.

Sometimes Andy's face really turns red when he makes an error. Andy would never pass along false information, but let's face it, no one is perfect — not even a 5,000-year-old pixie. So if you spot even a tiny error, please let Andy know. If you have the correct facts, Andy will change his.

Not all of Andy's mailbag contains questions. Many pen pals write Andy just plain folksy letters. Some people send Andy interesting facts they have learned. And some people drop a line to let him know that something is amiss. No matter, Andy just loves all of you.

Andy sends a Student Globe to T. Minor, 10, of Medicine Hat, Alta., Canada, for the question:

WHY DOES THE NARWHAL HAVE A TUSK?

Just exactly why the male narwhal has a long ivory tusk is not known for certain. The narwhal is a small member of the whale family, and the only one with a gigantic, overgrown front tooth. This hollow, spiraled tooth is filled with spongy pulp and nerves, very similar to your teeth. Experts who have seen and studied this mammal offer several ideas concerning the purpose of this long extension from the left side of the head.

It is possible narwhals stun the food they enjoy — crustaceans, squid and cuttlefish. Or the males may use their tusks in play-fighting or during courtship. Since the adult tusks are usually worn at the tip, it is likely they stir up mud or sand with them. The tusks are rather brittle and would probably break off if used to poke hard substances, such as ice. In any event, the spearlike tusk is the narwhal's trademark, and he seems to know why he has it, even if we don't.

(Do you have a question to ASK ANDY? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to ASK ANDY in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 680, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries open to girls and boys 7 to 17.)

JUMBO EASTER EGG

Put this giant egg in the center of your Easter table! Tear lots of newspaper strips one-half inch by two inches. Tear paper towel strips the same size. Dip a newspaper strip in liquid laundry starch or a thin flour-water mixture. Lay on a balloon. Cover the balloon with overlapping newspaper strips.

Make a second layer with paper towel strips. Add a third layer with more newspaper strips. Let dry.

Smooth rough edges with sandpaper. Cut a jagged opening on one side. Take out the balloon. Paint the egg with tempera paint. When dry, fill with paper grass. Add a chick or bunny and jellybean eggs.

PROSPECT TWO-MILER Mark Smith shows the pain and the agony of a valiant attempt in the Mid-Suburban League meet at Buffalo Grove. The Knight sophomore led for much of the way but lost to defending league champion Darryl Robinson of Forest View.

Pitching, infield big question-marks in St. Louis outlook

(The following is another in a series of major league baseball sizeups.)

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (UPI) — Nothing would please St. Louis Cardinals Manager Red Schoendienst more than for his two rookie infielders, Keith Hernandez and Hector Cruz, to perform half as well as the Boston Red Sox rookie duo of Fred Lynn and Jim Rice did a year ago. Schoendienst would settle for 50 runs-batted-in apiece from Cruz and Hernandez.

"Our biggest question mark this year is our infield," conceded Schoendienst. "We are breaking in new people at all four infield spots and, of course, the two rookies are the keys."

In an effort to strengthen their left-handed pitching, the Cards made several offseason swaps.

They traded their everyday third baseman, Ken Reitz, to the San Francisco Giants for southpaw Pete Falcone. That opened up third base where Cruz, the minor league player of the year last season at Tulsa, is being given first shot. Cruz was an outfielder up until last year, but his manager at Tulsa, former Cardinal third base great Ken Boyer, thinks he can make the switch successfully.

Then, the Cards acquired shortstop Don Kessinger from the Chicago Cubs, allowing them to switch Mike Tyson from short to second. At first base will be Hernandez, who flopped in a trial last year but who still impresses the Cardinal brass with his hitting.

Otherwise, the Cardinals appear to be relatively deep. Lou Brock, Bake McBride and Reggie Smith will be the starting outfield and Willie Crawford, Luis Melendez and Mike Anderson are experienced reserves.

The pitching staff is also young and deep. Lynn McGlothen (15-13), Bob Forsch (15-10), John Denny (10-7) and Falcone (12-11) form the nucleus of what could be a formidable "big four" starting corps for years.

STRENGTHS: The best depth of perhaps any team in the National League, Ron Fairly (.301), plus all the reserve outfielders, make for a strong bench. Ted Simmons (.332) was best hitting catcher in baseball last year. Al (The Mad Hungarian) Hrabosky was majors' top reliever with 13 wins and 65 saves.

WEAKNESSES: The "unknowns" of an all new infield: A noticeable lack of power; not a great defensive club.

NEW FACES: Falcone gives club a needed lefty starter. Kessinger is a steady, if aging, hand at shortstop; Crawford adds depth in the outfield as does Bee Bee Richard, acquired from the White Sox. In the infield, Mike Anderson from the Phillies also will add bench strength.

OUTLOOK: If infield and pitching come through as hoped, Cards could sneak off and win it all in NL East. Otherwise, a third place finish behind the Phillies and Pirates in the division is more likely.

ST. LOUIS Cardinals' Don Kessinger, left, and Mike Tyson make some last-minute adjustments as they prepare for a spring training game. Kessinger came over to St. Louis from Chicago.

Hersey, Buffalo Grove top standings for Paddock Cup

Hersey High School, a three-time winner of the Paddock Cup, is back on top, but the race is far from over for 1975-76.

Hersey trailed in third place after the fall sports but stormed to the top with fine overall balance in the winter, according to the official rankings released today by The Herald.

The Huskie sports program combined for 44 total points in four winter sports to climb to first in the battle for the three-foot high trophy that annually is presented to the overall boys' sports champion in the Mid-Suburban League.

Hersey took three straight Cups from 1971 through 1974 before Arlington, a five-time winner, captured the 1974-75 prize. They are the only two schools ever to win the sports award.

Official rankings show that Hersey has compiled 72 points for seven varsity sports, a 10.3 average, and a slim lead over runnerup Buffalo Grove. The Bison program stands second with a 9.6 average for seven sports thanks to a spectacular winter campaign.

Buffalo Grove topped all Mid-Suburban schools in the winter with 45.5 total points in four sports. Hersey was second with 44 and Elk Grove third with 43.5.

Points are awarded in relation to a school's finish in each Mid-Suburban varsity sport. The total points then are divided by the actual number of sports in which a school participates, making swimming a part of the overall picture.

Dist. 214 schools made their move in the winter after Dist. 211 entries occupied two of the top four spots in the fall. Palatine was the fall leader with an 11.7 average but the Pirates now stand seventh at 7.1.

Hersey picked up one varsity championship in the winter in wrestling but scored well in the three other sports to jump from third to first.

Buffalo Grove featured the basketball championship and nine or more points in the three other sports, and Prospect High School, now third overall, remained in contention with solid gymnastics and swimming performances.

Arlington High School, the defending Cup champion, used a league title in swimming to move from fifth in the fall to fourth overall. Elk Grove now is fifth after an exceptional winter, a jump all the way from 12th in the fall.

Hoffman Estates, of Dist. 211, the newest school in the area, is making a strong showing with a 7.2 average and sixth place overall.

Girls launch outdoor track season

by PAUL LOGAN

Eight Mid-Suburban League girls' track and field teams will open their dual seasons today at three sites. The matchups are as follows:

Conant and Arlington at Rolling Meadows (10 a.m.), Fremd and Schaumburg at Prospect (1 p.m.) and Hoffman Estates at Wheeling (10 a.m.).

Because of college testing, two other MSL hosted meets were held earlier this week.

Defending co-champions Wheeling and Rolling Meadows are expected to be among the leaders again on the strength of their large numbers of returning veterans.

Wheeling, which won the MSL meet to earn a share of the over-all title with Meadows (the dual portion counts half toward the final standings), only lost one star to graduation. Karen Ferrara, last year's only senior, won both the long jump and the 880 relay. She also was a member on the mile relay team.

"It will be hard to make up for Ferrara," said Wheeling coach Donna Dubbele. However, Dubbele said her team could possibly have more depth with the influx of new Sophomore and freshman talent to go with a host of returning talent.

Junior Gail Miloch will specialize in the 880 and mile runs again. She won both in record time in the conference meet last season. She made the finals at the state meet in 1975 and "I'd like to see her get points in the state," said Dubbele, who's hoping to see Wheeling score in the finals for the first time.

Other big Wildcat point-getters figure to be junior Bonnie Buenow (440 and two relays), sophomore Sandy Rainey (high jump and two relays), sophomore Mary Galow (100 and long jump) and senior Denise Czarny (two mile).

Rolling Meadows only lost two of its Mustang team to graduation — Sue Harper and Maureen Stoll. Stoll was a very big loss, however, because she won the discus in 1975 and was second in the shot put to state champion Mary Ann Johnson of Conant.

Still, new head coach Joy Bundy (she was an assistant last year) is optimistic. "We should have more depth this year," said Bundy. "Some good freshmen came out. Especially four of them. I think we have a really strong freshman class."

Bundy said she figured to have over 50 athletes when the season starts — an increase of about 15 over last year. A fine mix of other underclassman talent along with some steady seniors should help Meadows remain strong this spring.

Senior Chris Gallis made the semifinals at state last season in the 50 (no longer an event) and 100 dash events. She won the MSL 100 and was second in the 50. Gallis also is on the 440 and 880 medley relays.

Her twin sister Connie will be running in the 220 the 880 relay and the 880 medley relay. Another senior — Charmaine Anderson — will be competing in the 880 and the 880 medley.

Junior Barb Nelson will go in the 220 as well as the two 880 relays.

Hoffman Estates will be led by Laura Buddenbaum, who won the 110 low hurdles in record time (15.15) and also took the 80 hurdles (11.2) in the '75 MSL meet.

Besides Johnson, who will be trying for a third straight state title in the shot, Bev Bidlo is also a defending MSL champ. However, her event — the 50 dash — doesn't exist anymore.

Forest View's Karen Terp won the high jump at the MSL meet. Forest View was the only area team to win a district title in '75.

Schaumburg's Leticia Rodriguez won the two-mile run in the '75 conference meet as a sophomore.

One familiar name will be missing in the MSL meets — Trudi Rebsamen. The perennial state champ graduated, leaving the specialties she dominated over the years in the conference meet up for grabs.

The 880 medley relay will be a new event, replacing the 50 yard dash. League records are in scorebook.

Six-part series starts Monday

Oakland trades Reggie and Ken

The Oakland A's Friday night traded superstars Reggie Jackson and Ken Holtzman to the Baltimore Orioles for outfielder Don Baylor along with pitchers Mike Torrez and Paul Mitchell.

The announcement was made in a telephone news conference by A's owner Charles O. Finley who said, "I feel this will lead us to another world championship."

Finley said the A's also gave the Orioles pitcher Will Van Bommel, who has been with the A's farm system since 1971.

Jackson, a hard-swinging outfielder, and lefthanded hurler Holtzman have been at odds with the owner over their contracts. Finley, asked whether there were hard feelings over the trade, said: "None whatsoever."

Monday comes to terms

Centerfielder Rick Monday has come to terms with the Chicago Cubs at a "large increase" in salary, the club announced Friday. Monday signed a one-year contract, terms of which were not announced.

Still unsigned from the regulars of last year's squad were pitchers Steve Stone and Tom Dettore, catcher Tim Hosley and first baseman Andre Thornton.

The club also cut five pitchers from the roster: left-handers Jim Kremmel, Buddy Schulz and Willie Prall, and right-handers Dennis Lamp and Mike Arukow. Mike Adams, a non-roster player still is in camp, so that the Cubs have six more to cut before getting to the season limit of 25.

Cubs fall to Brewers, 7-4

The Milwaukee Brewers scored six runs, three on a homer by Sixto Lezcano, in the fifth inning Friday to beat the Chicago Cubs 7-4 in an exhibition game.

Lezcano's homer, which started the scoring spree, was the second homer of the game for the Brewers. Bobby Darwin hit a home run in the second inning.

The Brewers also got four good innings of relief pitching from Eduardo Rodriguez, who rescued Pete Broberg in the sixth inning. Rodriguez allowed only two hits — one a homer by John Summers — and struck out four batters.

The Brewers were trailing 3-1 in the fifth inning when Lezcano followed Darrell Porter and Darwin, who got on with singles.

Milwaukee scored two more runs on singles by Charlie Moore and Don Money. Chicago's infield was charged with an error on Money's single. The final run came home on a fielder's choice by George Scott.

Sox tip Reds, 5-1

The Chicago White Sox capitalized on three Cincinnati errors for four unearned runs Friday on the way to a 5-1 victory over the Reds.

The Sox broke on top in the first when Ralph Garr tripled and scored on an infield out. They added one in the second on singles by Brian Downing and Jack Brohamer, plus shortstop Doug Flynn's error.

Chicago scored two more in the third on singles by Jorge Orta, Cleon Jones and Nyls Nyman, combined with second baseman Joe Morgan's miscue.

The Reds' lone run came in the fifth on Pete Rose's single and Ken Griffey's triple. The Sox closed out the scoring in the seventh on singles by Bucky Dent and Garr plus an error by centerfielder Joel Youngblood.

Pete Vuckovich worked the first three innings for the winners and allowed only one hit.

Bulls lose eighth in row

Spencer Haywood scored 17 of his 19 points in the second half to lead the New York Knicks to a 110-95 victory over the Chicago Bulls Friday night.

It was Chicago's eighth straight defeat.

The Knicks held a 58-54 lead at halftime, but outscored Chicago 29-19 in the third quarter with Haywood getting nine of his points and Earl Monroe getting eight.

Their next biggest lead was 81-66 with 2:45 remaining in the third quarter and they went on to an 87-73 lead going into the final period.

Chicago closed to within 96-90 on a basket by Bobby Wilson with 4:04 remaining. But New York went on to outscore Chicago 14-5 the rest of the way.

Game scoring honors went to Chicago's Mickey Johnson with 20 points.

The Bulls also lost the coin flip to decide who will draft first in the college draft. Atlanta will draft first and the Bulls second.

Jury rules against Kapp

A federal court jury ruled Friday night against former National Football League quarterback Joe Kapp, who claimed he was black-listed in 1971.

The six-member panel deliberated only six hours before returning its verdict before U.S. District Judge William T. Sweigert. The jury said Kapp was not entitled to any damages.

"I am disappointed, of course," Kapp, 38, told reporters.

Sweigert had instructed the jury that, although the NFL constitution and bylaws include illegal restraint of trade, Kapp was not necessarily damaged.

Douglass traded to Saints

The New Orleans Saints Friday traded linebacker Rick Middleton to San Diego for veteran quarterback Bobby Douglass and a third-round draft choice.

Douglass, an all-America at the University of Kansas, had completed 375 of 992 passes for 4,898 yards and 30 touchdowns in his seven-year professional career. He was traded to San Diego last year.

Douglass set a National Football League record for most yards gained rushing by a quarterback in a single season in 1972 when he scampered 968 yards for the Chicago Bears. He has carried 378 times for 2,478 yards and 19 touchdowns.

Zikes slips to second

Marshal Holmen charged from 17th place to first Friday in the fourth round of competition in the $80,000 Miller Open bowling tournament.

Holmen, of Medford, Ore., held a 60 pin edge over Les Zikes, Palatine, Ill., after 34 games. He had a total pinfall of 7,764 on 7,479 actual pins, a 219 average, and 285 bonus sticks for his 9-6-1 match play record. Zikes was at 7,696.

BIG STRIDER DAVE Koelper of Hersey puts something extra into his second-place triple jump of 42-4 at Mid-Suburban indoor track meet at Buffalo Grove. Koelper's jump was a career-best, helping Hersey to 25 points and seventh place in the meet.

Boston Red Sox ready for repeat

(The following is another in a series of major league baseball sizeups.)

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) — A year ago, Boston Red Sox manager Darrell Johnson faced the prospect of having to figure out a way to beat the Baltimore Orioles and New York Yankees — both of which were considered to be the most improved teams in baseball.

As history tells us, however, Johnson came up with two pretty fair answers to the Yankees' acquisition of Calfish Hunter and the Orioles' pickup of Lee May and Ken Singleton. Nobody, it seemed, had figured on the Red Sox unveiling two rookies like Fred Lynn and Jim Rice.

This spring, Darrell Johnson's biggest concern is whether or not to carry three designated hitters or an extra utility infielder. Such are the pleasant problems of a defending league champion.

"We have three designated hitters," says Johnson. "And naturally, I'd like to keep all three, but we also want to get a good look at Steve Dillard who could make the team as a utility infielder."

Otherwise, the Red Sox will be basically the same club that captured the American League East by 4½ games over Baltimore last year. The biggest splash of news in the camp has been the holdout of Lynn, last season's rookie of the year and most valuable player awards with a .331 average, 21 homers and 105 RBI.

About the only questions facing the Red Sox are the advancing ages of first baseman Carl Yastrzemski (36) and third baseman Rico Petrocelli (32). Neither showed any noticeable signs of slowing down during the World Series last year.

STRENGTHS: Lynn, Rice (.309, 22 HR, 102 RBI) and Dwight Evans make up perhaps the best all-around outfield in baseball; Carlton Fisk the No. 1 catcher in AL; Rick Burleson a superb defensive shortstop.

WEAKNESSES: Starting pitching could be a problem if Luis Tiant and newly-acquired Ferguson Jenkins suddenly show their ages. Likewise, the age at the corners, Yastrzemski and Petrocelli could unexpectedly pose a problem.

NEW FACES: Jenkins (17-18, 3.93 ERA) comes over from Texas to bolster the starting pitching; Tom House (7-7, 3.19 ERA) was acquired from Atlanta Braves as bullpen insurance; Rookie right-hander Don Aase will likely be brought up after first month of season to be fifth starter; Rookie Steve Dillard and free agent pickup Gene Michael vying for utility infielder vacancy.

OUTLOOK: No reason to assume Red Sox won't repeat as Eastern Division and even American League champions.

Cleanup, canoe marathon slated for Des Plaines

A weekend on the Des Plaines River won't rival a white water run down the Colorado in a rubber raft.

But many pollution-conscious and canoe-race enthusiasts will thrust the Des Plaines River into the limelight Saturday, May 22 and Sunday, May 23.

The Saturday date has been designated as Des Plaines River Cleanup

"The purpose of the cleanup is not just beautification," Gary Erickson, fishery biologist in Spring Grove, said.

"Garbage recycling and education of the public are important as well. Rivers are Illinois' major aquatic resource, but are often valued far less than our lakes."

The Des Plaines has long been a subject of talk and dreams, but the potential fishing, boating and camping paradise still remains a murky, polluted and virtually useless tributary.

The major fish populations present are undesirable roughfish — carp and suckers — scavengers that feed off the bottom and offer a very limited food source.

Scouting, church, school, environmental, sporting and service organizations were all being sought for help in the cleanup.

Canoe trips are planned for each of the four segments prior to the cleanup to identify particularly littered or troublesome areas.

The cleanup of the Des Plaines will coincide perfectly with the popular Des Plaines Canoe Marathon slated for Sunday, May 23.

The 19th annual event, which traditionally lures the maximum 1,000 canoes and kayaks, extends 20 miles from Libertyville to Dam No. 2 in Des Plaines.

DES PLAINE WHITE WATER. The several dams constructed along the Des Plaines River makes the tributary inviting to outdoor noe Marathon to be launched May 23. 4 col cap

Smelt 'officially' running

by JIM COOK
Outdoor Editor

The Lake Michigan smelt season officially opened Thursday night on Chicago Park District property, but some anglers admitted that dipnetting opening night was less successful than the night before.

"A lot of us went out Wednesday and did quite well," one smelter said. "If it's a question of jumping the gun, I guess we were guilty, but the smelt are running and we couldn't pass up the good weather we had Wednesday night."

The Chicago Park District has always designated a "smelt season" that normally begins April 1 and extends for approximately 40 days.

Although it says the opening date is tentative, based on weather conditions, the decision to move the start back is rarely publicized.

The unseasonably warm weather, that has prematurely pushed the spawning smelt out of the starting blocks, provided ideal conditions for pre-season fishermen Wednesday night.

"We took about 50-60 pounds

Wednesday night from Montrose Harbor," the dipnetter continued. "It was only fair to good Thursday night because it was so cold and the lake was much rougher. It was tough to hold the nets."

Montrose Harbor has been a favorite spot for smelters. The ample parking, presence of a bait shop and spacious fishing area appeal to hundreds of anglers.

Nets are lowered inside the harbor, along the piers at the mouth of the harbor, on the wall leading to the horseshoe pier and on the horseshoe pier itself when lake conditions permit.

The smelt are definitely on the move and if the weather remains warm and dry, the intensity of the runs could increase.

The prime smelt run normally lasts no longer than 7-10 days. During the heat of the action, it's not uncommon to fill five-gallon drums with the tasty smelt in a few hours.

Alewives, those pesky varminths that littered our beaches in the millions a few years back, will signal the end of the smelt run by appearing in the gill nets.

Slab-sized trophies are loners

Crappie anglers hit beds

by VIC WATIA

A few years ago, while I was plugging a Minnesota Lake for bass, a three-pound crappie smashed a red-and-white bassplug it couldn't hope to swallow. Since then, the incident has occurred several times on lakes in Illinois, Kentucky and Texas.

Despite the geographical differences, these crappie had a few things in common.

All were caught in deep water, smashed a lure they couldn't hope to swallow, and all appeared to be loners.

The fact the fish were loners was verified by anchoring the boat in the areas the fish struck and fishing with tiny crappie jigs, spinners and live minnows, which are more appropriate baits for crappie. But each effort failed to produce further results.

Most anglers will agree when you catch one crappie — also called "specks," "Calicos," "speckled perch," and a variety of other names — others usually can be found in the same area.

But trophy-sized crappie often become loners in deep water hangouts.

However, the angler can improve his odds for taking the slab-sized crappie, especially by concentrating on the spawning season.

During the spawning season, which can run from May to June depending on the area, the smaller males will move in the shallows first to begin fanning beds. Sometimes they arrive weeks in advance of the bigger females.

The trick is for the angler to locate the males on the beds. Once the bedding males are found, the fisherman can seek out deep water nearby, and chances are he'll find the bigger female crappies waiting to move in.

To find beds, the angler should look in water from about three to 10 feet deep. Coves which have sandy or rocky bottoms and good underwater structure, such as brush piles or standing timber, are likely areas for crappie beds.

Each bedding female lays from about 10,000 to 20,000 eggs, so there's no need to worry about eliminating the crappie population by taking spawning females.

Small minnows are the preferred live bait for crappie, and productive lures run in the 1/32 to 1/4 ounce size. Plastic-bodied white and yellow safety-pin type spinners and jigs dressed with a small piece of pork rind or a short section of plastic worm can be good crappie producers.

Some crappie anglers prefer 8-10 pound test line because they can pull lures free from the underwater brush and timber that crappies prefer as a hangout, but ultralight lines and buggy whip rods can add to the enjoyment of this sport.

A depth finder can be a useful addition to a boat for finding deep water hiding places, but on popular crappie lakes all the angler has to do is look for a congregation of boats.

Chances are, they're sitting on top of a productive crappie hole.

Trading of stocks sluggish; Dow Jones off 2.52 points

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices finished little changed Friday in sluggish trading on the New York Stock Exchange. Investors generally ignored favorable economic news by staying on the sidelines most of the day.

Some late short-covering — replacing borrowed shares sold earlier — trimmed earlier losses as a few blue-chip investors settled accounts prior to the weekend.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 5.35-point loser Thursday, lost another 2.52 points to 991.58. The blue-chip average had been off around seven points at one time. For the week, the Dow lost 11.88 points.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 0.01 to 102.25. The NYSE common stock index finished unchanged at 54.54. There was no change in the price of an NYSE common share.

DECLINES TOPPED advances, 750 to 850, among the 1,856 issues crossing the tape. The 458 issues unchanged issues demonstrated investor uncertainty about the course of the market.

The volume of 17,420,000 shares was down from the 17,910,000 traded

Thursday. Analysts said the lack of volume demonstrated there was neither heavy selling pressure nor buying interest.

Analysts noted some concern about the effect of nationwide teamsters' strike on the economy. President Ford said he was "optimistic" the strike would be settled without White House intervention.

Prices closed mixed in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased by two cents. But declines topped advances, 347 to 292, among the 940 issues crossing the tape. Volume totaled 3,110,000 shares, compared with 2,690,000 traded Thursday.

Ford asked to reconsider

U. S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, has asked Pres. Gerald Ford to reconsider his decision not to name the Chicago suburbs a federal disaster area following the March 12 tornado.

Mikva said the tornado did approximately $60 million damage to the suburbs, including about $2 million in the 10th District. Ford's decision not to declare the area a disaster area means residents are not eligible for federal help through the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, he said.

The Small Business Administration has made special loans available to the suburbs hit by the tornado, an action separate from Ford's information on loans is available from the SBA or Mikva's office.

The house lights dimmed and the crowd hushed as the Mighty Wurlitzer rose from the orchestra pit.

The massive theater organ was an impressive sight for theatergoers during the early part of the century. Many adults have fond memories about the fun and thrill of hearing the organ played with the strength of a full orchestra.

Today those adults and their children can relive those memories thanks to a group of theater organ enthusiasts who are making sure the excitement of those days are not lost forever.

The Chicago Area Theatre Organ Enthusiasts is part of a national organization that promotes the restoration and preservation of the theater organ and its unique brand of music.

The members have restored about a dozen organs in the Chicago area, including ones at the Pickwick and Deerpath movie houses in Park Ridge and Lake Forest.

Currently they are restoring an organ that was originally used at the Indiana Theatre in East Chicago for the Maine North High School auditorium in Des Plaines.

The restoration process is no small task with each of the thousands of parts needing individual attention and renovation.

But the members don't look on the hours of toil and trouble as a burden. For them it's a hobby that later reaps its rewards as they sit back and listen to the organ in full sound or sit at the console and play it themselves.

"We are trying to preserve a heritage that could be lost," said Russell Josephs, president of the organization.

He said the members are no different than antique car buffs who spend hours restoring automobiles of years gone by. He said organ buffs "saw a need with a worthy cause and banded together." The Chicago chapter formed in 1967 and today has more than 300 members from the metropolitan area, including many members from the Northwest suburbs.

Members are young and old and from all walks of life. Many of them joined the group because of fond memories of theater palace organ music.

That's where the American heritage ties in, said Josephs. Although the theater organ was invented by Hope Jones, an Englishman, it is looked upon as an American phenomenon because this country gave the organ its push to stardom.

The theater palaces of the early 20th century and the silent film era put the pipe organ, or the Mighty Wurlitzer of many a child's dreams, into the limelight.

"They first appeared in the theater with the stage drama and vaudeville," said Josephs. "With the silent movies theater organs made their big impact and became a major part of the theater program."

"The theaters started with small orchestras in the pit to bring the movies alive," he said. "The main purpose was to create a mood."

The price of an orchestra soon was beyond the budget of the small movie theaters, but theater owners still wanted music that had more impact and drama than a piano could provide.

The theater organ, or "unit orchestra" as many followers prefer to call it, filled the bill. It could be purchased at a reasonable price, was played by one person and had every sound effect imaginable.

Hookups for bird calls, whistles and doorbell buzzers were all within reach on the organ console. The organist could be the violin section, flutists and percussionist at the same time.

The organist was the orchestra.

The demise of the silent film era brought the death toll for the theater organ. As local theaters were being equipped to handle the crowds of the sound flicks, theater organs were abandoned and became dilapidated from years of neglect.

The mold was dusted off many of these organs starting about 15 years ago as the group and its fellow members in the American Theater Organ Society started taking action for their cause.

The man could have been walking aimlessly. There are many like him in the big cities, men who study streets by night, walking one concrete block after another. He wore a hat and the man's right arm was stuffed deep inside a wrinkled pants pocket.

Perhaps the sign attracted his notice. "Midget CLUB." What could that mean, he might have wondered. The man bent over, peered inside for a moment, then glanced at three people who walked behind him.

Not this Friday night. The man continued walking one concrete block after another. It was entirely possible that he would never give this place another thought.

This was 63rd Street and Pulaski Road at night, the heart of old Chicago. They don't even call it Pulaski further north. Lincolnwood has its Crawford Avenue. On the southside, they call it Pulaski, a good road with heritage.

Parnell and Mary Ellen St. Aubin both left behind the old neighborhood for periods during their lives. There was show business travel away from home. But when the time had come to settle down, a person went back where he had roots.

You came home to the old neighborhood, even if it didn't look exactly the same. If you had a few extra bucks, there might be the chance to start a business.

That's the gamble Parnell St. Aubin took more than three decades ago. Two site changes later, his Midget Club is alive and thriving because the people are nice. You can always walk inside and find a friend. Or someone who would be a friend. That's how Parnell wants his place.

They are not crowded this particular Friday evening. Few people have taken tables. The shortened counter is more full than not, however, with patrons hunched over, taking down a drink, pulling on a cigarette.

Parnell serves equal portions of conversation, friendship and liquor. Mixed drinks get their ice last. At nearly all other taverns, ice goes in first. Then liquor fills the cracks. Parnell just pours away. Mary Ellen still uses a jigger.

Some new customers might come in warily, perhaps expecting to discover that the Midget Club caters only to midgets. But only Parnell and Mary Ellen are midgets.

Or as Mary Ellen prefers, they are "little people." You hardly seem to notice after a few moments. They are just very good people who run the old neighborhood tavern.

Parnell moved in short, hurried steps behind his tavern counter, as any bartender might on Friday evening, the drinking man's night out.

Mary Ellen, his bride since April 3, 1948, after a five-month whirlwind romance, greeted her new customers with a smile.

"Parnell," she said, "here is the man you're going to talk with."

Parnell strolled quickly down the aisle from behind his tavern counter and reached up to shake hands. "Go ahead and sit down," he said. "I'll be right with you."

Parnell did an about-face and returned to serve more drinks, heavy on liquor, light on ice. He must hold the big liquor bottles with both hands and customers open new bottles when the old have run dry.

These patrons sitting at his counter are middle-aged men who've very likely gotten off work and need a few hours to relax and forget the week.

Only a few women are gathered inside the tavern. They've come with husbands or boyfriends. A few patrons bring flat packages wrapped in paper. This is pizza from the shop next door.

The Rock-Ola jukebox beats out tunes. But only when someone bothers to stuff quarters through the little slot.

Off and on, Parnell and Mary Ellen receive new visitors who carry notebooks and ask many questions. That still baffles Mary Ellen.

"Everybody tries to interview us and there's really not that much," she said. "What is there? You just meet us. Some people have big stories and some don't."

Their story, however, is better than most.

If you're patient, Parnell will sift through all the stories a man accumulates in 54 years. It is natural that Parnell would talk about his family.

Parnell was the second of Albert and Emma St. Aubin's seven children. The family lived on Rockwell Street until Parnell was three years old. Then they moved further south down near 84th Street and St. Lawrence.

"Dad's still living. Mother died seven years ago," Parnell said, dragging a cigaret across his lips. "I'm the only small one in the family. The rest are big. My wife's family is the same way."

Albert St. Aubin worked laying brick. "He spent 52 years in the union," Parnell said proudly. "He had a golden card the last two years. Albert will be 81 years old in June. He is dying from cancer."

Parnell's fling with show business was much briefer than Mary Ellen's 15-year career in vaudeville, circus and nightclub work. Mary Ellen started when she was 12 years old by joining Ike Rose's midget troupe.

They gave Parnell billing as the "World's Smallest Man" in the 1933 Chicago World's Fair. "I was supposed to be 22 years old," said Parnell. "I was really just 10. All those shows are phony."

Parnell was 27 inches tall then. He stands 3 feet, 8 inches tall now, one inch shorter than Mary Ellen who laughs that she hasn't grown in the last 20 years.

Five years after the 1933 World's Fair, Parnell went west to portray a munchkin in "Wizard of Oz," the timeless film which immortalized Toto, the wonder dog.

Filming began in October, 1938, and continued for more than five months. "The work, I'll never do it again," said Parnell. Make-up lasted three hours each morning. "To eat, you had to rip your moustache off," he said. "Took another hour to get it back on."

Cast members never saw much of Judy Garland, an American sweetheart who began her journey to professional fame and personal tragedy by traveling the yellow brick road.

"She was 16 years old, the same age as I," said Parnell. "Never knew what she went through. I only saw her on the set."

Parnell graduated from Calumet High School in 1941. He took work for a bread company but that job dissolved in a few months when World War II began.

For the next three and one-half years, Parnell drilled holes into wing de-icer units on an aircraft assembly line in Chicago.

"It was a good job. I averaged almost $9 per hour," said Parnell. "That was the highest priced work in the United States."

The first Midget Club surfaced in 1944 but lasted only two years until Parnell sold out. "I didn't like the business," he said.

He laid off for awhile, then opened a second Midget Club at 63rd Street and Kedzie Avenue in late 1947. That tavern remained open for 10 years. He has been in business at 63rd and Pulaski since 1959.

This will be the last Midget Club. "No more taverns," said Parnell.

Parnell had been open just a few months with his second tavern when he became acquainted with Mary Ellen Burbach. She was dancing with a midget troupe during the Christmas rush in a department store.

Mary Ellen traveled down 15 years of show business roads to reach that department store. It began one day when her mother approached Ike Rose and asked whether he needed another midget for his troupe of dancers.

She was only 8 years old then. At 12, Mary Ellen joined up. She hit the road, the youngest of Ike Rose's dancers by many, many years.

From vaudeville to circuses, from nightclubs to veteran's and children's hospitals, Mary Ellen danced and danced and danced.

Mary Ellen didn't stick with Ike Rose all that time. She danced for Henry Kramer and Nat Eagle, too. "Where the best salary is, you keep going," Mary Ellen said.

It was the heyday of live show business. Chicago boasted fine vaudeville. There were so many fine theaters, the Palace, State and Lake, Chicago, Oriental and more. But vaudeville began to disappear around 1940.

When the Big War hit, Mary Ellen located on the West Coast, dancing in hospitals and military camps. She worked nightclubs, too. That's what she always liked best. "You're close to the people," she said.

They were 15 good years. "But it gets to the point where you want to settle down," said Mary Ellen. So when Parnell St. Aubin asked whether she would work for his Midget Club, Mary Ellen thought it was a fine idea.

Mary Ellen came to the club in November, 1947. Three months later, they were engaged. On April 3 that year, the couple became Mr. and Mrs. Parnell St. Aubin.

They never had any children. So much of their life has been wrapped into the Midget Club. Parnell and Mary Ellen do not seem the type who'd ask for special favors, just because they are little people.

Their doors swing open every afternoon at 4 p.m. Closing time is 2 a.m. weekdays, an hour later on Saturdays. There's a sign out front which says, "Closed on Sun."

It's hard work running a good tavern. "She does the housekeeping, the bookwork. I do everything else," said Parnell. "I'm the only one with a key to the door. That's how I make money."

Mary Ellen won't let anyone sit down at a dirty counter. "I just like to clean our bar for you," she said in a flurry of wiping. "This is our regular procedure. Nobody sits down until we clean the bar."

As Parnell said, "Got to have a fast cloth. That's how you make money."

It's changed a bit over the years. Parnell thinks he might be ready to hang up that last beer mug in three or four years.

"I had my own clientele, but a lot of them are gone now," said Parnell. "They moved out." Parnell looked down his long counter and allowed that he knew about half these patrons. "Later on tonight," he said, "I won't know any of them."

Three or four more years. That's what Parnell said he might want from the tavern business. And there would be no fourth Midget Club.

So then everyone will remember them as two very nice people who ran a fine neighborhood tavern.

That's what they should remember, anyhow. Parnell and Mary Ellen St. Aubin long ago proved it does not make any difference being a midget.

As Ed Pekala said over his beer, "If you're small, you can still be big. It's what you've got in the brain and heart that counts."

Parnell and Mary Ellen knew that long ago.

Pipe organs:

preserve the theater organs is because they had such a short life span," said Josephs. The hey day of the theater organ only lasted about 10 years.

The society retraced the plight of the theater organs produced during that short period of time. Today there is a book with a listing of each theater organ and its current location or last place sighted.

One of the objects of the theater organ society is to restore organs for theaters or auditoriums where they can be used to their fullest. Many organs have been relocated in churches or pizza parlors — a placement many members equate with the death penalty for the pipe organ.

The acoustics in a church or small restaurant are "all wrong," they say and the organ's potential is stifled.

To really appreciate the sound and glory of a pipe organ, it must be in a large enough location so all the stops can be pulled out and the music can literally envelope the listener.

The organ enthusiasts welcomed the opportunity to renovate an organ for the Maine North auditorium because the large room provided the proper acoustics.

Jack Oleander, music teacher at the school and organ enthusiast, realized the possibility when the auditorium stage was still on the drawing boards. Oleander took his case to the High School Dist. 207 school board and received its blessings to modify the auditorium plans to accommodate the three-manual organ.

The special provisions included two chamber rooms for the pipes, a room for the pump that pushes the air through the organ and makes it work and a room for the organ and a platform to let it swing out into the auditorium.

Before moving a single piece of the organ, members had to take the organ apart piece by piece and number each part so they could reassemble it exactly as it was.

Major work had to be done on the organ because it was left to wreck and ruin in the old theater. Only a piece of plastic had protected the organ from a leaky ceiling and the dust and dirt of East Chicago.

"You wouldn't believe the dirt we found in this organ," said John Peters of Wheeling, crew chief. "It was even rained upon so we had to replace complete parts."

Crew members meet every Thursday night at the school to work on their masterpiece, and they hope to complete it for the 1977 American Theater Organ Society in Chicago.

The task is momentous. It includes stripping most of the wooden pieces of the organ and refinishing them. Felt pads must be replaced and 6,000 leather pouches must be made for the inner workings of the organ. Once the parts are refinished, they also must be reconstructed into a working organ.

While the task seems one for professional musicians or organ makers, members insist it is as easy as A-B-C once the work gets going.

"It really doesn't take that much background once you get started," Peters said. "It's just duplication and common sense. It's not as difficult as it seems."

Although organ restoration is a primary function of the group, its members also mix fun with their work.

Those that have the urge to play the organ are welcome to use most of the organs they have restored during hours that do not disturb the regular business at the organ's location.

Josephs said it is not unusual to see members knocking at the doors of the theaters after the last show is out to get a chance at the console.

Concerts and other social functions are regularly scheduled. May 17 the organization will sponsor an organ concert to movies of Harold Lloyd and Buster Keaton at the Deerpath theater in Lake Forest. On June 14 the pipe organ at the Coronado Theatre in Rockford will provide the background for Rudolph Valentino's film classic, "The Eagle."

And Chicago Area Theater Organ Enthusiasts keep on working. "I think what motivates these people is their love for organs," said Treasurer Ione Tedei. "And these are their very own."

Organ buffs say restoration is not as difficult as it looks.

See sports cars, racing films April 8-11 at Woodfield Mall

The Chicagoland Sports Car Club will exhibit its winning models April 8 through 11 at Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg.

A free race staff seminar is scheduled for those who would like to participate in the workings of a sports car race. A session at 8 p.m. Friday and another at 3 p.m. April 10 is scheduled in the Schaumburg Room on the upper level of the mall. It will cover the positions of flagpersons, timers and scores, pit marshals and registrars.

Racing films will be shown continuously during the exhibit. The 1976 Midwestern Council Racing Schedule will be available with diagrams of the tracks and directions to reach them. A club booth will offer membership applications.

At 1 p.m. April 10 "Best of Show" trophies will be awarded. The competition includes four categories: Mass produced sports cars ranging from Corvettes toSprites; sports racing cars that are nearly unlimited in design and compete according to engine size; sedan, mass-produced sedans from Mustangs and Camaros to Fiats and Renaults; and formula, pure racing cars.

About one third of the club members have competition licenses and have raced at such tracks as the Indianapolis Raceway and Daytona. The club also sponsors rallies and gymkhankas.

Library to feature Chinese tapestries

"China in Needlepoint," an exhibit of tapestries from the People's Republic of China, opens Thursday at the Chicago Public Library Cultural Center, Michigan Avenue and Washington Street.

Admission is free to the exhibit which continues through May 1.

Depicting landscapes of China, the exhibit provides portraits of the country in near-photographic realism. Several silk embroidery pieces are included in the show as examples of an almost-lost art. The needlework shows a delicacy and color gradations seldom seen in the U.S.

The tapestries depict nature scenes — mountains, lakes and waterfalls — as well as landmarks of a country's history. Portraits of pavilions and China's Great Wall are also featured.

Shedd Aquarium hosts Career Day April 10

Have you ever wondered how you become another Jacques Cousteau?

Envelope honors FDR

The Franklin D. Roosevelt (FDR) Philatelic Society will mark the anniversary of the death of the former President with a commemorative cacheted envelope.

Roosevelt died of a stroke April 12, 1945 at Warm Springs, Ga. where the cover will be canceled on the anniversary date.

The unfinished portrait by artist Elizabeth Shoumatoff dominates the black bordered cover which will be franked with the 6-cent Prominent American Roosevelt single (Scott No. 1284) and the 2-cent and 5-cent singles in the Roosevelt Memorial series (Scott Nos. 931 and 933).

Covers are available for $1 each from "The FDR Philatelic Society, Box 150-E, Clinton Corners, NY 12514." Please enclose a self-addressed, stamped, long envelope for their return.

Stamp notes

by Bernadine M. Rechner

A new booklet of 13-cent Liberty Bell stamps was placed on sale yesterday at Liberty, Missouri.

Designed primarily for vending machine use, the booklet contains two panes of five stamps each and will sell for $1.30.

There were no first day ceremonies but first day cancellations are available through April 16 from "Liberty Bell Booklet, Postmaster, Liberty, Missouri 64068." Only full panes of five stamps will be serviced, requiring a remittance of 65-cents per pane to be affixed. Remittances should be by check or money order and return addresses should be written low and well to the left of your cover.

The booklets will be available from the "Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265" but there is a 50-cent handling charge per mail order.

Speaking of the Philatelic Sales Division, if you've ordered anything from them, have patience...

Last week, while awaiting an order I had sent to them Feb. 2, I received a post card explaining that "unprecedented interest in recent issues" made it impossible to fill orders within "our usual service standards." I could, however, "expect to receive your order within 60 days of the time it was mailed to us" but an attached postal reply card offered to refund my money if I preferred not to wait that long.

The order's 'control date' is Feb. 20 so it either took a long time to get out there or it is taking them a long time to open their mail.

Patience...

The Northwest Philatelic Club will sponsor a swap night Wednesday at the Arlington Heights Public Library, 500 E. Dunton Avenue.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. and guests are welcome.

The Washington Press will sell you plain envelopes, similar to the ones they use for their Aircraft cachets, and extra-heavy white stuffer cards for servicing your own first day covers. Envelopes are $1.50 for 100; cards are $1.35 for 100 — both from "The Washington Press, Maplewood, NJ 07040." Please add $1.00 per order for postage and handling.

Dick Cavett relives the golden days of the motion picture industry along with Mae West, Gene Kelly and John Wayne, in "Dick Cavett's Backlot U.S.A." to be aired Monday at 9 p.m. on CBS.

The special, shot behind the famous Paramount gate on the Paramount Studios backlot, brings to life Hollywood's heyday through the eyes and performances of some who lived it first-hand and others who experienced it from balcony seats in local movie houses.

Miss West performs some of the numbers that made her part of show business folklore, including "Frankie and Johnny" and "After You've Gone." She also reminisces about her colorful career.

Kelly will give some insights into his classic dance routines and Wayne will talk about Westerns. Mickey Rooney, after recalling his years as a child actor growing up in a studio, is joined by a group of backlot kids for a song and dance number.

Jose Ferrer plays Stalin at Potsdam

by Joan Hanauer

In civilian clothes and speaking conversationally, Jose Ferrer looks about as much like Joe Stalin as he looks like Joe Louis.

But translate him into Jose Ferrer, actor and he can magically take on the qualities of the character he is impersonating whether it be Toulouse-Lautrec in the movie "Moulin Rouge" or Stalin in "Truman at Potsdam," a Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation to be seen on NBC Thursday at 7 p.m.

John Houseman as Winston Churchill and Ed Flanders as Harry S. Truman make up the rest of the "Big Three" that met at Potsdam in July, 1945.

Ferrer unexpectedly found himself with a problem. He anticipated finding a warehouse full of films of Stalin to study, to catch the revealing mannerisms and gestures that help in characterization.

"I couldn't find any movies on him at all," Ferrer said during an interview, looking very un-Stalinlike with a neatly barbered beard, a becoming mustache, a gold earring in one ear and a newly styled figure thanks to a strict diet.

Ferrer finally turned up one motion picture of Stalin getting out of an automobile and walking into a building — about 30 seconds worth of action.

The alternative was to study still photographs, read up on his man and rely on the accuracy of the script which, after all, was taken from history, and the help of the makeup man.

"There's no way the average person could know as much as I about Stalin after all my research and studying hundreds of photos," Ferrer said. "And remember, if I couldn't see him move, neither could anybody else. If I'm wrong in how he moved, an American audience won't know it."

Another approach was speech.

"He didn't speak English," Ferrer said. "It was always through an interpreter. Churchill, Truman or Roosevelt all spoke which could make things either easy or hard for an actor."

What probably will happen is that a generation of television-watchers will wind up believing in Jose Ferrer's Stalin as history because the Ferrer version will be more believable than the actuality.

Ferrer is ambiguous about television fare itself. He would like to work more than he does at present, both acting and directing, in theater, film and television.

On the other hand, he is more enthusiastic about what he calls "actuality" fare — news, sports and documentary programs — than the dramatic shows, and he loves watching the old movies, although, he adds, "I'm never anxious to watch anything I've done."

Diana Rigg

I would like to know where to write to Diana Rigg. Print a picture of her and all the movies and TV shows she's been in.

M.R.

British actress Diana Rigg was first introduced to American television audiences as Mrs. Peel on "The Avengers" and later as Diana Smythe on "Diana." Her first professional break came with engagements in repertory theatre where she made her reputation in plays such as "Ondine," "Becket," "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and "King Lear."

She left the company to accept a British television role in "The Hothouse" which led to her role in "The Avengers." Motion picture credits include "The Assassination Bureau," "On Her Majesty's Secret Service," "The Hospital" and "Theatre of Blood." Write to her in care of Phil Gersh Agency, Inc., 222 N. Canon Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210.

Will you please tell me who plays Radar on "M*A*S*H"?

D.O.

Gary Burghoff

Gary Burghoff plays Radar, the ESP-gifted corporal, on the series. Write to him in care of CBS-TV, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90036.

Remember Irene (Granny) Ryan of "The Beverly Hillbillies"? I would like to know her age, when the series began and if she is alive or deceased.

J.H.G.

Irene Noble Ryan was born in El Paso, Texas, October 17, 1906. She died in April, 1973. The "Beverly Hillbillies" series, in which she portrayed pipe-smoking, whiskey-making Granny, ran from 1962-71.

Would you tell me if Jackie Cooper, as a small boy, played in the "Our Gang" series? I think I've seen him on a few of the shows but my mother says he never starred in the series.

T.I.

Jackie Cooper most certainly was one of the young stars of the "Our Gang" series.

Connors has a new hero

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mike Connors returns to television this Sunday night after a year's search for a leading character who isn't a cop, doctor, lawyer or private eye, the staple heroes of the tube. It wasn't easy.

Newspapermen, sports stars, captains of industry, international spies and soldiers of fortune were discarded. Such mundane pursuits as dentistry, manual labor and housepainting were too outrageous to pursue.

So Connors, who flew high for eight years as "Mannix," decided to play every man's fantasy, a charter boat skipper who calls his own shots.

He added another personal tidbit. The character will be ethnic.

Mike plays Kirk O'Hanian, Armenian. Mike's real name is Krakor O'Hanian and he is a Fresno, Calif., Armenian born and bred.

He will speak some Armenian on the show, especially in scenes with a favorite uncle. From time to time there will be Armenian dishes served aboard his boat and Armenian music played.

"What can you do that's new in a weekly dramatic television show?" Connors asked, not expecting an answer.

"There's room only for blue sky adventure. Most men dream of not having a boss, punching a clock or reporting to an office."

"This guy tries to make a living from what he likes best — boats and water. He leads the sort of life that appeals to me and the men I know."

"If I had my way, I'd live six months a year barefoot in Hawaii and never hear an alarm clock."

Connors, like most actors, however, will awaken to the jangle of the predawn alarm five days a week when "O'Hanian" becomes a series.

Viewers get a preview of the show Sunday when "The Killer Who Wouldn't Die" is beamed as a two-hour entry on the ABC Sunday Night Movie.

"This pilot show almost has the feeling I want," he said. "But I'd like to make it a bit more ethnic, especially the background music."

O'Hanian is a retired cop who owns his own boat along with a marine supply shop which he calls O'Hanian's Locker. He's got plenty of activity on shore as well as at sea.

"I'm really intent on getting away from identitying 'O'Hanian' with 'Mannix.'

MIKE CONNORS

"The producers insisted that we emphasize the action format because I'm associated with physical activity. It's a proven commodity. I told them I can only fight and run so long before I wear out."

It's been precisely a year since first run "Mannix" episodes left the air. But the series is beamed Thursday nights at 10:30 by ABC and drawing good ratings. So the old character remains fresh in many viewers' minds.

During his year sabbatical Connors eschewed television movies, limiting himself to a couple of Bob Hope specials and talk shows.

"I took advantage of 12 months of professional inactivity to do some of the things I enjoy," he said. "But I learned I couldn't retire. I became restless as hell. It's better to be too busy than not busy enough."

Connors is a bright, independent man who has invested wisely in real estate and other ventures. He would be financially secure if he never acted again.

"I enjoy the creative aspect of performing," he said. "I'd like to have more control of the stories and characterization. But what actor wouldn't? That's why so many of us turn to directing."

"In all honesty, I must say I was looking forward to this series until we did the pilot. I worked from 7 in the morning until as late as 2 A.M. A man would be crazy to put in those hours if he didn't enjoy what he's doing."

"Charles Francis Adams: Minister to Great Britain (1861-1863)." As the Civil War rages in America, Charles Francis Adams, son of John Quincy, is appointed Minister to Great Britain. He travels to England with his wife, their sons and their daughter. Two other sons, Charles Francis II and John Quincy II, remain behind in the Union army. Joan Darling

It's about time

The National Endowment for the Humanities, a federally funded activity, is planning a 26-part series concerning the role of women in American history. Each episode will cost about $300,000, with the total project adding up to close to $8 million. The first will be "The Life of Elizabeth Cady Stanton," an early women's rights leader. It will be directed by Joan Darling, director of the syndicated "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" series. TV fans probably remember her best as Owen Marshall's girl Friday in the Arthur Hill series on ABC two seasons ago.

Walters to host awards show

Barbara Walters, "Today" co-host, will emcee the fourth annual "Women of the Year" awards Thursday at 8:30 p.m. on NBC.

Ten women of outstanding achievement will be honored for their contributions. Women throughout the country were asked to respond to a questionnaire in the January issue of Ladies Home Journal by making recommendations in each of ten categories including sports, communications, science and research and business and economics.

The winners, who will be announced on the NBC telecast, will each receive a special pendant designed by Cartier and presented by personalities from the arts, show business and government.

Petula Clark, The 5th Dimension and Kate Smith will perform on the special broadcast from New York City.

'Cakes and Ale' debuts Sunday on Channel 11

Rosie Gann debuts as the saucy English barmaid of "Cakes and Ale," the three-part dramatization of Somerset Maugham's light-hearted novel, Sunday at 8 p.m. on WTTW.

Rosie's story is told through the eyes of a lover, a successful writer and identifiable projection of Somerset Maugham. He takes her from the barroom where she cheerfully dispenses ale and her charms, through her various lovers and into old age.

British actress Judy Cornwell stars. The production is part of Channel 11's "Masterpiece Theatre."

Shelby Lyman on chess

Few areas of human culture have been so monopolized by the male as chess. When men and women play each other a special tension exists. It seems that in the face to face, soul to soul struggle that takes place over the chessboard, male domination often is symbolically at issue. In extreme instances, men will not brook losing and their women "opponents" dare not to win.

I have seen the play of some women at the beginning strong and confident, with when the pressure of beating their husbands becomes too great. And I have seen little girls with outstanding ability lose interest in chess after intimidation by their male peers.

Therefore, all the more significant is a recent history-making event — the grandmaster title was awarded for the first time to a woman, Nona Gaprindashvili of the Soviet Union, whose play is "bold and aggressive."

Women take note. The time to play chess has come. The Mount Everest of that game is yours to attain.

BEGINNER'S CORNER — Hint and Explanation: White's bishop has limited mobility. Do you see how to trap it?

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Josephine Culbertson was the outstanding woman player in the early days of contract. Jo's great strength was her soundness and her ability to make things easy for her partner.

At the same time, she would take unusual action when it seemed necessary and the results were apt to be very good ones.

Here is a hand she defended against no less a declarer than the great Hal Sims.

It was obvious to Jo from the bidding that her partner couldn't hold much of anything. She decided on the desperation lead of the four of spades.

Sims played low from dummy and East won the trick with his 10. He led the 10 of trumps. Sims won, drew trumps and went after clubs. Jo was in with her ace and promptly underled her spade ace for the second time. Hal played low and Ely's queen and Joe's ace set the contract.

Can anyone really fault Hal for going wrong? We know that we can't.

The annual Hastings International Tournament, won jointly by Bronstein (U.S.S.R.), Hort (Czech) and Uhlman (E. Ger.) was an embarrassment to its British hosts. The home players, alas, were scrunched into six of the last seven places in the standings.

Here is the exciting finish to the game, Keene vs. Miles.

After a two-piece sacrifice stripped the black king's protective pawn structure, see SOLVE IT, the remaining white pieces had their will. Miles was shortly checkmated.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by Unkelt Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said. Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement," Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Unit plan OK for Dist. 59, bad for rest of area: study

by JUDY JOBBITT

The proposed unit school district for the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 area would be financially beneficial to that area but would hurt the remaining portion of High School Dist. 214, according to figures presented to the Dist. 59 citizens committee.

The figures also showed the possibility of the proposed unit district having a balanced budget with a lower tax rate than would be needed to balance the budgets of Dist. 214 and Dist. 59.

The figures show the combined tax rates for Districts 214 and 59 would have to be $5.32 per $100 assessed valuation next year for the budget to balance, but the proposed unit district would only need a tax rate of $4.83 per $100 assessed valuation for a balanced budget.

THE ILLINOIS SCHOOL Consultants, hired by Dist. 59 to provide information on forming a unit district, also presented projections showing the proposed unit district needing a tax rate of $8.21 for a balanced budget by the 1980-81 school year and Districts 214 and 59 needing a combined tax rate of $8.78 for a balanced budget that year.

If Dist. 59 formed a unit district, the remaining Dist. 214 area also would need to increase its tax rate by about 56 cents by the 1980-81 school year for a balanced budget above the needed increase for the current Dist. 214 area to have a balanced budget that year.

According to the report, the proposed unit district could set a higher tax rate despite the state's requirement for the high school district to cut its tax rate. Dist. 214 currently is required by the state to cut its tax rate, although the residents have approved a higher tax rate.

The consultants also presented figures showing a Unit Dist. 59 having a cumulative deficit of about $9.7 million by the 1980-81 school year if the maximum tax rate of $3.93 per $100 assessed valuation is used. Dist. 59 would have a deficit of about $10.7 million by that year.

DIST. 214 WOULD have a deficit of about $43.8 million by the 1980-81 school year and a deficit of about $38.9 million if Dist. 59 withdrew and formed a unit district.

In addition, Dist. 214 would have to give the proposed unit a percentage of the total high school district's assets, which would be about $10 million in addition to the two high schools in the

Condo firm agrees to corrections

Harmony Builders Inc., Des Plaines, has agreed to correct most of the 22 building and fire code violations in the River Oaks condominiums, 960 S. River Rd., a city official said Friday.

Leonard Trost, acting building commissioner, said he was assured by Paul Kron of Harmony Builders that most of the violations would be corrected in the near future. Although officials from the firm could not be reached for comment, Trost said they have been cooperating with the city.

"I'm supposed to meet with them shortly to get a definite time schedule on when the violations will be corrected," he said. "I feel the problems are something they can correct quickly."

THE VIOLATIONS were found after River Oaks residents complained to the city that the builder did not conform to building codes when constructing the six-story, 56-unit structure. The problems at River Oaks were the last of a series of incidents that led to the resignation of former Building Comr. William Baldaccini.

The violations pertain to ceiling heights, ventilation, use of non fire-proof building materials, installation of doors and stairwells and deviations from the approved building plans.

Trost said because the building already is finished, some of the violations cannot be corrected. Corrections would be impossible in some cases, and in others the cost would be prohibitive, he said.

"They do not meet our (building) code, that's true," he said. "But we don't feel they create any health or safety hazards."

AT THE TIME the violations were brought to the attention of the city council, Baldaccini told aldermen that city inspectors missed the violations

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance, to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velveteen wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

"PETE" THE RACCOON was a problem patron. He got out of a large monkey cage by prying

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Shean," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Homesick.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

For a pampered poodle, nothing but the best.

The American Pet Motel — puppy heaven?

Lake Park opens its 16th season today

The Des Plaines Park District's Lake Park, Lee and Howard streets, today will open its 16th season to golfers, boaters, fishermen, bicyclists and picnickers.

The 73-acre park, which has a 40-acre lake stocked with bass, bluegill, trout and crappie, and has an 18-hole par three golf course, will open to residents at 8 a.m.

All park activities, with the exception of fishing, boating and golfing, are free to residents.

Residents wishing to go boating and fishing on "Lake Opeka" may purchase a summer activity pin for use by their immediate family. The pins also entitle families to five guest passes.

RESIDENTS ARE asked to wear the pins while boating and fishing and sign a log before going onto the lake.

Residents may bring guests and participate in boating and fishing activities for a daily fee of $1. Five guest passes may be purchased for $4.

No children under six are allowed in the park without an adult, and no person under 12 is allowed to take out a boat without an adult. Residents are asked only to enter the park when signs indicate it is open. Swimming is not allowed in the lake.

Season golf passes are $35 for resident youths 12 through high school, $40 for adult residents, $12 for resident senior citizens and $60 for non-residents. Daily fees on weekdays are $2 for residents and $3 for non-residents, while weekend and holiday fees are $2.50 for residents and $3.75 for non-residents.

THERE ALSO ARE special rates for 10-play golf tickets and for women, senior citizens and teen-agers who play the 1,467-yard course during the week. Dates and special group rates are available to civic, church, business and other local organizations.

Under an agreement with the Des Plaines Park District, residents of the Park Ridge Park District may use the lake and golf course at resident rates. The Park Ridge residents, however, will not be able to moor boats at the lake or use the golf course on weekends at the lower rate.

In addition to the lake, golf course, picnic and bicycling facilities, the park district again this summer will be having a number of concerts and shows at the Lake Park Memorial Band Pavilion.

Persons wishing to purchase golf or boating passes or having questions should go to the park district office, 748 Pearson St. or call 296-6106.

Gully to conduct write-in campaign in Dist. 62

Carl Gully announced his candidacy Friday in a write-in campaign for the Des Plaines Dist. 62 Board election April 19.

Gully, 894 S. Wolf Rd., Des Plaines, is being endorsed by the Concerned Citizens for Quality Education, a group that also endorsed write-in candidate James Karabas. They are challenging incumbent Robert Birchfield and newcomer James Kosmond for the two 3-year positions open for election.

Birchfield and Kosmond were endorsed by the Dist. 62 caucus.

"If there is any time to turn the direction of the board, the time is now," said Gully. "Basically my concern is the board does everything in secrecy."

He said the board also "sometimes forgets who is working for whom. Sometimes it seems the administration overpowers them."

Gully said he was upset with "the board's audacity to refuse to let the parents speak" at the March 15 meeting before action was taken to release the district's nurses and first- and second-year teachers for next year as part of budget cuts totaling $701,884.

"It's the board's responsibility to get the community's advice," he said. "If somebody came and wanted to talk at a meeting, you'd better believe damn right I'd listen."

He said, "You're going to have to stand firm on a balanced budget," but believes the district can have a balanced budget without cuts next year.

Gully has lived in the district eight years and has two children attending Forest School.

Flynn, Juckett, Feldman 'team up' for Oakton try

Thomas Flynn has put out campaign literature stating Janet Juckett, Ira Feldman and he are "teaming up together" for the Oakton Community college board race although Feldman said he knows "nothing about a team effort."

"It is not true that we are teaming together," Feldman said. "I have not discussed any issues with Tom, and I have not even met Janet. I am not aware of, nor do I endorse or discourage, the platforms of these two candidates."

Feldman said he agreed to put out material with the two candidates to help defray mailing expenses — "That's all."

Flynn said he wrote the campaign material that states the three are running in "a team concept." He said he is compatible with the other two candidates on their stands for fiscal responsibility, improving the teaching practices, vocational and handicapped student programs and opposing any restrictions on building the permanent Des Plaines campus.

HE SAID HE was trying "to avoid the concept of a slate" by using the words "teamed up together" in the literature. "It seemed a logical way to say it," he said.

Feldman, in an interview with the Herald, had said he was disturbed with politics on a school board and was running as an independent candidate. He said he opposed the concept that he was running with any other candidates.

Mrs. Juckett, widow of former State Rep. Robert Juckett, R-Park Ridge, could not be reached for comment.

when making their final inspections of the building. He said because no violations were noted on their sign-off sheets, occupancy permits were issued for the building.

"I'm not happy with that situation," he told the city council. "Some of these things were obvious and I don't know why they were missed."

Mayor Herbert H. Behrel said he later asked Baldaccini for the sign-off sheets, and when the former building commissioner could not produce them, he asked for his resignation.

For almost a year before the resignation, Baldaccini was under almost constant fire from aldermen over his handling of personnel and administrative matters in the building department.

Four seek three-year terms in Dist. 59

There are four candidates for three 3-year terms in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Emil Bahnmaier, Erwin Poklacki and Judy Zanca. Newcomer Charles Canupp Jr.

Endorsements: None.

The Issues: The Dist. 59 board has wrestled with money problems all year and now is discussing what the impact of a balanced budget will have on the district. The district has been operating at a deficit for more than 15 years and the board was forced to borrow money by issuing teachers orders, a form of script, to pay the faculty for several months.

The board also successfully passed a tax rate increase referendum this year, but sees a need for another down the road if the financial picture does not improve.

Also at issue is the unit district study now under way by a citizen's committee, the unit district would combine elementary and high schools under one board and administration and would require two of the high schools now operated by High School Dist. 214.

Teachers in the district have grown increasingly aggressive in contract negotiations over the years and are now closely watching the board to see if staff cutbacks go beyond an amount which would be in proportion to the 4 per cent of declining enrollment in the district.

The board this year also introduced the concept of converting one of the district schools into an alternative school, where a more traditional structured approach to education would be stressed. Although the community opposed the idea in a series of public hearings, the board is interested in investigating the concept further.

Erwin Poklacki

"I have experience to bring to the board that is needed at this time," said Erwin Poklacki, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board candidate.

Poklacki, who was appointed to the board last summer, also served on the board from 1971-74. He said through "the experience of being a board member you learn what is the best thing to do despite what the taxpayers think. It's sometimes a difficult, lonely situation."

He said during his years on the board he has come to realize "communications with the community will always be a problem. I don't see any solution to the problem" because the "education language must be learned."

POKLACKI SAID he also advocates looking into alternative schooling options in Dist. 59. "I pushed my fellow board members into this alternative school thing this year. It didn't turn out the way I'd hoped it would," he said. The alternative school was voted down for next year.

He said the major problem in holding hearings on the alternative school idea was that parents didn't realize it wouldn't jeopardize the programs in the regular schools.

On other issues Poklacki said:

- Deficit spending. Poklacki said he favors deficit spending. Before cutting programs, he said he would go et cuts "in principle" because all areas were cut at least 4 per cent, including special education, which is not suffering declining enrollment.

- Closing schools. "It won't come for a few years. I'm not in favor of pushing it, but if there is no program in a school to keep it open, it should be closed. The majority has to be served."

- Teachers strikes. "It's very possible, especially this year, to have a strike in Dist. 59. All the ingredients are there." He said if a strike hits the district, he would continue negotiating, close schools and seek mediation.

- Teachers unions. "It hasn't provided any benefits to the district or teachers for the last number of years. Probably the salaries would have been about the same without negotiations" — a salary he says is "equitable." He said the union, however, doesn't necessarily represent the teachers.

into deficit spending because budget cuts "should mean a less educated student coming out of our schools." He said "deficit spending can be handled very efficiently. It's easier than raising the tax level."

- Budget cuts. "We shouldn't go into panic cutting of programs at this time." He said he is "very happy with the way the district is handling budget cuts — a little from everything — rather than cutting total programs." He wants the board to "make a commitment now" about what it will do if it faces an inflation factor greater than 5 per cent, the figure used in setting the current budget. Poklacki said he voted against the recent bud-

Charles Canupp

Charles Canupp decided to challenge the three incumbents up for reelection to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education because of his interest in the district.

"It was projected to be an uncontested race and I have had a great interest in Dist. 59 — my two children. I wanted to take the opportunity to get more involved in the decision making of the district," he said.

Canupp said one of his "prime" goals is to improve communications between the board and the community.

"I want to get more public involvement with the board," he said. Canupp suggested that the board send out newsletters more often and questionnaires to get residents' suggestions. He also wants information about the topics to be discussed at board meetings available to the public in advance to "help get the people out to meetings."

Canupp said the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic are the most important subjects taught in the elementary schools because they set the base for future study. He advocates a "curriculum that would best give a strong education that would let children expand as they get older."

He said the district should also look at the individual schools and assess their needs when cutting back staff and other areas rather than taking "one That is the worst mistake you can make."

- Closing schools. When a school's enrollment drops to about 50 per cent of its capacity, the district should "implement a study to see what would be the most economical way to go" — closing it or maintaining it, he said.

- Referendum. He said all sources of revenue should be examined to see if there is "an alternative source of money" before the board tries for a tax rate increase. "If referendum is the only way to get out of deficit, then pursue it."

On other issues:

- Deficit spending. "I would like to move toward a balanced budget. The cost of borrowing money can get quite expensive." He said he wants to get a date for "getting the district in the black" and work to meet it.

- Budget cuts. He said he would "have to really get into the details and look at what areas could survive a cutback." If programs had to be cut back, he said he would "pick a program with as little impact as possible" and avoid touching the basics.

Judith Zanca

The problems confronting school boards from declining enrollment and rising costs to dropping revenue are "experienced board members to be around," says Judith Zanca who is running for her third 3-year term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 board.

"I've been on the board six years and feel I've done a good job. I want to continue," she said.

She said one of the major accomplishments during her time on the board was firing former Supt. James Ervin. "I don't know if it is something to be proud of but it was necessary."

MRS. ZANCA SAID she is pleased with the current administration under Supt. Roger Bardwell. "We have an administration that is more responsive to the community," she said.

She also feels the current board is "responsive to what we hear from the community. Our phones are in tune."

The board also is planning to hold community forums every three months to answer questions and listen to problems. She said she hopes this program will bring more parents in contact with the board.

On other issues:

- Deficit spending. "We're at the mercy of inflation and negotiation settlements. I don't know how we can get out of part of our revenue being tax anticipation warrants," a form of borrowed money. She said the board is "going to strive to make the bottom dollar balance" but still needs to borrow.

- Budget cuts. She said the "largest place to save money is with the teacher ration." By increasing the student/teacher ratio by one, she said the district could save about $250,000. She said the board also developed a list of "27 sacred cows" that would have a "terrible effect" on the district if cut. She said "before attacking the 27 cows, there must be input from the community, principals and teachers."

- Closing schools. "When enrollment gets below 150 kids at a school, we would have to consider closing schools." She said she is not in favor of changing school boundaries to enable the district to close a school.

- Alternative schools. "In the 60s, everyone said there is only one way of learning. I do not believe that. We must offer the alternatives." She said the district should offer a range of teaching styles from a very structured program to an open school setup.

- Teachers strikes. If Dist. 59 confronted a teachers strike, Mrs. Zanca said she would "keep the schools open. I don't think the community would stand for closing the schools." She said she would continue negotiating and would not seek a court injunction to get teachers back in school.

- Teachers unions. "The only issue I ever hear about is money and now some about job security. We also don't hear from anybody but the leadership." She said Dist. 59 teachers are paid "just about right. We're competitive with our neighbors."

Emil Bahnmaier

Emil Bahnmaier wants to "keep the good things in this district" as he seeks a second term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board.

"I've learned a lot about Dist. 59 and education during the last three years. I've done my apprenticeship," he said. "We're going to be going into a rough year. Experience is going to be invaluable."

He would like the district to do more evaluation of programs. "I want to see if we are getting maximum education value out of a program or if other programs are better," he said.

ONE AREA he feels has improved during his term on the board is the board's contacts with the community.

"I think we have opened up. I like to think I was part of that because I came on the board with a hangup about it," he said.

He would like to improve the board's communication further by setting up parent advisory committees at each school. "They would be advisory, to bring the views of the community into the schools," he said.

He also is pleased with the establishment of a gifted program for talented students in various areas. He sees the "talented program as a way to have fall-out to the regular classroom" on special programs and individualized instruction.

tion to cut back on the number of teachers needed. "Only when that would hurt the education would I touch any education programs. Our special programs are things that make our district unique."

- Closing schools. "The present position is we would not close them down until enrollment reaches 125 students. It is conceivable the time will arrive when it will be financially unfeasible to keep a school open."

- Unit district. "I think the taxpayers should have the right to determine if they want a unit district. I lean towards a unit district. I have seen figures that show financial advantages" for Dist. 59 forming a unit district.

- Referendum. He said the earliest he would ask the taxpayers to support a tax rate increase would be during the 1979-80 school year.

3 hopefuls seek 2 seats on Dist. 26 school board

Three candidates are seeking two seats on the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education in the April 10 election.

The candidates: Incumbents Peggy Golden and William Hase, Newcomer Patrick Fauceglia.

Endorsements: River Trails Dist. 26 General Caucus endorsed all three candidates.

The Issues: The district has projected bankruptcy by 1977 and board members have started making staff and other cutbacks to pull the district out of its deficit.

Stories by Diane Granat

Board members have also proposed closing one of the district's six elementary schools because of a steady decline in enrollment.

Peggy Golden

The financial crisis facing River Trails Dist. 26 is a prime concern of Peggy Golden, who is running for her first full term on the Dist. 26 board.

Mrs. Golden, who was appointed to the board last August to fill a vacancy said Dist. 26 must do long-range planning to deal with the district's financial problems.

"We must start to adjust our spending right now and know the types of changes we must make to achieve solvency, quality education and efficient building use," Mrs. Golden said.

MRS. GOLDEN said she thinks in terms of how fiscal responsibility will affect the education in the schools. "We are basically a no frills district and there is very little we could cut in the way of programs," she said.

Mrs. Golden has been the Dist. 26 representative to the North Suburban Special Education Organization since

She said the open classroom arrangement at Bond School is a "good organizational plan" but it is something developed within a building with a specific principal and group of teachers.

On other issues:

- Class size. Mrs. Golden favors the board's decision to raise class size from an average of 20 to 26 per class. However, Mrs. Golden also said

Patrick Fauceglia

Patrick J. Fauceglia decided to run for the River Trails Dist. 26 school board because of the financial crisis the district faces.

"There is a great concern about the accomplishments of our educational system today, but are we getting a better product for the additional money spent?" Fauceglia asked.

Fauceglia received endorsement from the Dist. 26 caucus in February but then withdrew from the race. "I had not fully considered the time implications," he said. After his initial decision to withdraw he said he received many phone calls urging him to reconsider, so he decided to reenter the race.

FAUCEGLIA SAID Dist. 26 must work with a balanced budget. "Programs that were once considered sacred will have to be reevaluated," he said.

A quality education should prepare size and introduced modern techniques, and we show no improvement," he said.

The district should come up with methods of analyzing the educational achievement of its pupils, based on suburban districts in this area, instead of using nationally-based tests, Fauceglia said.

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper Community College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli. Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 13.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

SHE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says:

Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of giving the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelors' degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

March challenged the role of the community colleges, saying they offer too many "frills" by offering classes like painting and seminars.

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issues, Carponelli said:

Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

Faculty relations: "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college." Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 450 N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum. "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study," she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:

Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

Faculty Unionization. "Up to them" Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

William Haase

William Haase has served as chairman of the budget and finance committee in River Trails Dist. 26 for the past three years and he believes that type of experience is essential in Dist. 26, which faces bankruptcy by 1977.

Haase is a Certified Public Accountant and the director of personnel development for an international CPA firm. He said these are qualifications which help him face the complex financial and personnel problems facing Dist. 26 schools today.

In the four years he has served on the Dist. 26 board, Haase said he prepared the financial forecasts and plans for the board. "We now have a budgeting system that makes sense and a realistic view of our revenues and expenditures," Haase said.

Haase said the items which should be cut out of the budget to avoid a continued deficit are those which will hurt education least. The district must ask "what is the price tag on our educational plans," he said.

WHEN THE Dist. 26 board did not fire all of the teachers it had slated for cuts because of financial problems, Haase said he consistently voted to cut the full number of teachers.

"I disagreed very strongly with their (the board's) judgment," Haase said. "I tried very hard but unsuccessfully to persuade the other board members," he said.

Haase said an important part of his educational philosophy is to have a school system where the children enjoy going to school. To achieve this it is necessary to have "excellent, highly motivated teachers who are satisfied with their jobs," as well as good buildings and materials, he said.

Haase said one of his long-range goals for Dist. 26 is to find a way to finance more enrichment programs. "We spend a great deal of money for slow learners, but we do little for enrichment," he said.

On other issues:

Class size:

"We have gone from a luxury situation of 20 to 28 students per class, which is a manageable size," Haase said. "It's easier to have 16 to 20 students per class, but it's possible to accomplish things with 26," he said. Haase said he would have trouble with class size going above an average of 30 students per class.

Closing Schools:

Haase said he supports closing a school in Dist. 26 because it is the best way to achieve the class size of 26 with an equitable distribution. "I would not have favored closing a school just to save the $60,000 to $80,000," he said. Haase said he has urged the board to hold a public hearing on which school to close.

proposed district's area.

The figures also show Dist. 214 would have $1,722 available per student next year under the current setup but would only have $1,627 available per student if Dist. 59 formed a unit district.

The figures also show the unit district would have $2,196 per student on the high school level next year.

The charts also show the Dist. 59 area is paying about $2,161 per high school student compared to the general Dist. 214 rate of $1,410 per student. The Dist. 59 area has about 27 per cent of the total Dist. 214 student body and has about 40 per cent of the high school's assessed valuation.

The report stated that the proposed unit district's board also could divide the total per pupil resources differently than currently is divided between Dist. 214 and Dist. 59 and spend more on elementary students.

Dist. 214 currently spends about 54 per cent more per pupil than Dist. 54. This difference is comparable with other high school districts and their feeder elementary districts.

class size of 26 pupils, which the board recently adopted.

He said there is no evidence which states that class size has an effect on learning. He added that "anything beyond 39 (per class) becomes unwieldy."

Closing Schools: With a choice between closing a school in Dist. 26 and going deeper into deficit spending, Fauceglia said he favors closing a school. He also said he thinks most residents in the district would favor a school closing as a budget cutback.

Teacher unions. "The right to organize and the right to collective bargaining is a right any group has in our society," Fauceglia said.

Teacher strikes. Fauceglia said he looks skeptically at the subject of strikes since they are illegal. He said, however, if a strike occurred in Dist. 26 he would continue to negotiate. "But financial conditions would direct us toward how much longer I'd negotiate," he said.

Fauceglia said he would try to keep the schools open if a strike occurred.

there is also a limit to raising class size. "I don't want to see a galloping increase in class size. If we exceed a certain number of children per class we can't meet our educational needs," she said.

Closing schools. Mrs. Golden said as the number of children in the district declines they do not need as many schools. "I favor closing a school if it will make more efficient use of empty classroom space. We must be willing to change as the circumstances around us change," she said.

Teacher unions. "I think teacher unions are here to stay," Mrs. Golden said. She said unionization helps the teachers and she feels that the board's relations with Dist. 26 teachers has been very good.

Teachers strikes. There are ways to circumvent a strike, Mrs. Golden said, but she said she does not anticipate that Dist. 26 will ever have to face the problem.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement . . ." Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Stavros refused sentence change

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification (Continued on Page 5)

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velveteen wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

MSD not obliged to repair basin: official

An official of the Metropolitan Sanitary District has told Wheeling Park District officials the MSD has no obligation to make improvements at the Heritage Park West retention basin.

In a letter to the park board, Forrest C. Neil, MSD chief engineer, said his agency's obligations "were limited solely to the construction of the Heritage Park Reservoir (basin) and these obligations have been met with the construction of the reservoir."

The MSD built the basin for flood-control purposes.

NEIL SAID VILLAGE officials are responsible for flooding problems at the retention basin since they failed to obtain the necessary right-of-ways needed by the state for improvements to a ditch leading into the basin.

"Until such time as the channel improvements are completed, the Heritage Park Reservoir will continue to be poorly drained, and therefore the grounds remain wet and not adequate or satisfactory for the recreational purposes envisaged by the original plan," he said.

Neil said that MSD officials hope "some arrangements can be worked out between the park district and the village. If attempts fail, recourse to the courts may become necessary," he said.

Wheeling village and park officials have been trying for several years to get the MSD to complete improvements on the 12-acre basin near Wolf Road. The basin is described by park officials as "20 acres of gook."

THE WHEELING Park District do-

noted land for the retention basin to the village in 1969 with the understanding the area would be suitable for boating and fishing, as well as flood control. Park officials have said the MSD has failed to live up to an agreement providing for improvements to the area.

Wheeling village officials also are critical of the basin, saying it does not fulfill storm water retention needs.

David Phillips, park district superintendent, said MSD officials told him the retention basin will receive priority in improvements to the village storm water system. He said MSD officials agreed to the improvements to the retention basin without widening of the Wheeling drainage ditch leading into it.

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the National Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Sheen," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Homesick.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

The American Pet Motel — puppy heaven?

Forest unit asks purchase of 1,260 acres

The land acquisition committee of the Lake County Forest Preserve District has agreed to acquire more than 1,260 acres of land valued at an estimated $7.1 million.

The acquisition is the first phase of a four-part program that would add more than 3,500 acres of land to the county's forest preserves.

The district's attorneys are negotiating to purchase the properties in the first phase of the program. Final purchase approval of the land must be made by the entire forest preserve board of commissioners. Some of the properties may be the subject of lengthy condemnation suits, according to District Prss. George Bell of Mundelein.

Listed in Phase II of the plan are 316 acres of land and 57 urban lots with an appraised value of $3.3 million. Land in Phase II is to be acquired shortly, as soon as survey or other details can be completed, Bell said.

THE COMMITTEE is restudying Phase III for boundary revisions. Phase III includes 447 acres with an estimated value of $3.47 million.

Phase IV includes 1,508 acres with an estimated value of $11.97 million.

Bell said the district has enough money on hand to purchase land in the first three phases. The fourth phase has been deferred to consider financing, either through revenue bonds or through state and federal grants.

The sites slated for acquisition include:

- A 570-acre site near Lake Forest, east of Waukegan Road and running along the West Skokie River area from Everett Road to Deerfield High School.
- The Greenbelt extension, an area of 330 acres on each side of Green Bay Road, between Eighth and 14th streets and Lewis Avenue, near Waukegan and North Chicago.
- Lyons Woods, a 248-acre site west of Sheridan Road and north of Blanchard Road near Waukegan.
- A 523-acre site in Grant Township lying north of Rollins Road, south of Monaville Road and west of Fairfield Road.

- The countryside site, a 650-acre area located north and south of Hawley Road, west of Ill. Rte. 60 to the west of Mundelein.
- A 127-acre site north of Libertyville, at the northeast corner of Buckley and River roads.
- The Cuba marsh site, south of Cuba Road and west of Ela Road, near Barrington, a 184-acre parcel.

Bell said that only two subdivisions will be affected by the acquisitions. Some district commissioners have criticized the land acquisition committee for choosing sites in the middle of large proposed developments, especially in the areas north of Libertyville and west of Mundelein.

"Although long-range development plans have reportedly been made for some areas, these plans are preliminary and largely speculative," Bell said.

"The presence of defined open space areas should clarify and encourage development in other appropriate areas of the county," Bell added.

CRITICS OF THE district have suggested that the district should hold a referendum before acquiring more land. Comr. Matthew Miholic of North Chicago is circulating a petition to get a referendum on the November ballot.

Land Acquisition Committee Chairman William Lea of Waukegan commented that the studies, appraisals and evaluations made by the committee "demonstrates that this is a proper function of elected officials and simply would not be an appropriate subject for a referendum."

Comr. Roland Sandee of Waukegan said the acquisitions would have little effect on the county tax base, because the open space will enhance the value of other properties in the county.

Stavros denied change in sentence

cation blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sanstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

- Prison officials at Sanstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.
- "WHAT IT (the inquiry) effectively did for us was create an aura of special handling... a red flag," Benson said. When Stavros received his furlough he was warned by prison officials to avoid the "public eye" and newspaper reporters.
- Lexington prison officials searched Stavros and his belongings for a reported list of furloughs and parole releases that Stavros was collecting as evidence of unfair treatment.
- That Stavros sued the federal government in a Minnesota court under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act for release of prison and parole board documents.

Will's decision Friday could lead to another hearing if the parole board denies Stavros' release in July. The hearing will come as Stavros completes his second year in prison.

Six contenders for four Dist. 96 posts

There are six candidates in Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 competing for four seats on the board in the April 10 election. Four candidates are running for three 3-year terms, with two seeking one 1-year term.

The Candidates: Three-year terms — Incumbents Clarke Walser, Linaya Back and Louis Lundstedt Jr. and newcomer William G. Papke Jr. One-year term — Newcomers Wayne R. Banasik and Jerry R. Parkin.

Stories by Katherine Boyce and Dorothy Oliver

Wayne Banasik

Dist. 96 is facing a period of growth and tight budgets in the next few years and Wayne Banasik believes he has the qualifications to meet those challenges.

With five years in the construction trades, Banasik has been involved in "many school projects," is experienced in code requirements for schools and has dealt with architects and contractors. At the same time, he points to a background in budget and financial planning with his company, and says he knows how to "live within a budget."

Banasik's interest in the board of education began with his involvement on the Dist. 96 fiscal committee where he looked into possible program cuts.

He said he is seeking the one-year term because "I'm not sure I can make the three-year commitment. I know I can make a one-year commitment."

Communications between the board and the community "could be better," he said. "The board will have to go further out of its way to inform the public." He doesn't believe the board operates in secrecy, and said "I think the community is generally satisfied with the district. They come out when they have a problem."

On other issues:
• Financial solutions. "Running the district at a deficit is bad; there's no way to catch up once you start. When

• Teachers. "To date, at least with every teacher I have met, the morale is high and I've never heard a bad word about the district," Banasik said. He feels the current pay scale in the district is good and although salaries need to keep up with the cost of living "it boils down to what you can afford. The district must operate in a business-like fashion."

• Future growth. "Developers are hard to assess. The timing of the growth in the district is up to the control of others. You're at their mercy and the timing could be financially disastrous." The board should "aggressively seek to protect the interests of the district" by asking for donations from developers who build within the district. The board has done a "commendable job of planning to date." Planning must also be directed to growth projections, when equipment will need to be replaced and when schools should be constructed, he said.

the board is facing a large deficit they should start looking for inefficiencies. If program cuts are necessary they should look at items that are supplemental or complimentary to the education program.

"There are programs such as band and after-school activities that are not required items. I think the board should talk about that before increasing taxes."

• Referendum. "The referendum in the operations fund is absolutely necessary. There are no fudge factors in that fund and the deficit gets increasingly larger every year. I would rather see a referendum in the education fund and pay a little more taxes than cut education programs. If there is a referendum the board must make a concerted effort to inform the community, to present the facts."

Louis Lundstedt

Louis Lundstedt has had a taste of boardmanship in Dist. 96 and is now coming back for more.

Lundstedt was appointed to a vacancy on the board last December and is now seeking election to a three-year term. "I think that I can contribute, I enjoy it and I think I'm providing a service," he said.

Lundstedt has spelled out two goals which he hopes to accomplish as a board member. He would like to improve the report card system in the district to come up with "a student achievement reporting system that is understandable." The present system "does not satisfy anyone," he said.

LUNDSTEDT ALSO would like to solicit more community involvement into the school system. "The community has been asked to give suggestions to the board for improvements and modification." He hopes "that we do allow these people to provide suggestions and that we give them proper consideration. I don't think any member of the board or the administration can say I know everything and I don't need any advice."

Lundstedt was first attracted to the district through his concern over the IGE system of instruction. The system is now in its fourth year of a five-year implementation period, and he would like to participate in its evaluation when those five years are completed.

Louis Lundstedt

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. Lundstedt opposes deficit spending unless the budget is projected to have a surplus in the near future. Without that "light at the end of the tunnel" deficit spending is "fiscal suicide." When faced with a deficit and the necessity to reduce costs, "you keep the essentials and get rid of the frills." The essentials are "the basic instructional program."

• Referendum. Lundstedt is in favor of a referendum to increase taxes in the district's operations fund "whether we open Kildeer School or not" because the district needs the money to cover increased costs.

• Future growth. Careful evaluation of the projections given by builders is necessary to predict future enrollment, finances and needs. "You best not begin building schools unless you are awfully sure you'll have kids to fill them," he said, but "you have a plan of action." As the district builds new schools Lundstedt believes they should be built in the traditional structure rather than open classrooms.

• Teachers. Lundstedt said he would not be opposed to working with a teachers union. He said he begins all new relationships on the premise that "each of us have mutual interests and concerns and we are intelligent people and can work out our differences." Dist. 96 has "very competitive salaries."

• IGE. "Philosophically I believe in IGE. My interpretation of IGE is to give a challenge to the motivated student and to give assistance to the less gifted." But Lundstedt still questions the way IGE is being implemented in Dist. 96. "I'm concerned as to whether or not the students are learning their basic skills and are prepared to go to high school."

William Papke

"I have a vested interest in the school. Education is my life," said William Papke, who is running for the Dist. 96 Board because he feels "a moral obligation as the educational leader of the high school to get involved."

"I want to see the administration operate as an administration free from the threat that they are going to be second guessed on administrative decisions," Papke said. The board member is the community's representative in the school district, he said. "You do not run the school, you are not the superintendent, you are not the principal," he said. "The community has elected you as a board member," he said, but "Every decision you make should not put you up for a referendum. You have to vote your conscience."

Papke would like to see a unit district formed consolidating Stevenson High School's district with local elementary districts.

"IT CARRIES with it some real advantages administratively. It would save the taxpayers some money. The thing that will dictate it is the economics," he said.

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. Papke favors deficit financing. "There's really no alternative than to operate at a deficit. We still have to offer the services," he said. He said he would borrow funds to meet expenses because "I know the money is forthcoming." If the district does have to make cuts "the only way you can cut back and make a difference is personnel," by reducing the teaching staff. The staff is "90 per cent of your budget," he said. "I'm not opposed to increasing class sizes at certain areas."

• Referendum. "At this point I don't favor it. I don't feel we would be able to pass the referendum in the community," he said. The district can meet expenses by operating "at somewhat of a deficit."

• Future growth. The district must continue to maintain community support of the school system as the district grows. Parents "see the value of school and they are very much interested in seeing their children succeed in school." As the district builds new schools, Papke would like to see a return to the more traditional type of school building rather than open classrooms.

"I favor a more structured approach. There is a certain order and rigor in learning that the kids must pick up at an early age. I don't think they do it when they are flocked together 100 strong."

• Teachers. Papke sees the benefit of a teachers' union. There is "a cohesiveness in an organized staff," he said. "I don't think teachers as a group should sell themselves out. I'd like to see the image of teachers nationally raised." Items such as working conditions, salary and benefits "are certainly issues for collective bargaining," but educational issues should not be brought to the bargaining table because that is the role of the administration, he said.

• IGE. The IGE system is "a very fine way of selecting textbooks and choosing materials," Papke said, but he questions the open classroom concept associated with IGE. "The open concept will work but it is extremely difficult" to control the students,

Endorsements: None.

The Issues: A two-school district, with one other ready to be opened, Dist. 96 is gearing up for a period of growth. While many districts go into deficit as they are expanding, the Dist. 96 board has been committed to balancing the budget.

The board has spent many hours this year discussing possible program cuts and a referendum in the operations fund to prevent a deficit. The referendum received board approval and a 17.5 cent tax rate increase will be presented to the voters in May.

Dist. 96 schools have been built in an open classroom format, without walls. The district also used Individually Guided Education (IGE) where students work individually with a team of teachers, rather than as a class with a single teacher. IGE also uses teacher aides, so more individual attention is available to students.

Jerry Parkin

Jerry Parkin came out to Dist. 96 fiscal committee meetings when he heard the band and athletics programs in the district might be in jeopardy because of a possible district deficit.

"They were throwing out a lot of numbers that didn't look too good. I asked a lot of questions and didn't get straight answers."

"My son is in band and they were talking about doing away with band and athletics. I see these as important for social and musical progress and didn't want them thrown out," Parkin said.

PARKIN SAID he was surprised when suddenly the administration informed the board they would have more than a $100,000 surplus next year instead of the anticipated deficit.

His candidacy was sparked by his desire for some answers to his financial questions and his determination to "maintain band and intermural and maintain the academic level of the district."

Parkin is seeking a one year term because "this is my first venture into anything like this. If, after a year, I see I'm doing any kind of a job I'll reevaluate whether I should run for a full term."

On other issues:
• Financial solutions. "The projections of anticipated income over the next three to four years show a deficit for a year or two and then some substantial surpluses. If the surplus figures are correct I see no reason why we can't operate at a deficit for one or two years. If there is no surplus we have to have a balanced budget."

• Referendum. Parkin supports the referendum for the operations fund. "Apparently inflation got further ahead of them than they anticipated. The money is needed to keep the schools open and I certainly support that." Parkin also would support a referendum in the education fund "if the money is needed. We should go for a referendum before cutting programs. If it fails then we can still go back and cut."

• Teachers. Parkin said he would like to see a better relationship between the administration and teachers and the board and teachers. He said current salaries "seem to be up there with other schools. I would not want to see teachers underpaid."

• Future growth. "The district should get good numbers from developers... and should survey the people every couple of years to see how many kids will be coming into school. I'm not sure the board has good numbers now." Parkin said future buildings should have "walls and rooms. When you go into schools now it's like recess. Walls and doors can close out the noise."

• IGE. "The concept is excellent. The implementation of that concept in Dist. 96 is terrible. Everything tends to mediocrity. The kids are only pushed in band and intermural. They are not really being prepared for high schools. I've talked to a lot of graduates and many say they had a difficult time in high school, that they didn't have the basics."

Clarke Walser

"I think that Dist. 96 has done an excellent job of educating students, it's done an excellent job of financial management and it has been responsible to its various constituencies," said Clarke Walser, whose goal is "to help the district continue to do the kind of job it has been doing."

Quality education is the mastering of the basics, said Walser. Students should "learn to read fluently, to write and speak fluently and grammatically and to write legibly and to be able to perform basic arithmetic abilities with accuracy and dispatch," he said.

It is also "important that a child receive a basic grounding in history and social sciences" and understand the "relationship between peoples in countries around the world and in time."

TODAY STUDENTS also need "an understanding of the basics of science. In a technological society kids have to understand what physics and chemistry are all about."

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. "The first responsibility of any school district is to the kids," insuring that they receive a basic education. "I don't think you can separate our duty to the child to our responsibility to the financial objectives of the district." Without financial solvency, the district can't meet that obligation to its students, said Walser. Walser is opposed to deficit spending. "People, companies and government entities should live within their means," he said. Borrowing funds to meet current expenses hoping that revenue will increase in the future is "self-deluding," he said. "As revenue grows so does the student population and so do the expenses." A growing district that borrows funds is "constantly playing a catch-up game."

• Referendum. "I'm convinced that there is no alternative" to an increase in taxes in the district's operations fund to meet current and future expenses in operating schools. Walser is not ready to ask for an increase in taxes in the education fund, believing that that budget can be balanced over the next two years by trimming some costs.

• Future growth. "Dist. 96 is faced with some major challenges over the next few years to cope with the growth that is ahead of us and the financial problems that face us," said Walser. "The underlying problem the district is going to face is trying to draw the balance for expansion and yet not get too far ahead" of projections in finances and enrollment. "It takes two years to plan and build a school," he said, and the district must plan for this future growth. It must hire teachers and give them proper training to prepare for the increase in students.

• Teachers. Walser is not opposed to teacher unions. "I would feel comfortable working with any organization that has as its goal working the education of the kids." He hopes the relationship between the board and teachers never becomes "adversary. I'd like to think we have been forthright and open and honest with the teachers." Teacher salaries in Dist. 96 have increased. "Prior to the last couple of years teachers in Dist. 96 had a salary schedule that was at the low end of the salary schedule in the Northwest suburbs and Lake County. It is now not at the top end but higher than the median."

Linaya Back

"I guess one of the things that concerns me about the Dist. 96 race is that we have such a young board," said Linaya Back, who will have seniority on the board with three years of experience if she is reelected.

Looking ahead to three more years on the board Mrs. Back has set several goals for herself.

"I would like to continue refining the individualized program" which is relatively new in the district, she said, and she hopes to continue "working on a little bit better assessment form better known as a report card." The training of the staff also is a concern of Mrs. Back who would like to "keep a high degree of professionalism of our teachers."

THE RELATIONSHIP between the board and community is "not as close as I would like," she said. The rapid turnover in the district's population is a "key problem" in keeping residents informed on the district and should be a matter for continuing concern.

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. "I think the district should try to balance the budget annually," rather than engage in deficit spending. "We've had a tight budget for several years and we'll keep it tight." She agrees with the board's reduction of a nurse position. "Right now I don't think we need nurses," she said, favoring the replacement of registered nurses in the schools with health aides. The assistant principal position, which the board cut, is "valuable as an internship" for training future principals, but she would keep the position only if "I were absolutely certain that Kildeer School would open in mid-year" and a new principal would be needed. Cuts in the band, chorus and after school activities programs are another area considered for cuts but she said she would rather trim than eliminate these programs because they are "very difficult to build" in the schools.

• Referendum. An increase in taxes for the operations fund "is mandatory to pay the utility bills, some of which have gone up 30 per cent." To pass the referendum the board must "simply explain to people that the same thing is happening in the school budget as in the budget at home," Mrs. Back does not favor a tax increase in the education fund. "It is not necessary at this point."

• Future growth. As the district grows Mrs. Back is "interested in keeping the quality of education we have now which I consider high" and she would "continue to see that our staff has training before they get into the classroom." She also wants to "keep people in touch with their schools" in a "personal" way. Because the district will have to build more schools, she wants to insure that "developers donate usable land" for school sites, and that villages in the district pass ordinances making the donation of land a requirement for zoning approval.

• Teachers. "I would prefer to work with our local group of teachers rather than a unionized group. I respect our own teachers and their judgment of what is best for our own district."

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper Community College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli.

Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two things are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 539 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

SHE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says:

Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of giving the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelors' degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal 41, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

March challenged the role of the community colleges, saying they offer too many "frills" by offering classes like painting and seminars.

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issue, Carponelli said:

Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

Faculty relations: "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college." Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 45, N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum, "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study," she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:

Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

Faculty Unionization. "Up to them." Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

Two seats open

Dist. 23 election uncontested

There are only two candidates running for two 3-year terms on the Prospect Heights Dist. 23 Board of Education elections April 10 — making it the only district in the Northwest suburbs with an uncontested election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Alan Krinsky and Sallyann Okuno.

Endorsements: None.

Stories by Pam Bigford

The Issues: Already operating at a deficit, Prospect Heights Dist. 23 board members are currently discussing ways of cutting the budget for the 1976-77 school year. Although staff cuts were proposed by one board member, the full board voted the proposal down and board members have not made public what other cuts they are considering.

Teachers in Dist. 23 recently joined the North Suburban Unified Bargaining Council, a coalition of elementary school teachers in the North and Northwest suburbs.

The Coalition will meet this week to determine what bargaining proposals member teacher unions will bring to the table this spring.

Alan Krinsky

Alan Krinsky, 38, of 2027 Rosehill, Arlington Heights, decided to seek his third term on the board because he believes he has "done a good job and that I can continue to do a good job." School board positions have to be filled, and he noted that there "were not too many volunteers this year."

Finances. "School is going to go on" no matter what happens, Krinsky said, but the state legislature is making it very difficult for school boards to plan their budgets.

"This whole finance thing depends on at what rate the state is going to fund us," Krinsky said. He said the district will not be in as bad financial shape if it is fully funded this year as it would be if funding were dropped 85 per cent, as has been rumored, he said.

Even if full funding is realized, the district will still be in some financial trouble this year because of declining enrollment, he said.

"We have only one small section of housing construction in the district, and the rest is apartments and condominiums, which just don't bring kids," he said.

Referendum. Krinsky does not believe passing a tax rate increase referendum would be of much value to the district generally although it might help in the building fund.

"We're already taxing at maximum in the education fund," he said, which would mean that if the tax rate were increased, the state would withhold some of its state aid.

Budget cuts. Krinsky said he has no desire to cut anything out of the budget, but if cuts had to be made, he would cut last those items which directly affect the educational process.

"I'm not saying we should cut administrators or maintenance or anything else, because those are really all part of education," he said, but the basic education of the students must be preserved.

While other districts have been considering elimination of art, music and physical education, Krinsky believes they are an integral part of the education system.

"Those courses give the kids a break. Part of their education is the culture they receive," he said.

Krinsky had no definite feelings concerning the effect of class size on the educational process. He said that "it depends on the teacher and the subject."

Teachers union. Krinsky said the teachers union has won the right to bargain, he is willing to deal with the teachers and he holds "no animosity" toward the union.

Communication. "I think the board has tried in every way to communicate with the public, but I don't know how successful it has been," Krinsky said. "We send home fliers with the kids after each board meeting, and we send the parents newsletters every quarter."

Sallyann Okuno

Sallyann Okuno is seeking her second term on the board because she believes it takes a board member one term "just to get into the swing of things."

Mrs. Okuno, 35, of 2 Garden Ct., Prospect Heights, said she is still interested in the board and in making decisions on the financial and educational concerns of the district.

Finances. Mrs. Okuno believes it will take "a long time" to reach a point where the district can operate without going into tax anticipation warrants, which is borrowing on the next year's anticipated tax revenues.

It is especially difficult to plan a budget for next year because "we don't know what aid will be coming from downstate, and so we can only assume — and hope our assumptions are right."

Referendum. "I don't think a referendum would pass," Mrs. Okuno said. "That's why we're talking about making some cutbacks. We don't want to go to more tax anticipation warrants."

Budget cuts. Mrs. Okuno disagrees with some district boards that are making extracurricular activities cutbacks before anything else.

"Extracurricular activities are part of the makeup of the district and are part of a well-rounded education," she said.

Mrs. Okuno would consider raising the average class size slightly to save money, but "I wouldn't want to go over 30 kids in a class. Each child is different and has individual needs." She said if declining enrollment shows "definite proof" that fewer teachers are needed, she would be willing to release some teachers. "But I want to keep the level of education where it is and I would want to be sure that there were really no positions available."

Sallyann Okuno

Mrs. Okuno would prefer "to modify" several programs rather than cutting one out completely. "We would have to see how much we could cut and still maintain the educational value."

Teachers union. "I think there is a lot of good rapport between the board and the union," Mrs. Okuno said. She said she knows the Dist. 23 teacher salaries "are lower than some other districts, but with the amount we have to work with, we're doing the best we can."

Communication. "I think we have had fairly open and good communication with the public," Mrs. Okuno said. "We send home newsletters after the board meetings, and people at board meetings are allowed to speak. But there's always room for improvement."

Aquarists share love affair for exotic fish collections

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Most people who love fish go to extremes. They either gush over Friday fish fry specials or resort to raising something like 10,000 exotic pet fish.

Then there are people like Troy Benson, who do both.

Benson is president of the Suburban Aquarists Society, a Mount Prospect-based group of about 100 area residents, many of whom are fanatics about raising and breeding fish, and most of them have no reservations about eating fish as part of a regular diet.

SOME OF THE more enthusiastic members name each of their pet fish and talk to them when it's feeding or tank-cleaning time. Others display their prize pets in odd-shaped fish bowls built into coffee tables, lamps or room dividers.

The organization, started in 1961, has become a focal point for those with diversified interest in fish collections.

Most of Benson's 10,000 pet fish, for instance, are angel and catfish which are kept in about 25 tanks placed throughout the first floor of his home. One of the largest tanks holds 160 gallons of water and is 8 feet long and 2 feet high, he said.

It's a chore raising that many fish — feeding them two to five times each day (depending on the kind of fish), cleaning the water every day, and completely cleaning the tanks every six months.

SOMETIMES THE tanks burst from the pressure and both fish and water end up on the living room floor, he said. It is a necessity to constantly watch the tanks, the water and the fish for a change in conditions or a change in their health.

So why even bother with the hobby? Why not just raise one or two common goldfish in a bowl and be satisfied?

"It's a challenge to grow and breed them. It's a good hobby and it's fun for the kids. I came home one day about 20 years ago from a fishing trip with some live fish and tried to keep them going for a while," Benson said.

"When they got too big, I just got some little ones and one thing led to another. I guess they make quiet, easy going pets," he said.

AND IF THERE'S one thing Benson knows for sure about fish after all this, it's that they are anything but dumb.

"You can train a fish to do tricks. I hold food out over their tanks and they jump out of the water, even over a stick or through a hoop, to grab it," Benson said.

"They can see me coming down the stairs into the room to feed them," he said. "They stick their noses to the glass and wag their fins back and forth wildly. They know what's going on."

Benson is hardly alone in his dotting over fish. Fish lovers from the Northwest suburbs, Chicago, as far northwest as Rockford and as far southwest as Downers Grove meet monthly to exchange takes.

THE GROUP meets every fourth Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Mount Prospect Country Club, 600 S. See-Gwun Ave., and requests a family membership of $10 a year ($8 for senior and $4 for junior members).

A lecture or movie pertaining to fish is always followed by the auctioning of members' fish at the monthly events.

The society offers a host of year-round social activities which include an area-wide fish auction that usually attracts more than 200 persons and provides an exchange of at least 3,000 fish, Benson said.

Most of the members exchange fish and work together on breeding techniques. Others merely study fish without ever raising any.

MEMBERS WHO raise or breed fish can spend from about $80 to several thousands of dollars in one year for supplies and equipment, he said.

"A fish can cost you from about 10 cents for the common, dimstore goldfish to about $300,000 for an Oriental Koi fish that has identical scale patterns on either of its sides," Benson said.

It can be a hobby or it can be a full-time job, but it is tied with photography as the most popular pastime in this country today, he said.

The hobby is as pleasurable for senior citizens as it is for teens whose interest can eventually lead them to a lifetime profession.

Masons plan Pancake Days

The Wheeling Masonic Lodge, 16 S. Milwaukee Ave., will sponsor its annual Pancake Days from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. today and Sunday.

The fee is $1.50 for an unlimited number of pancakes. Proceeds from the event will be used to fund the Masons' community programs.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement," Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauled rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Stavros refused sentence change

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification (Continued on Page 5)

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 18-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot box constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

Forest panel asks 1,260-acre purchase

The land acquisition committee of the Lake County Forest Preserve District has agreed to acquire more than 1,260 acres of land valued at an estimated $7.1 million.

The acquisition is the first phase of a four-part program that would add more than 2,500 acres of land to the county's forest preserves.

The district's attorneys are negotiating to purchase the properties in the first phase of the program. Final purchase approval of the land must be made by the entire forest preserve board of commissioners. Some of the properties may be the subject of lengthy condemnation suits, according to District Pres. George Bell of Mundelein.

Listed in Phase II of the plan are 316 acres of land and 57 urban lots with an appraised value of $3.3 million. Land in Phase II is to be acquired shortly, as soon as survey or other details can be completed, Bell said.

THE COMMITTEE is restudying Phase III for boundary revisions. Phase III includes 447 acres with an estimated value of $3.47 million.

Phase IV includes 1,508 acres with an estimated value of $11.97 million.

Bell said the district has enough money on hand to purchase land in the first three phases. The fourth phase has been deferred to consider financing, either through revenue bonds or through state and federal grants.

The sites slated for acquisition include:

- A 570-acre site near Lake Forest, east of Waukegan Road and running along the West Skokie River area from Everett Road to Deerfield High School.
- The Greenbelt extension, an area of 330 acres on each side of Green Bay Road, between Eighth and 14th streets and Lewis Avenue, near Waukegan and North Chicago.
- Lyons Woods, a 248-acre site west of Sheridan Road and north of Blanchard Road near Waukegan.
- A 523-acre site in Grant Township lying north of Rollins Road, south of Monaville Road and west of Fairfield Road.
- The countryside site, a 650-acre area located north and south of Hawley Road, west of Ill. Rte. 60 to the west of Mundelein.
- A 127-acre site north of Libertyville, at the northeast corner of

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

A dog's life is pretty good at motel

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Shean," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

Homesick.

Six contenders for four Dist. 96 posts

There are six candidates in Buffalo Grove-Long Grove Dist. 96 competing for four seats on the board in the April 10 election. Four candidates are running for three 3 year terms, with two seeking one 1-year term.

The Candidates: Three-year terms — Incumbents Clarke Walser, Linaya Back and Louis Lundstedt Jr. and newcomer William G. Papke Jr. One-year term — Newcomers Wayne R. Banasik and Jerry R. Parkin.

Stories by Katherine Boyce and Dorothy Oliver

Wayne Banasik

Dist. 96 is facing a period of growth and tight budgets in the next few years and Wayne Banasik believes he has the qualifications to meet those challenges.

With five years in the construction trades, Banasik has been involved in "many school projects," is experienced in code requirements for schools and has dealt with architects and contractors. At the same time, he points to a background in budget and financial planning with his company, and says he knows how to "live within a budget."

Banasik's interest in the board of education began with his involvement on the Dist. 96 fiscal committee where he looked into possible program cuts.

He said he is seeking the one-year term because "I'm not sure I can make the three-year commitment. I know I can make a one-year commitment."

Communications between the board and the community "could be better," he said. "The board will have to go further out of its way to inform the public." He doesn't believe the board operates in secrecy, and said "I think the community is generally satisfied with the district. They come out when they have a problem."

On other issues:
• Financial solutions. "Running the district at a deficit is bad; there's no way to catch up once you start. When

• Teachers. "To date, at least with every teacher I have met, the morale is high and I've never heard a bad word about the district," Banasik said he feels the current pay scale in the district is good and although salaries need to keep up with the cost of living "it boils down to what you can afford. The district must operate in a business-like fashion."

• Future growth. "Developers are hard to assess. The timing of the growth in the district is up to the control of others. You're at their mercy and the timing could be financially disastrous." The board should "aggressively seek to protect the interests of the district" by asking for donations from developers who build within the district. The board has done a "commendable job of planning to date." Planning must also be directed to growth projections, when equipment will need to be replaced and when schools should be constructed, he said.

the board is facing a large deficit they should start looking for inefficiencies. If program cuts are necessary they should look at items that are supplemental or complimentary to the education program.

"There are programs such as band and after-school activities that are not required items. I think the board should talk about that before increasing taxes."

• Referendum. "The referendum in the operations fund is absolutely necessary. There are no fudge factors in that fund and the deficit gets increasingly larger every year. I would rather see a referendum in the education fund and pay a little more taxes than cut education programs. If there is a referendum the board must make a concerted effort to inform the community, to present the facts."

Jerry Parkin

Jerry Parkin came out to Dist. 96 fiscal committee meetings when he heard the band and athletics programs in the district might be in jeopardy because of a possible district deficit.

"They were throwing out a lot of numbers that didn't look too good. I asked a lot of questions and didn't get straight answers."

"My son is in band and they were talking about doing away with band and athletics. I see these as important for social and musical progress and didn't want them thrown out," Parkin said.

PARKIN SAID he was surprised when suddenly the administration informed the board they would have more than a $100,000 surplus next year instead of the anticipated deficit.

His candidacy was sparked by his desire for some answers to his financial questions and his determination to "maintain band and intermural and maintain the academic level of the district."

Parkin is seeking a one-year term because "this is my first venture into anything like this. If, after a year, I see I'm doing any kind of a job I'll reevaluate whether I should run for a full term."

On other issues:
• Financial solutions. "The projections of anticipated income over the next three to four years show a deficit for a year or two and then some substantial surpluses. If the surplus figures are correct I see no reason why we can't operate at a deficit for one or two years. If there is no surplus we have to have a balanced budget."

• Referendum. Parkin supports the referendum for the operations fund. "Apparently inflation got further ahead of them than they anticipated. The money is needed to keep the schools open and I certainly support that." Parkin also would support a referendum in the education fund "if the money is needed. We should go for a referendum before cutting programs. If it fails then we can stull go back and cut."

• Teachers. Parkin said he would like to see a better relationship between the administration and teachers and the board and teachers. He said current salaries "seem to be up there with other schools. I would not want to see teachers underpaid."

• Future growth. "The district should get good numbers from developers... and should survey the people every couple of years to see how many kids will be coming into school. I'm not sure the board has good numbers now." Parkin said future buildings should have "walls and rooms. When you go into schools now it's like recess. Walls and doors can close out the noise."

• IGE. "The concept is excellent. The implementation of that concept in Dist. 96 is terrible. Everything tends to mediocrity. The kids are only pushed in band and intermural. They are not really being prepared for high schools. I've talked to a lot of graduates and many say they had a difficult time in high school, that they didn't have the basics."

Louis Lundstedt

Louis Lundstedt has had a taste of boardmanship in Dist. 96 and is now coming back for more.

Lundstedt was appointed to a vacancy on the board last December and is now seeking election to a three-year term. "I think that I can contribute. I enjoy it and I think I'm providing a service," he said.

Lundstedt has spelled out two goals which he hopes to accomplish as a board member. He would like to improve the report card system in the district to come up with "a student achievement reporting system that is understandable." The present system "does not satisfy anyone," he said.

LUNDSTEDT ALSO would like to solicit more community involvement into the school system. "The community has been asked to give suggestions to the board for improvements and modification." He hopes "that we do allow these people to provide suggestions and that we give them proper consideration. I don't think any member of the board or the administration can say I know everything and I don't need any advice."

Lundstedt was first attracted to the district through his concern over the IGE system of instruction. The system is now in its fourth year of a five-year implementation period, and he would like to participate in its evaluation when those five years are completed.

Louis Lundstedt

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. Lundstedt opposes deficit spending unless the budget is projected to have a surplus in the near future. Without that "light at the end of the tunnel" deficit spending is "fiscal suicide." When faced with a deficit and the necessity to reduce costs, "you keep the essentials and get rid of the frills." The essentials are "the basic instructional program."

• Referendum. Lundstedt is in favor of a referendum to increase taxes in the district's operations fund "whether we open Kildeer School or not" because the district needs the money to cover increased costs.

• Future growth. Careful evaluation of the projections given by builders is necessary to predict future enrollment, finances and needs. "You best not begin building schools unless you are awful sure you'll have kids to fill them," he said, but "you have a plan of action." As the district builds new schools Lundstedt believes they should be built in the traditional structure rather than open classrooms.

• Teachers. Lundstedt said he would not be opposed to working with a teachers union. He said he begins all new relationships on the premise that "each of us have mutual interests and concerns and we are intelligent people and can work out our differences." Dist. 96 has "very competitive salaries."

• IGE. "Philosophically I believe in IGE. My interpretation of IGE is to give a challenge to the motivated student and to give assistance to the less gifted." But Lundstedt still questions the way IGE is being implemented in Dist. 96. "I'm concerned as to whether or not the students are learning their basic skills and are prepared to go to high school."

Clarke Walser

"I think that Dist. 96 has done an excellent job of educating students, it's done an excellent job of financial management and it has been responsible to its various constituencies," said Clarke Walser, whose goal is "to help the district continue to do the kind of job it has been doing."

Quality education is the mastering of the basics, said Walser. Students should "learn to read fluently, to write and speak fluently and grammatically and to write legibly and to be able to perform basic arithmetic abilities with accuracy and dispatch," he said.

It is also "important that a child receive a basic grounding in history and social sciences" and understand the "relationship between peoples in countries around the world and in time."

TODAY STUDENTS also need "an understanding of the basics of science. In a technological society kids have to understand what physics and chemistry are all about."

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. "The first responsibility of any school district is to the kids," insuring that they receive a basic education. "I don't think you can separate our duty to the child to our responsibility to the financial objectives of the district." Without financial solvency, the district can't meet that obligation to its students, said Walser. Walser is opposed to deficit spending. "People, companies and government entities should live within their means," he said. Borrowing funds to meet current expenses hoping that revenue will increase in the future is "self-deluding," he said. "As revenue grows so does the student population and so do the expenses." A growing district that borrows funds is "constantly playing a catch-up game."

• Referendum. "I'm convinced that there is no alternative" to an increase in taxes in the district's operations fund to meet current and future expenses in operating schools. Walser is not ready to ask for an increase in taxes in the education fund, believing that that budget can be balanced over the next two years by trimming some costs.

• Future growth. "Dist. 96 is faced with some major challenges over the next few years to cope with the growth that is ahead of us and the financial problems that face us," said Walser. "The underlying problem the district is going to face is trying to draw the balance for expansion and yet not get too far ahead" of projections in finances and enrollment. "It takes two years to plan and build a school," he said, and the district must plan for this future growth. It must hire teachers and give them proper training to prepare for the increase in students.

• Teachers. Walser is not opposed to teacher unions. "I would feel comfortable working with any organization that has as its goal working the education of the kids." He hopes the relationship between the board and teachers never becomes "adversary. I'd like to think we have been forthright and open and honest with the teachers." Teacher salaries in Dist. 96 have increased. "Prior to the last couple of years teachers in Dist. 96 had a salary schedule that was at the low end of the salary schedule in the Northwest suburbs and Lake County. It is now not at the top end but higher than the median."

William Papke

"I have a vested interest in the school. Education is my life," said William Papke, who is running for the Dist. 96 Board because he feels "a moral obligation as the educational leader of the high school to get involved."

"I want to see the administration operate as an administration free from the threat that they are going to be second guessed on administrative decisions," Papke said. The board member is the community's representative in the school district, he said. "You do not run the school, you are not the superintendent, you are not the principal," he said. "The community has elected you as a board member," he said, but "Every decision you make should not put you up for a referendum. You have to vote your conscience."

Papke would like to see a unit district formed consolidating Stevenson High School's district with local elementary districts.

"IT CARRIES with it some real advantages administratively. It would save the taxpayers some money. The thing that will dictate it is the economics," he said.

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. Papke favors deficit financing. "There's really no alternative than to operate at a deficit. We still have to offer the services," he said. He said he would borrow funds to meet expenses because "I know the money is forthcoming." If the district does have to make cuts "the only way you can cut back and make a difference is personnel," by reducing the teaching staff. The staff is "90 per cent of your budget," he said. "I'm not opposed to increasing class sizes at certain areas."

• Referendum. "At this point I don't favor it. I don't feel we would be able to pass the referendum in the community," he said. The district can meet expenses by operating "at somewhat of a deficit."

• Future growth. The district must continue to maintain community support of the school system as the district grows. Parents "see the value of school and they are very much interested in seeing their children succeed in school." As the district builds new schools, Papke would like to see a return to the more traditional type of school building rather than open classrooms.

"I favor a more structured approach. There is a certain order and rigor in learning that the kids must pick up at an early age. I don't think they do it when they are flocked together 100 strong."

• Teachers. Papke sees the benefit of a teachers' union. There is "a cohesiveness in an organized staff," he said. "I don't think teachers as a group should sell themselves out. I'd like to see the image of teachers nationally raised." Items such as working conditions, salary and benefits "are certainly issues for collective bargaining," but educational issues should not be brought to the bargaining table because that is the role of the administration, he said.

• IGE. The IGE system is "a very fine way of selecting textbooks and choosing materials," Papke said, but he questions the open classroom concept associated with IGE. "The open concept will work but it is extremely difficult" to control the students,

Linaya Back

"I guess one of the things that concerns me about the Dist. 96 race is that we have such a young board," said Linaya Back, who will have seniority on the board with three years of experience if she is reelected.

Looking ahead to three more years on the board Mrs. Back has set several goals for herself.

"I would like to continue refining the individualized program" which is relatively new in the district, she said, and she hopes to continue "working on a little bit better assessment form better known as a report card." The training of the staff also is a concern of Mrs. Back who would like to "keep a high degree of professionalism of our teachers."

THE RELATIONSHIP between the board and community is "not as close as I would like," she said. The rapid turnover in the district's population is a "key problem" in keeping residents informed on the district and should be a matter for continuing concern.

Responses to questions on other topics:

• Finances. "I think the district should try to balance the budget annually," rather than engage in deficit spending. "We've had a tight budget for several years and we'll keep it tight." She agrees with the board's reduction of a nurse position. "Right now I don't think we need nurses," she said, favoring the replacement of registered nurses in the schools with health aides. position, which the board cut, is "valuable as an internship" for training future principals, but she would keep the position only if "I were absolutely certain that Kildeer School would open in mid-year" and a new principal would be needed. Cuts in the band, chorus and after school activities programs are another area considered for cuts but she said she would rather trim than eliminate these programs because they are "very difficult to build" in the schools.

• Referendum. An increase in taxes for the operations fund "is mandatory to pay the utility bills, some of which have gone up 30 per cent." To pass the referendum the board must "simply explain to people that the same thing is happening in the school budget as in the budget at home." Mrs. Back does not favor a tax increase in the education fund. "It is not necessary at this point."

• Future growth. As the district grows Mrs. Back is "interested in keeping the quality of education we have now which I consider high" and she would "continue to see that our staff has training before they get into the classroom." She also wants to "keep people in touch with their schools" in a "personal" way. Because the district will have to build more schools, she wants to insure that "developers donate usable land" for school sites, and that villages in the district pass ordinances making the donation of land a requirement for zoning approval.

• Teachers. "I would prefer to work with our local group of teachers rather than a unionized group. I respect our own teachers and their judgment of what is best for our own district."

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper Community College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli.

Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two things are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

SHE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

The Issues: Harper College this fall passed a referendum to enable the college to purchase land for a second campus near Schoenbeck and Palatine roads. The decision now lies with the board when to build on that land and what type of second campus is needed.

Gov. Daniel Walker during the primary campaign in March challenged the role of the community colleges, saying they offer too many "frills" by offering classes like painting and seminars.

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high school districts.

The faculty and board at Harper have faced continuing problems in salary negotiations, resulting in lawsuits and court injunctions. Contract negotiations for the 1976-77 school year broke down this week, with both sides declaring a stalemate.

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says:

Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of giving the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelor's degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal 41, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issue, Carponelli said:

Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

Faculty relations. "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college," Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 45, N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum, "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study," she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:

Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

Faculty Unionization. "Up to them." Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

Aquarists share love affair for exotic fish collections

by DIANE NERMIGAS

Most people who love fish go to extremes. They either gush over Friday fish fry specials or resort to raising something like 10,000 exotic pet fish.

Then there are people like Troy Benson, who do both.

Benson is president of the Suburban Aquarists Society, a Mount Prospect-based group of about 100 area residents, many of whom are fanatics about raising and breeding fish, and most of them have no reservations about eating fish as part of a regular diet.

SOME OF THE more enthusiastic members name each of their pet fish and talk to them when it's feeding or tank-cleaning time. Others display their prize pets in odd-shaped fish bowls built into coffee tables, lamps or room dividers.

The organization, started in 1961, has become a focal point for those with diversified interest in fish collections.

Most of Benson's 10,000 pet fish, for instance, are angel and catfish which are kept in about 25 tanks placed throughout the first floor of his home. One of the largest tanks holds 160 gallons of water and is 8 feet long and 2 feet high, he said.

It's a chore raising that many fish — feeding them two to five times each day (depending on the kind of fish), cleaning the water every day, and completely cleaning the tanks every six months.

SOMETIMES THE tanks burst from the pressure and both fish and water end up on the living room floor, he said. It is a necessity to constantly watch the tanks, the water and the fish for a change in conditions or a change in their health.

So why even bother with the hobby? Why not just raise one or two common goldfish in a bowl and be satisfied?

"It's a challenge to grow and breed them. It's a good hobby and it's fun for the kids. I came home one day about 20 years ago from a fishing trip with some live fish and tried to keep them going for a while," Benson said.

"When they got too big, I just got some little ones and one thing led to another. I guess they make quiet, easy going pets," he said.

AND IF THERE'S one thing Benson knows for sure about fish after all this, it's that they are anything but dumb.

"You can train a fish to do tricks. I hold food out over their tanks and they jump out of the water, even over a stick or through a hoop, to grab it," Benson said.

"They can see me coming down the stairs into the room to feed them," he said. "They stick their noses to the glass and wag their fins back and forth wildly. They know what's going on."

Benson is hardly alone in his doting over fish. Fish lovers from the Northwest suburbs, Chicago, as far northwest as Rockford and as far southwest as Downers Grove meet monthly to exchange tales.

THE GROUP meets every fourth Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the Mount Prospect Country Club, 600 S. See-Gwyn Ave., and requests a family membership of $10 a year ($8 for senior and $4 for junior members).

A lecture or movie pertaining to fish is always followed by the auctioning of members' fish at the monthly events.

The society offers a host of year-round social activities which include an area-wide fish auction that usually attracts more than 200 persons and provides an exchange of at least 3,000 fish, Benson said.

Most of the members exchange fish and work together on breeding techniques. Others merely study fish without ever raising any.

MEMBERS WHO raise or breed fish can spend from about $80 to several thousands of dollars in one year for supplies and equipment, he said.

"A fish can cost you from about 10 cents for the common, dimstore goldfish to about $300,000 for an Oriental Koi fish that has identical scale patterns on either of its sides," Benson said.

It can be a hobby or it can be a full-time job, but it is tied with photography as the most popular pastime in this country today, he said.

The hobby is as pleasurable for senior citizens as it is for teens whose interest can eventually lead them to a lifetime profession.

KEITH PETERSON, 15, of Des Plaines, said he has filled 12 tanks with fish in four years, and plans to major in ichthyology, the study of fish, in college.

He can identify everything from a quick reproducing guppy to a Lion fish with poisonous spines. He can tell you if a fish is cannibalistic or if its life expectancy is 10 or 20 years.

What Keith can't explain as easily is why he dreams about working in a Florida fish farm, researching and breeding fish.

Buckley and River roads.

The Cuba marsh site, south of Cuba Road and west of Elia Road, near Barrington, a 134-acre parcel.

Beil said that only two subdivisions will be affected by the acquisitions. Some district commissioners have criticized the land acquisition committee for choosing sites in the middle of large proposed developments, especially in the areas north of Libertyville and west of Mundelein.

"Although long-range development plans have reportedly been made for some areas, these plans are preliminary and largely speculative," Beil said.

"The presence of defined open space areas should clarify and encourage development in other appropriate areas of the county," Beil added.

CRITICS OF THE district have suggested that the district should hold a referendum before acquiring more land. Comr. Matthew Miholic of North Chicago is circulating a petition to get a referendum on the November ballot.

Land Acquisition Committee Chairman William Lea of Waukegan commented that the studies, appraisals and evaluations made by the committee "demonstrates that this is a proper function of elected officials and simply would not be an appropriate subject for a referendum."

Comr. Roland Sandee of Waukegan said the acquisitions would have little effect on the county tax base, because the open space will enhance the value of other properties in the county.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

Prison officials at Sanstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.

Stavros denied change in sentence

cation blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sanstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Joint land buy progress steady

Joint land buy progress steady

The Lake County Forest Preserve District and the Metropolitan Sanitary District are making headway in their plans to acquire 142 acres near Buffalo Grove.

The land is located west of Arlington Heights Road, north of the Lake-Cook county line, south of Checker Road and east of Schaffer Road. The property will be used as a retention area and possible picnic site, said Jerrold Soesbe, director of the Lake County Forest Preserve District.

Soesbe said both the MSD and the forest preserve district have taken formal action to purchase the property, most of which is owned by the Popp family. An appraiser has been hired.

Under the purchase agreement, the MSD will reimburse the forest preserve district for the purchase of the land, and would complete the engineering work. The forest preserve district would hold title to the land and maintain it.

Cleanup planned May 15 for Des Plaines River

The Des Plaines River in Lake County will be the subject of a cleanup campaign May 15, sponsored by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation.

Volunteers are being sought by the department to scour the area for cans, bottles and other debris in and alongside the stream bed.

The purpose of the program is not just beautification, according to Gary Erickson, a fishery biologist with the conservation department. Garbage recycling and education of the public are important, too, he said.

Erickson has obtained the cooperation of the Lake County highway and public works departments in removing debris.

RECYCLING OF bottles and cans will be done by the Anchor Hocking Glass Co. in Gurnee, Reynolds Aluminum and the National Can Co., according to Erickson.

Local fast food chains will be contacted to provide lunches for the volunteers.

Volunteers are to meet at 9 a.m. May 15 at a yet-to-be designated gathering place, for assignments and a short talk to better acquaint them with the river.

Areas of the river at Ill. Rte. 173, Wadsworth Road in Gurnee, and Ill. Rte. 120 are to be emphasized.

Scouting, church, school, environmental, sporting and service organizations all are being sought for help in the cleanup, Erickson said. Canoe trips are planned before the cleanup to identify particularly littered or troublesome areas.

Erickson is the coordinator of the project, and can be reached at 815-675-2387.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement," Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Unit plan to aid only '59': study

by JUDY JOBBITT

The proposed unit school district for the Elk Grove Township Dist. 39 area would be financially beneficial to that area but would hurt the remaining portion of High School Dist. 214, according to figures presented to the Dist. 39 citizens committee.

The figures also showed the possibility of the proposed unit district having a balanced budget with a lower tax rate than would be needed to balance the budgets of Dist. 214 and Dist. 59.

The figures show the combined tax rates for Districts 214 and 59 would have to be $5.32 per $100 assessed valuation next year for the budget to balance, but the proposed unit district would only need a tax rate of $4.83 per $100 assessed valuation for a balanced budget.

THE ILLINOIS SCHOOL Consultants, hired by Dist. 59 to provide information on forming a unit district, also presented projections showing the proposed unit district needing a tax rate of $6.21 for a balanced budget by the 1980-81 school year and Districts 214 and 59 needing a combined tax rate of $8.78 for a balanced budget that year.

If Dist. 59 formed a unit district, the remaining Dist. 214 area also would need to increase its tax rate by about 56 cents by the 1980-81 school year for a balanced budget above the needed increase for the current Dist. 214 area to have a balanced budget that year.

According to the report, the proposed unit district could set a higher tax rate despite the state's requirement for the high school district to cut

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velvet wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in a place.

Creek, Gillette backed in Dist. 211

by PAM BIGFORD

Incumbent Robert Creek and newcomer Richard Gillette have been chosen as the "best qualified" candidates in the April 10 school board election by High School Dist. 211 union's political action committee.

Creek, 1603 Appleby, Inverness, who is board president, and Gillette, 311 W. Daniels Rd., Palatine, received letters from the committee stating they were "the best qualified of the three candidates" but that the committee was not able to endorse them because of some of their positions on issues affecting teachers.

A third candidate, Glenn Hargrave, 471 Creekwood Dr., Palatine, is also running for the board. Two three-year terms are open.

GILLETTE AND CREEK appeared before the union political action committee and spoke on school issues. Hargrave was unable to appear.

The letter to Gillette said that the committee found him to be "well-qualified, informed and of an independent mind. We feel the board could use a person of your qualification. Our differences on a few of your positions, such as merit pay, regrettably keeps the association from a full endorsement."

Union Pres. George Stewart said he could not comment on the letters until he had informed the union membership of what position had been taken.

Stewart told the Herald last week, however, that the union "is not interested in a lot of changes" on the board this year. He said the district "is one of the few in good financial shape, and for a lot of that we have to be thankful to Mr. Creek."

Gillette said the letter offered no support through campaigning or contributions.

CREEK SAID he had "mixed emotions" about this letter, which he said stated the committee "agreed with me on everything except locking everything into a contract. I am totally opposed to putting class size, working conditions and that kind of thing into a contract agreement." He said the district had never received any serious grievances on those subjects.

Creek said that on the whole he was "pleased." He said the letter did not seem to be coming from the teachers as a group, but from the teachers as an organized labor union.

The union took an active part in the campaign last year, endorsing Jody Albrecht, who was the top vote-getter in the election, and Dewane Barnes, who lost.

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high-risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Shean," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

Dist. 54 to protest zone change

by PAM BIGFORD

The Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education and administration will protest the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission's recommendation to zone commercial a planned school site in Moon Lake Village at the Hoffman Estates Village Board meeting Monday.

Dist. 54 officials said Thursday they need the site that has been recommended to be zoned commercial because it is on the west side of Moon Lake Village where the district needs a school. If they do not get that site, they will be left with an eastern site which they say is unacceptable because it is only 2 1/2 blocks from another school.

The plan commission is scheduled to present its recommendation on the issue to the village board for approval at the Monday meeting.

BOARD MEMBER Edward Bedard said original projections showed that the Moon Lake Village area, bound by Golf, Higgins and Barrington Roads, would need two school sites, and the complex developers had offered the board one on the east and one on the west ends of the subdivisions.

However, Bedard said, "When a golf course was put in the middle of the area, the need for two schools no longer existed."

Instead of giving the school board the choice of picking one of the locations, the plan commission agreed to zone the west side commercial so that the developers would agree to donate a farm site on the east end to the Poplar Creek Historical Society for a historical museum.

Bedard said that the board "is not opposed to the historical museum. We were willing to say that if the only way the historical museum site could be obtained was for us to give up one site, we were willing to give one up. But we need a usable school site, and the east site is not a usable site."

THE PROBLEM is Dist. 54 already has a school located only two blocks from the east site. That school is Armstrong School, 155 N. Kingsdale, Hoffman Estates.

Board member Sherry Reynolds said the district needs "a school and a half to handle the population from Moon Lake Village. We've got half of a school by using some space at Armstrong.

"But if the other school is going to be only two blocks from Armstrong, then we would have a situation where kids would be walking right past the new school to get to Armstrong. The majority of the kids going to the new school and to Armstrong will be coming from west of both schools," she said.

Bedard said accepting the east site would be defeating the board's policy of establishing neighborhood schools. Students can walk to from their homes. He said because of the layout of the subdivision, some of the children near Barrington Road would be living more than a mile and a half away, and the district would have to bus them to school.

erably better because at least we would have the area bracketed, and the kids could walk to both schools," Bedard said.

What the board really wanted, Bedard said, was a centrally-located school site, but the developer did not offer one.

"The central area is the prime area overlooking the golf course. In order to get in there, we would be chewing up some prime land, and we aren't trying to do that," Bedard said. "We're just trying to get a usable site."

Administration officials said the protest will be for "the principle of the thing." The board and administration have the responsibility to find the best school site in their power and not just settle for a site they are given at random, they said.

its tax rate. Dist. 214 currently is required by the state to cut its tax rate, although the residents have approved a higher tax rate.

The consultants also presented figures showing a Unit Dist. 59 having a cumulative deficit of about $9.7 million by the 1980-81 school year if the maximum tax rate of $3.93 per $100 assessed valuation is used. Dist. 59 would have a deficit of about $10.7 million by that year.

DIST. 214 WOULD have a deficit of about $43.8 million by the 1980-81 school year and a deficit of about $38.9 million if Dist. 59 withdrew and formed a unit district.

In addition, Dist. 214 would have to give the proposed unit a percentage of the total high school district's assets, which would be about $10 million in addition to the two high schools in the proposed district's area.

The figures also show Dist. 214 would have $1,722 available per student next year under the current set-up but would only have $1,627 available per student if Dist. 59 formed a unit district.

The figures also show the unit district would have $2,196 per student on the high school level next year.

The charts also show the Dist. 59 area is paying about $2.161 per high school student compared to the general Dist. 214 rate of $1,410 per student. The Dist. 59 area has about 27 per cent of the total Dist. 214 student body and has about 40 per cent of the high school's assessed valuation.

The report stated that the proposed unit district's board also could divide the total per pupil resources differently than currently is divided between Dist. 214 and Dist. 59 and spend more on elementary students.

Dist. 214 currently spends about 54 per cent more per pupil than Dist. 54. This difference is comparable with other high school districts and their feeder elementary districts.

Four seek three-year terms in Dist. 59

There are four candidates for three 3-year terms in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Emil Bahnmaier, Erwin Poklacki and Judy Zanca. Newcomer Charles Canupp Jr.

Endorsements: None.

The Issues: The Dist. 59 board has wrestled with money problems all year and now is discussing what the impact of a balanced budget will have on the district. The district has been operating at a deficit for more than 15 years and the board was forced to borrow money by issuing teachers orders, a form of script, to pay the faculty for several months.

The board also successfully passed a tax rate increase referendum this year, but sees a need for another down the road if the financial picture does not improve.

Also at issue is the unit district study now under way by a citizen's committee, the unit district would combine elementary and high schools under one board and administration and would require two of the high schools now operated by High School Dist. 214.

Teachers in the district have grown increasingly aggressive in contract negotiations over the years and are now closely watching the board to see if staff cutbacks go beyond an amount which would be in proportion to the 4 per cent of declining enrollment in the district.

The board this year also introduced the concept of converting one of the district schools into an alternative school, where a more traditional structured approach to education would be stressed. Although the community opposed the idea in a series of public hearings, the board is interested in investigating the concept further.

Erwin Poklacki

"I have experience to bring to the board that is needed at this time," said Erwin Poklacki, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board candidate.

Poklacki, who was appointed to the board last summer, also served on the board from 1971-74. He said through "the experience of being a board member you learn what is the best thing to do despite what the taxpayers think. It's sometimes a difficult, lonely situation."

He said during his years on the board he has come to realize "communications with the community will always be a problem. I don't see any solution to the problem" because the "education language must be learned."

POKLACKI SAID he also advocates looking into alternative schooling options in Dist. 59. "I pushed my fellow board members into this alternative school thing this year. It didn't turn out the way I'd hoped it would," he said. The alternative school was voted down for next year.

He said the major problem in holding hearings on the alternative school idea was that parents didn't realize it wouldn't jeopardize the programs in the regular schools.

On other issues Poklacki said:

• Deficit spending. Poklacki said he favors deficit spending. Before cutting programs, he said he would go into deficit spending because budget cuts "should mean a less educated student coming out of our schools." He said "deficit spending can be handled very efficiently. It's easier than raising the tax level."

• Budget cuts. "We shouldn't go into panic cutting of programs at this time," he said he is "very happy with the way the district is handling budget cuts — a little from everything — rather than cutting total programs." He wants the board to "make a commitment now" about what it will do if it faces an inflation factor greater than 5 per cent, the figure used in setting the current budget. Poklacki said he voted against the recent bud-et cuts "in principle" because all areas were cut at least 4 per cent, including special education, which is not suffering declining enrollment.

• Closing schools. "It won't come for a few years. I'm not in favor of pushing it, but if there is no program in a school to keep it open, it should be closed. The majority has to be served."

• Teachers strikes. "It's very possible, especially this year, to have a strike in Dist. 59. All the ingredients are there." He said if a strike hits the district, he would continue negotiating, close schools and seek mediation.

• Teachers unions. "It hasn't provided any benefits to the district or teachers for the last number of years. Probably the salaries would have been about the same without negotiations — a salary he says is "equitable." He said the union, however, doesn't necessarily represent the teachers.

Charles Canupp

Charles Canupp decided to challenge the three incumbents up for reelection to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education because of his interest in the district.

"It was projected to be an uncontested race and I have had a great interest in Dist. 59 — my two children. I wanted to take the opportunity to get more involved in the decision making of the district," he said.

Canupp said one of his "prime" goals is to improve communications between the board and the community.

"I want to get more public involvement with the board," he said. Canupp suggested that the board send out newsletters more often and questionnaires to get residents' suggestions. He also wants information about the topics to be discussed at board meetings available to the public in advance to "help get the people out to meetings."

Canupp said the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic are the most important subjects taught in the elementary schools because they set the base for future study. He advocates a "curriculum that would best give a strong education that would let children expand as they get older."

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "I would like to move toward a balanced budget. The cost of borrowing money can get quite expensive." He said he wants to get a date for "getting the district in the black" and work to meet it.

• Budget cuts. He said he would "have to really get into the details and look at what areas could survive a cutback." If programs had to be cut back, he said he would "pick a program with as little impact as possible" and avoid touching the basics.

Charles Canupp

He said the district should also look at the individual schools and assess their needs when cutting back staff and other areas rather than taking "one That is the worst mistake you can make."

• Closing schools. When a school's enrollment drops to about 50 per cent of its capacity, the district should "implement a study to see what would be the most economical way to go" — closing it or maintaining it, he said.

• Referendum. He said all sources of revenue should be examined to see if there is "an alternative source of money" before the board tries for a tax rate increase. "If referendum is the only way to get out of deficit, then pursue it."

Judith Zanca

The problems confronting school boards from declining enrollment and rising costs to dropping revenue require "experienced board members to be around," says Judith Zanca who is running for her third 3-year term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 board.

"I've been on the board six years and feel I've done a good job I want to continue," she said.

She said one of the major accomplishments during her time on the board was firing former Supt. James Ervitt. "I don't know if it is something to be proud of but it was necessary."

MRS. ZANCA SAID she is pleased with the current administration under Supt. Roger Bardwell. "We have an administration that is more responsive to the community," she said.

She also feels the current board is "responsive to what we hear from the community. Our phones are in tune."

The board also is planning to hold community forums every three months to answer questions and listen to problems. She said she hopes this program will bring more parents in contact with the board.

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "We're at the mercy of inflation and negotiation settlements. I don't know how we can get out of part of our revenue being tax anticipation warrants," a form of borrowed money. She said the board is "going to strive to make the bottom dollar balance" but still needs to borrow.

• Budget cuts. She said the "largest place to save money is with the teacher ration." By increasing the student/teacher ratio by one, she said the district could save about $250,000. She said the board also developed a list of "27 sacred cows" that would have a "terrible effect" on the district if cut. She said "before attacking the 27 cows, there must be input from the community, principals and teachers."

• Closing schools. "When enrollment gets below 130 kids at a school, we would have to consider closing schools." She said she is not in favor of changing school boundaries to enable the district to close a school.

Judith Zanca

• Alternative schools. "In the 60s, everyone said there is only one way of learning. I do not believe that. We must offer the alternatives." She said the district should offer a range of teaching styles from a very structured program to an open school setup.

• Teachers strikes. If Dist. 59 confronted a teachers strike, Mrs. Zanca said she would "keep the schools open. I don't think the community would stand for closing the schools." She said she would continue negotiating and would not seek a court injunction to get teachers back in school.

• Teachers unions. "The only issue I ever hear about is money and now some about job security. We also don't hear from anybody but the leadership." She said Dist. 59 teachers are paid "just about right. We're competitive with our neighbors."

Emil Bahnmaier

Emil Bahnmaier wants to "keep the good things in this district" as he seeks a second term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board.

"I've learned a lot about Dist. 59 and education during the last three years. I've done my apprenticeship," he said. "We're going to be going into a rough year. Experience is going to be invaluable."

He would like the district to do more evaluation of programs. "I want to see if we are getting maximum education value out of a program or if other programs are better," he said.

ONE AREA he feels has improved during his term on the board is the board's contacts with the community.

"I think we have opened up. I like to think I was part of that because I came on the board with a hangup about it," he said.

He would like to improve the board's communication further by setting up parent advisory committees at each school. "They would be advisory, to bring the views of the community into the schools," he said.

He also is pleased with the establishment of a gifted program for talented students in various areas. He sees the "talented program as a way to have fall-out to the regular classroom" on special programs and indivisualized instruction.

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "Right now there is no way out of tax anticipation warrants," a method of borrowing money, he said. "We hope for, and I support, a balanced budget for this year but the balanced budget depends on the outcome of teacher negotiations."

• Budget cuts. The first area to cut back would be the teaching staff, he said. Bahnmaier said he would consider increasing the student/teacher ration to cut back on the number of teachers needed. "Only when that would hurt the education would I touch any education programs. Our special programs are things that make our district unique."

Emil Bahnmaier

• Closing schools. "The present position is we would not close them down until enrollment reaches 125 students. It is conceivable the time will arrive when it will be financially unfeasible to keep a school open."

• Unit district. "I think the taxpayers should have the right to determine if they want a unit district. I lean towards a unit district. I have seen figures that show financial advantages" for Dist. 59 forming a unit district.

• Referendum. He said the earliest he would ask the taxpayers to support a tax rate increase would be during the 1979-80 school year.

Judge refuses to 'correct' Stavros' jail sentence

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sandstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

• Prison officials at Sandstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.

"WHAT IT (the inquiry) effectively did for us was create an aura of special handling . . . a red flag," Benson said. When Stavros received his furlough he was warned by prison officials to avoid the "public eye" and newspaper reporters.

• Lexington prison officials searched Stavros and his belongings for a reported list of furloughs and parole releases that Stavros was collecting as evidence of unfair treatment.

• That Stavros sued the federal government in a Minnesota court under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act for release of prison and parole board documents.

Will's decision Friday could lead to another hearing if the parole board denies Stavros' release in July. The hearing will come as Stavros completes his second year in prison.

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper Community College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli. Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two things are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

SHE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

The Issues: Harper College this fall passed a referendum to enable the college to purchase land for a second campus near Schoenbeck and Palatine roads. The decision now lies with the board when to build on that land and what type of second campus is needed.

Gov. Daniel Walker during the primary campaign in March challenged the role of the community colleges, saying they offer too many "frills" by offering classes like painting and seminars.

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high school districts.

The faculty and board at Harper have faced continuing problems in salary negotiations, resulting in lawsuits and court injunctions. Contract negotiations for the 1976-77 school year broke down this week, with both sides declaring a stalemate.

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says:

Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of giving the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelors' degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal 41, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issues, Carponelli said:

Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

Faculty relations. "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college," Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 450 N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum, "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study," she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:

Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

Faculty Unionization. "Up to them." Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

Three running for two 3-year seats in Dist. 211

There are three candidates running for two 3-year terms on the High School Dist. 211 Board of Election in elections April 10.

The Candidates: Incumbent Robert Creek and newcomers Richard Gillette and Glenn Hargrave.

Endorsements: The Dist. 211 teachers union found Creek and Gillette "best qualified" of the three candidates.

The Issues: Dist. 211 will open its newest high school next year and will be closing Palatine High School. The board must now decide what to do with the facility. Several government bodies in Palatine have expressed an interest in the old school, but negotiations have not formally started.

The board directed the administration to prepare a "survival test" to give students each year they are in Dist. 211 schools. The test will cover the basics the district wants students to know before they graduate from high school.

Alternative education programs have been increasing in the district, with a program added to serve pregnant students and another held at The Bridge youth center in Palatine for students who don't cope well with the typical high school program.

The district is one of the few districts in the area that

Richard Gillette

Richard Gillette wants to be on the Dist. 211 school board to promote community involvement and make sure the district remains in good financial shape.

Gillette, 41, of 311 W. Daniels, Palatine, was defeated in his bid for election last year, but said he still has his interest in the board and has been following the board's activities throughout this year. He believes his educational background and his business experience and decision-making abilities would be assets to his performance as a board member.

Gillette is project manager of high technology development programs for the Northrop Corp. He is married, has four children and has lived in the district for five years.

Back to Basics. The survival testing is good, Gillette said, as long as it isn't aimed solely at those students who are going to college. "We are at a point where we have to emphasize precollege education, as well as pre-college education. Students are now less disposed to go to college than at any time in the recent past," he said.

While Gillette favors stressing basic educational subjects, he believes that the over-all course offering must be well-balanced. "The kids who need education the most won't stay in school if there's only reading, writing and arithmetic," he said, noting that he has been particularly impressed by consumer education, which "is really a part of living."

Alternative education. "If you force a disruptive student to come to class, then you are taking away education from others," Gillette said. "You should offer some alternative education, if you can."

"The offer should be there," he said, "but if it gets to the point where you have to spend a large amount of dollars to capture a very small audience, it might be different. But the point where we are now is not excessive."

Old Palatine High School. "As a board member, I would have been down at the village, showing them that $2 or $3 million would be a reasonable price for that land if it were used for planned unit development," Gillette said. "If it is zoned only for single-family housing, the $1 million is reasonable. . . . As a seller, I don't think the board has done what it should in a buyer's market to unload it."

Finances. "I see other districts in crises because of budgets planned around state aid," Gillette said, "and I can't believe the impact can be so great on the others and so small on Dist. 211."

Teachers union. "The union is a fact of life and it's not going to change," Gillette said. "We have to balance the demands of the community of those of the teachers."

Gillette favors mediation if negotiations have reached a standstill. He said if the teachers did go on strike, he would continue negotiating until a settlement was reached.

Communication. Gillette said there should be more background information provided for people who attend board meetings, and there should also be a time during the meetings when citizens can talk to the board without having to call in advance to be put on the agenda.

Glenn Hargrave

Glenn Hargrave said his top priority for the board of education is "curriculum." He said the board should be aware of what is happening in all areas of the educational process so "drastic stop-gap measures" will not have to be made if the district runs into financial problems in the future.

Hargrave, 49, of 471 Creekwood Dr., Palatine, who was on the board before his defeat last year, said he can see other districts "feeling the crunch" financially and said "the peak will eventually come" to Dist. 211.

Hargrave is the president of his own sales company. He is married, has two children and has lived in the district 20 years.

Back to basics. Hargrave regards the board's emphasis on basic education "very favorable," and would like to see the emphasis carried through to other subjects besides math and English. He would like to see close evaluation of the district's course offerings to determine what areas could be expanded or eliminated.

"Now that we've got the construction referendum through, and we don't have to spend time on negotiations, the board ought to take the time to look at their real job — education," Hargrave said.

Alternative education. Hargrave agrees that the district ought to provide some alternative education programs "as long as we can afford it. We can try to be too many things to too many people, though. That's why we should evaluate our offerings so we know what we could trim if we had to. I do feel that there are some areas where we ought not to be as long as there are social service agencies."

Hargrave said he hates to see a student "kicked out of school when he's lost interest — it's up to us to provide" something that will interest him. "Some students are irrevocable, but if alternative education can help half of them, then it's worth it," he said.

Old Palatine High School. "I remain on record that I would like to see every avenue explored to keep that building in the public domain," Hargrave said. "I think there's a use for it, and the village ought to look at it. One million dollars is a steal — that land is worth that much."

Finances. Hargrave said he is "committed to a balanced budget." The Board has been trying to "keep on top of the situation by looking as far down the road as possible."

Hargrave said, according to the last study he saw of the district, the building program "is in pretty good shape until about 1982. The new high school should take care of us."

Teachers union. Hargrave is in favor of collective bargaining and said the teachers' salaries "are priced in there about right, given the area in which we live." He said he does not like being "jockeyed into a salary schedule" because that means "we can't reward teachers on merit."

If the teachers ever went on strike, Hargrave said his "reaction would be tempered by the reaction of the community, whether they were behind the board or the teachers."

Communication. The way the board communicates with the public is "in direct relation to the way the public communicates with the board," Hargrave said. "I never considered myself inaccessible."

Robert Creek

Incumbent board member Robert Creek, who has been president of the board since his election in 1970, said he believes his most significant accomplishment was "bringing some business methods to a place that didn't have many. I can't fault my predecessors because the district grew so fast. But I tried to bring the finances into line."

Creek, 49, of 1603 Appleby Rd., Inverness, said "experience on the board is worth something," and believes his appointment as the 12th Congressional District's representative to the Federal Relations Network is valuable for the district. The network is a lobbyist group which promotes the National School Board Association's goals in Washington, D.C.

His work on the school board gives him a "sense of accomplishment," Creek said, particularly when new programs are instituted. Student-board rap sessions, alternative education and survival testing were some of the new programs begun since Creek has been board president.

CREEK IS vice president administration of Union Oil Co. He has lived in the district 10 years, is married and has four children.

Back to basics. "I think the survival tests stem from the interest of the board, and I have strong feelings about them," Creek said. "We have all sorts of special interest curriculums and somehow we seem to have lost emphasis on the three R's." Even though he would like more emphasis on basic education, he said the board is not trying "to deliberately reduce the curriculum."

Alternative education. "It's not really that big of a movement in the district," Creek said, but he is strongly in favor of the alternate class for pregnant teenagers and the program at The Bridge. He said he has no statistics to back up his theory, but he speculated that the 20 students who went to The Bridge this year would have either dropped out or appeared before the board for disciplinary action if The Bridge had not been available.

Old Palatine High School. Creek said he hopes the village can find a way to use the building, but if not, "we'll put it up for bid." He said the $1 million figure for the land and building is a fair price.

Finances. "If Springfield would do what it said it would (fully fund the state's promised share of education) and leave it at that, then I don't see any trouble in the future for Dist. 211," Creek said. If the state continues not to fund its share of the education budget, then the district's financial future is "anybody's guess," he said.

Creek said the board is keeping a close watch on the budget, constantly looking about five years ahead.

Teachers union. The teachers union and the board "are usually working for the same objectives," Creek said.

Teachers in the district have never gone on strike, but if they did, Creek said he would try to keep the schools open and would continue to negotiate. He said he would favor mediation by a neutral third party — "we've been to it twice." The federal mediation board is super.

Communication. Creek believes communication between the board and the public is a "problem," partly because the district is spread over parts of several different towns. The new Dist. 211 Club, composed of members of parents clubs from the five high schools, may help the communication problem, Creek said.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement..." Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Dist. 54 officials plan to protest zone change

by PAM BIGFORD

The Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education and administration will protest the Hoffman Estates Plan Commission's recommendation to zone commercial a planned school site in Moon Lake Village at the Hoffman Estates Village Board meeting Monday.

Dist. 54 officials said Thursday they need the site that has been recommended to be zoned commercial because it is on the west side of Moon Lake Village where the district needs a school. If they do not get that site, they will be left with an eastern site which they say is unacceptable because it is only 2 1/2 blocks from another school.

The plan commission is scheduled to present its recommendation on the issue to the village board for approval at the Monday meeting.

BOARD MEMBER Edward Bedard said original projections showed that the Moon Lake Village area, bound by Golf, Higgins and Barrington Roads, would need two school sites, and the complex developers had offered the board one on the east and one on the west ends of the subdivisions.

However, Bedard said, "When a golf course was put in the middle of the area, the need for two schools no longer existed."

Instead of giving the school board the choice of picking one of the locations, the plan commission agreed to zone the west side commercial so that the developers would agree to donate a farm site on the east end to the Poplar Creek Historical Society for a historical museum.

Bedard said that the board "is not opposed to the historical museum. We were willing to say that if the only way the historical museum site could be obtained was for us to give up one site, we were willing to give one up. But we need a usable school site, and the east site is not a usable site."

THE PROBLEM is Dist. 54 already has a school located only two blocks from the east site. That school is Armstrong School, 155 N. Kingsdale, Hoffman Estates.

Board member Sherry Reynolds said the district needs "a school and a half to handle the population from Moon Lake Village. We've got half of a school by using some space at Armstrong."

"But if the other school is going to be only two blocks from Armstrong, then we would have a situation where

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velvet wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

"PETE" THE RACCOON was a problem patron. He got out of a large monkey cage by prying back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Shean," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Tender loving care, just like home.

Homesick.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

For a pampered poodle, nothing but the best.

Judge refuses to 'correct' Stavros' jail sentence

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sandstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

- Prison officials at Sandstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.

- "WHAT IT" (the inquiry) effectively did for us was create an aura of special handling . . . a red flag," Benson said. When Stavros received his furlough he was warned by prison officials to avoid the "public eye" and newspaper reporters.

- Lexington prison officials searched Stavros and his belongings for a reported list of furloughs and parole releases that Stavros was collecting as evidence of unfair treatment.

- That Stavros sued the federal government in a Minnesota court under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act for release of prison and parole board documents.

- Will's decision Friday could lead to another hearing if the parole board denies Stavros' release in July. The hearing will come as Stavros completes his second year in prison.

Creek, Gillette backed in Dist. 211

by PAM BIGFORD

Incumbent Robert Creek and newcomer Richard Gillette have been chosen as the "best qualified" candidates in the April 10 school board election by High School Dist. 211 union's political action committee.

Creek, 1603 Appleby, Inverness, who is board president, and Gillette, 311 W. Daniels Rd., Palatine, received letters from the committee stating they were "the best qualified of the three candidates" but that the committee was not able to endorse them because of some of their positions on issues affecting teachers.

A third candidate, Glenna Hargrave, 471 Creekwood Dr., Palatine, is also running for the board. Two three-year terms are open.

GILLETTE AND CREEK appeared before the union political action committee and spoke on school issues. Hargrave was unable to appear.

The letter to Gillette said that the committee found him to be "well-qualified, informed and of an independent mind. We feel the board could use a person of your qualification. Our differences on a few of your positions, such as merit pay, regrettably keeps the association from a full endorsement."

Union Pres. George Stewart said he could not comment on the letters until he had informed the union membership of what position had been taken.

Stewart told the Herald last week, however, that the union "is not interested in a lot of changes" on the board this year. He said the district "is one of the few in good financial shape, and for a lot of that we have to be thankful to Mr. Creek."

Gillette said the letter offered no support through campaigning or contributions.

CREEK SAID he had "mixed emotions" about this letter, which he said stated the committee "agreed with me on everything except locking everything into a contract. I am totally opposed to putting class size, working conditions and that kind of thing into a contract agreement." He said the district had never received any serious grievances on those subjects.

Creek said that on the whole he was "pleased." He said the letter did not seem to be coming from the teachers as a group, but from the teachers as an organized labor union.

The union took an active part in the campaign last year, endorsing Jody Albrecht, who was the top vote-getter in the election, and Dewane Barnes, who lost.

kids would be walking right past the new school to get to Armstrong. The majority of the kids going to the new school and to Armstrong will be coming from west of both schools," she said.

Bedard said accepting the east site would be defeating the board's policy of establishing neighborhood schools students can walk to from their homes. He said because of the layout of the subdivision, some of the children near Barrington Road would be living more than a mile and a half away, and the district would have to bus them to school.

"THE WEST SITE would be considerably better because at least we would have the area bracketed, and the kids could walk to both schools," Bedard said.

What the board really wanted, Bedard said, was a centrally-located school site, but the developer did not offer one.

"The central area is the prime area overlooking the golf course. In order to get in there, we would be chewing up some prime land, and we aren't trying to do that," Bedard said. "We're just trying to get a usable site."

Administration officials said the protest will be for "the principle of the thing." The board and administration have the responsibility to find the best school site in their power and not just settle for a site they are given at random, they said.

Township library opening fete today

The Schaumburg Township Public Branch Library, 469 Hassell Rd., will have its grand opening ceremonies today at 10 a.m., Director Michael Madden said.

The branch library, converted from a Hoffman Estates firehouse, has officially been operating since Monday.

Madden said public officials from Schaumburg and Hoffman Estates have been invited to the opening ceremony.

An open house will be held at the library from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. during which people may inspect the building and ask questions.

The branch library originally was scheduled to be open late last year, but problems in renovations repeatedly postponed the opening until April.

Six in running for three Dist. 15 posts

Six candidates are running for three seats on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. Board of Education in the April 10 election. Two of the candidates are competing for a one-year term and four are seeking the two 3-year terms.

The Candidates: One-year term — Incumbent Irene Sjostedt and newcomer E. Erie Jones. Three-year terms — Incumbent Leland Gibbs and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Anne Koller and Norman Knapp.

Stories by Diane Granat
and Joanne Van Wye

Norman Knapp

Norman Knapp decided to run for the Dist. 15 Board of Education because he wanted to do something of community service.

Knapp entered the Palatine Library Board and Dist. 15 board race last month, but he said he withdrew from the library race when he saw there would be a conflict in the monthly meeting times.

Knapp said he decided to remain in the school board contest because he has children in the Dist. 15 schools and "there is a lot more challenge there."

There is a need for more communication between the school board and the community, Knapp said. He feels that parents and taxpayers do not receive enough information from the board at meetings.

"The board should not hold mass meetings to deal with large budgets," he said. Knapp suggests using the local PTAs as a sounding board for citizen opinions on the budget.

On other issues:

- School financing. "The district should work toward a balanced budget. I'm against a tax increase, but if I felt the budget cuts jeopardized the education our children are now receiving, I would favor it."

- Budget cutbacks. Knapp said special education programs should not be hearings, "the people in the audience were sitting there with no information and the board had all the information." He said parents and taxpayers should give the board guidelines where to make cuts. He suggested using the PTAs to achieve greater citizen participation.

- Teacher unions. "Teachers have a right to negotiate and form a collective bargaining unit. I do not agree with the teachers' right to strike."

- Quality education. Knapp said there should be a set number of required courses and some optional courses in Dist. 15, similar to the high schools. Required courses should be English, mathematics, science, social studies and physical education, he said. "I'd like to see more after-school activities and more social events for the kids on the junior high school level," Knapp said.

cut. "There can be cuts in areas where the individual parent can assume the expense," citing book fees as an example.

- Cardinal Drive School. "Schools should be in the area where the children live. If it was economically sound to close Cardinal Drive and it did not impair the students' education, I would see the benefit of closing the school."

- New schools. "I would not like to see new schools built, since it would add an additional burden on the taxpayers. That is the time to consider busing."

- Board-community relations. Knapp said that at the Dist. 15 budget

Patsy Kelly

Patsy Kelly says she would make a good board member in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 because she has a special interest in the district — she has two children attending Dist. 15 schools.

"Parents have the greatest concern for the education of children," Mrs. Kelly said. "Only two out of the seven people on the board now have children in the school district."

Mrs. Kelly said a quality education should have a major emphasis on the "3 Rs," without neglecting the arts. "It's one thing to learn the basics. It's another thing to enjoy life," she said.

HOWEVER, Mrs. Kelly said the district should not provide a broad education at the expense of the basics. She said if she is elected she would like to work on the board's curriculum committee because she is concerned about the decline in standardized test scores.

Mrs. Kelly said as much attention has not been given to the gifted program as to the special education program. She recommends exploring resources available outside the district for use by the gifted.

On other issues:

- School financing. Mrs. Kelly said Dist. 15 should work toward a balanced budget. She feels the district needs long-range financial planning to gain a clearer picture of where the money will be in the future. "We can't start programs this year and not have enough money to continue them next year," she said.

- Budget cutbacks. "Maybe in tightening our belt we will see our belt needed to be tightened," Mrs. Kelly said. She said there may be some overlapping programs in the district and now is the time to evaluate them.

Mrs. Kelly also said English, science, math and physical education are essential and should not be cut. She said she would prefer administrative cuts over cuts in teaching positions.

- Cardinal Drive School. "As far as I can see, this is a logical decision on the board's part to close Cardinal Drive School. I don't see how they could make any other decision, but it's the kind of decision no one likes to make."

- New schools. If growth materializes in one portion of the district, Mrs. Kelly said she favors building a new school there. Mrs. Kelly said she does not like the idea of busing unless it is for short distances.

- Board-community relations. Holding school board meetings at different schools around the district is something the board is doing to improve communications with citizens, Mrs. Kelly said.

"I'd like to see members of the community on each school board committee. The board needs a new perspective, it needs new life," she said.

- Teacher unions. "I would like to see a closer relationship between the board and teachers. Teachers are the most vital people in quality education and what they say has to be listened to. Teachers have as much right to a union as any other public employee."

- Quality education. A quality education should place the main emphasis on the basic subjects, without ignoring the arts, Mrs. Kelly said.

Irene Sjostedt

Irene Sjostedt was appointed to the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 board in September to fill a vacancy and she now is seeking election to complete the remaining one year of that term.

"The last six months have been a valuable education for me," Mrs. Sjostedt said. She said her personal goal now is "to attempt to get the full picture of Dist. 15, all 36 square miles and 12,000 children."

Mrs. Sjostedt said she brings the special strength of parenthood to her job as a school board member.

"I think it's important that each member brings something balanced to the board. As a parent and mother, I'm confident that my concern for the children is foremost," Mrs. Sjostedt said.

Mrs. Sjostedt said she is concerned that the state is asking school districts to provide more than they have time to offer.

"It's nice to believe that school boards have never been political, but those days are gone. They must voice their concerns to the legislature," she said.

On other issues, Mrs. Sjostedt said:

- School financing. Dist. 15 should work with a balanced budget, Mrs. Sjostedt said. "With funding as it is, I'd rather see a bare bones budget expenses in the district. Putting money into that school may not be a wise investment."

- New schools. Mrs. Sjostedt said the district should use the census to predict the future enrollment in Dist. 15. She said the district does not need new schools now as "it's foolish to suggest what we need in five years."

- Board-community relations. "There is always room for more public involvement," Mrs. Sjostedt said. The board meetings held in different schools and the citizen involvement in the Program Improvement Plan are both valuable tools in getting more citizens involved in the district, she said.

- Teacher unions. "I like to think of teachers as professionals. I'm not in favor of teachers striking," Mrs. Sjostedt said she is satisfied with the pay levels Dist. 15 teachers are receiving.

and then see where we can go from there."

"I would favor the district going for a referendum to increase taxes, but I'm not certain that will solve the entire problem," she said.

- Budget cutbacks. The board must define what the community's interpretation of quality education is and what the community wants before setting priorities for budget cuts, Mrs. Sjostedt said. The programs which affect the most children in the district should be the lowest priority for cuts, she said.

- Cardinal Drive School. "Closing Cardinal Drive School is one of the possibilities in lowering the operating

Anne Koller

A projected nearly $2 million deficit and the resignation of Walter Sundling prompted Anne Koller to seek a seat on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education.

"I wanted to get my two cents in on how spending cuts should be made," Mrs. Koller said, adding she was enticed by the vacancy created by Sundling's decision not to see reelection.

Mrs. Koller isn't a newcomer to Dist. 15. In the late 1960s she served as the League of Women Voters observer for Dist. 15.

"I always felt I had an obligation to see all the children in the area received a proper education," Mrs. Koller said.

Mrs. Koller's stand on specific issues confronting Dist. 15 are as follows:

- School financing. Mrs. Koller advocates a balanced budget. "I don't see issuing tax anticipation warrants as any solution to budget problems. The minute you start issuing warrants, you get deeper and deeper into debt."

- Budget cutbacks. "I don't want to see budget cuts that affect the child in the classroom," she says, but adds, "When there is a $2 million deficit, nothing is untouchable." Mrs. Koller supports increasing class sizes from 26 to 27 children to eliminate the need for 39 teachers and save an estimated $400,000, reduction in supplies and cutbacks in the number of clerical and supervisory personnel.

- Cardinal Drive School. Mrs. Koller isn't sure the Rolling Meadows school should be closed for the 1976-77 school year, but thinks it is just a matter of time before it will have to be closed. "It's not the most adequate school, to my mind. I wonder if children could benefit by going to a better equipped school."

- New schools. She feels there may be a need for a school in northern

Anne Koller

Palatine Township in the future, but existing schools should be used to their fullest capacity before new schools are constructed.

- Board-community relations. Mrs. Koller believes school board meetings should be open as required by law and attempts should be made to make the meetings understandable to the general public.

- Teacher unions. Mrs. Koller views teachers as professionals and doesn't see anything wrong with professional organizations, but does have reservations about unions. "When they become overly militant, I don't go along." She feels salaries in Dist. 15 are "pretty good," but thinks some provision should be made for merit increases.

- Quality education. She defines this as giving "every child a chance to be educated to the fullest of his capabilities."

Leland Gibbs

The work of a school board member is so "challenging and interesting," said Leland "Bud" Gibbs, that he decided to seek a fourth term on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

"The school district at the present time is in the throes of one of the most difficult financial circumstances it has found itself in years," Gibbs said. "I feel it is work I can contribute to because of my background in Dist. 15."

The incumbent candidate said his background as a past president of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Cooperative gave him insight into the needs of exceptional children.

GIBBS SAID the schools have been "relegated to the position of being all things to all people." But the schools cannot do the job of parents and ministers, he said.

Gibbs suggested the schools might have to cut back some of the services they offer, such as music instruction, and leave some things to parents.

"Reading is the most important subject we can teach," Gibbs said. "If we can teach children to read well, when they leave us, they will be able to get along well in high school."

On other issues:

- School financing. "My philosophy is for a balanced budget," Gibbs said. "It's a belt-tightening time. We're not getting in the money we used to get." Gibbs said he is not against holding a tax referendum to raise taxes in Dist.

ment projections showed a need to be close a school in Rolling Meadows, Cardinal Drive seemed to be the most likely choice.

"I would be reluctant to say I would keep the school open," Gibbs said.

- New schools. There is no alternative to busing for handling declining enrollment in one portion of the district and growing enrollment in other areas, Gibbs said. Gibbs said a new school is opening in Hoffman Estates because student population will be increasing in that area.

- Board-community relations. "I go to any civic meeting I'm invited to. I don't object to answering questions," Gibbs said. He favors the Program Improvement Plan study group, which is not attempting to find out what parents want from Dist. 15.

- Teachers unions. Gibbs said he has no objections to teachers organizing to bargain — "I feel most differences can be worked out over a table." Gibbs said he views teachers as professionals, and the fact they have tenure is unusual in unions.

Edwin Jones

Edwin Erie Jones Jr., a candidate for the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education, isn't exactly a new face around the district.

Jones is a former principal of Gray M. Sanborn School and was assistant superintendent when he resigned from the district in 1955. His wife is employed as a music teacher in the district.

Jones sees no conflict of interest with serving on the same board that employs his wife. He said he would participate and vote on teachers' contracts unless restrained by the courts because of the potential conflict.

THE PROJECTED budget deficit and declining achievement levels were the major reasons Jones decided to run for the Dist. 15 board.

"How can you come up with a $1.7 million deficit in one year?" he asks. He thinks most of the deficit could have been avoided with careful planning, despite the governor's veto of the educational air bill.

On other issues:

- School financing. Jones feels every effort should be made to balance the budget and avoid the issuance of tax anticipation warrants. He suggests developing a 10-year plan projecting the district's assessed valuation, enrollment, revenues and expenditures, so budget adjustments can be made annually "with no more than a one-year lag in reversing the deficit."

- Budget cutbacks. Budget cuts should be accomplished in the following order: noninstructional costs, administrative costs, building and capital costs, instructional costs, and finally, instructional costs, Jones said.

- Cardinal Drive School. Jones says the closing of Cardinal Drive School is an emotional issue and he would need more information before taking a stand.

- New schools. Jones favors the neighborhood school concept and feels the schools can be a focal point for greater community harmony. He thinks a new school should be built in northern Palatine township. He also supports building new and smaller schools to replace Kimball Hill, Salk and Pleasant Hills schools, which were built to only last 20 years. The new schools would be at the same location the old schools now stand.

- Board-Community relations. Jones has not been to a Dist. 15 board meeting for more than 10 years, but said he has some reservations about the committee system of making decisions. If elected he would "attend to the inquiries and requests of the public consistent with prudent use of my personal time and when legitimate and conceptual in nature."

- Teacher unions. "Why argue either way? They are here. Let's do the best we can with them," Jones said. He feels that class size and curriculum school calendar are negotiable, along with salaries and benefits. Jones believes in merit pay for teachers and thinks the present system of a straight scale underpays some teachers and overpays others.

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli.

Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two things are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

SHE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

The Issues: Harper College this fall passed a referendum to enable the college to purchase land for a second campus near Schoenbeck and Palatine roads. The decision now lies with the board when to build on that land and what type of second campus is needed.

Gov. Daniel Walker during the primary campaign in March challenged the role of the community colleges, saying they offer too many "frills" by offering classes like painting and seminars.

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high school districts.

The faculty and board at Harper have faced continuing problems in salary negotiations, resulting in lawsuits and court injunctions. Contract negotiations for the 1976-77 school year broke down this week, with both sides declaring a stalemate.

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says: Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of giving the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

• Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

• Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelors' degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal 41, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issues, Carponelli said:

• Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

• Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

• On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

• Faculty relations: "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college." Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 450 N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum, "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study;" she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:

• Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

• Faculty Unionization. "Up to them." Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

• Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

Three running for two 3-year seats in Dist. 211

There are three candidates running for two 3-year terms on the High School Dist. 211 Board of Election in elections April 10.

The Candidates: Incumbent Robert Creek and newcomers Richard Gillette and Glenn Hargrave.

Endorsements: The Dist. 211 teachers union found Creek and Gillette "best qualified" of the three candidates.

The Issues: Dist. 211 will open its newest high school next year and will be closing Palatine High School. The board must now decide what to do with the facility. Several government bodies in Palatine have expressed an interest in the old school, but negotiations have not formally started.

The board directed the administration to prepare a "survival test" to give students each year they are in Dist. 211 schools. The test will cover the basics the district wants students to know before they graduate from high school.

Alternative education programs have been increasing in the district, with a program added to serve pregnant students and another held at The Bridge youth center in Palatine for students who don't cope well with the typical high school program.

The district is one of the few districts in the area that

Richard Gillette

Richard Gillette wants to be on the Dist. 211 school board to promote community involvement and make sure the district remains in good financial shape.

Gillette, 41, of 311 W. Daniels, Palatine, was defeated in his bid for election last year, but said he still has his interest in the board and has been following the board's activities throughout this year. He believes his educational background and his business experience and decision-making abilities would be assets to his performance as a board member.

Gillette is project manager of high technology development programs for the Northrop Corp. He is married, has four children and has lived in the district for five years.

• Back to Basics. The survival testing is good, Gillette said, as long as it isn't aimed solely at those students who are going to college. "We are at a point where we have to emphasize precollege education, as well as pre-college education. Students are now less disposed to go to college than at any time in the recent past," he said.

While Gillette favors stressing basic educational subjects, he believes that the over-all course offering must be well-balanced. "The kids who need education the most won't stay in school if there's only reading, writing and arithmetic," he said, noting that he has been particularly impressed by consumer education, which "is really a part of living."

• Alternative education. "If you force a disruptive student to come to class, then you are taking away education from others," Gillette said. "You should offer some alternative education, if you can."

"The offer should be there," he said, "but if it gets to the point where you have to spend a large amount of dollars to capture a very small audience, it might be different. But the point where we are now is not excessive."

• Old Palatine High School. "As a board member, I would have been down at the village, showing them that $2 or $3 million would be a reasonable price for that land if it were used for planned unit development," Gillette said. "If it is zoned only for single-family housing, the $1 million is reasonable. . . . As a seller, I don't think the board has done what it should in a buyer's market to unload it."

• Finances. "I see other districts in crises because of budgets planned around state aid," Gillette said, "and I can't believe the impact can be so great on the others and so small on Dist. 211."

• Teachers union. "The union is a fact of life and it's not going to change," Gillette said. "We have to balance the demands of the community of those of the teachers."

Gillette favors mediation if negotiations have reached a standstill. He said if the teachers did go on strike, he would continue negotiating until a settlement was reached.

• Communication. Gillette said there should be more background information provided for people who attend board meetings, and there should also be a time during the meetings when citizens can talk to the board without having to call in advance to be put on the agenda.

Glenn Hargrave

Glenn Hargrave said his top priority for the board of education is "curriculum." He said the board should be aware of what is happening in all areas of the educational process so "drastic stop-gap measures" will not have to be made if the district runs into financial problems in the future.

Hargrave, 49, of 471 Creekwood Dr., Palatine, who was on the board before his defeat last year, said he can see other districts "feeling the crunch" financially and said "the peak will eventually come" to Dist. 211.

Hargrave is the president of his own sales company. He is married, has two children and has lived in the district 20 years.

• Back to basics. Hargrave regards the board's emphasis on basic education "very favorable," and would like to see the emphasis carried through to other subjects besides math and English. He would like to see close evaluation of the district's course offerings to determine what areas could be expanded or eliminated.

"Now that we've got the construction referendum through, and we don't have to spend time on negotiations, the board ought to take the time to look at their real job — education," Hargrave said.

• Alternative education. Hargrave agrees that the district ought to provide some alternative education programs "as long as we can afford it. We can try to be too many things to too many people, though. That's why we should evaluate our offerings so we know what we could trim if we had to. I do feel that there are some areas where we ought not to be as long as there are social service agencies."

Hargrave said he hates to see a student "kicked out of school when he's lost interest — it's up to us to provide" something that will interest him. "Some students are irrecove-

rable, but if alternative education can help half of them, then it's worth it," he said.

• Old Palatine High School. "I remain on record that I would like to see every avenue explored to keep that building in the public domain," Hargrave said. "I think there's a use for it, and the village ought to look at it. One million dollars is a steal — that land is worth that much."

• Finances. Hargrave said he is "committed to a balanced budget." The board has been trying to "keep on top of the situation by looking as far down the road as possible."

Hargrave said, according to the last study he saw of the district, the building program "is in pretty good shape until about 1982. The new high school should take care of us."

• Teachers union. Hargrave is in favor of collective bargaining and said the teachers' salaries "are priced in there about right, given the area in which we live." He said he does not like being "locked into a salary schedule" because that means "we can't reward teachers on merit."

If the teachers ever went on strike, Hargrave said his "reaction would be tempered by the reaction of the community, whether they were behind the board or the teachers."

• Communication. The way the board communicates with the public is "in direct relation to the way the public communicates with the board," Hargrave said. "I never considered myself inaccessible."

Robert Creek

Incumbent board member Robert Creek, who has been president of the board since his election in 1970, said he believes his most significant accomplishment was "bringing some business methods to a place that didn't have many. I can't fault my predecessors because the district grew so fast. But I tried to bring the finances into line."

Creek, 49, of 1603 Appleby Rd., Inverness, said "experience on the board is worth something," and believes his appointment as the 12th Congressional District's representative to the Federal Relations Network is valuable for the district. The network is a lobbyist group which promotes the National School Board Association's goals in Washington, D.C.

His work on the school board gives him a "sense of accomplishment," Creek said, particularly when new programs are instituted. Student-board rap sessions, alternative education and survival testing were some of the new programs begun since Creek has been board president.

CREEK IS vice president administration of Union Oil Co. He has lived in the district 10 years, is married and has four children.

• Back to basics. "I think the survival tests stem from the interest of the board, and I have strong feelings about them," Creek said. "We have all sorts of special interest curriculums and somehow we seem to have lost emphasis on the three R's." Even though he would like more emphasis on basic education, he said the board is not trying "to deliberately reduce the curriculum."

• Alternative education. "It's not really that big of a movement in the district," Creek said, but he is strongly in favor of the alternate class for pregnant teenagers and the program at The Bridge. He said he has no statistics to back up his theory, but he speculated that the 20 students who went to The Bridge this year would have either dropped out or appeared before the board for disciplinary action if The Bridge had not been available.

• Old Palatine High School. Creek said he hopes the village can find a way to use the building, but if not, "we'll put it up for bid." He said the $1 million figure for the land and building is a fair price.

• Finances. "If Springfield would do what it said it would (fully fund the state's promised share of education) and leave it at that, then I don't see any trouble in the future for Dist. 211," Creek said. If the state continues not to fund its share of the education budget, then the district's financial future is "anybody's guess," he said.

Creek said the board is keeping a close watch on the budget, constantly looking about five years ahead.

• Teachers union. The teachers union and the board "are usually working for the same objectives," Creek said.

Teachers in the district have never gone on strike, but if they did, Creek said he would try to keep the schools open and would continue to negotiate. He said he would favor mediation by a neutral third party — "we've been to it twice." The federal mediation board is super."

• Communication. Creek believes communication between the board and the public is a "problem," partly because the district is spread over parts of several different towns. The new Dist. 211 Club, composed of members of parents clubs from the five high schools, may help the communication problem, Creek said.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement," Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauled rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Judge refuses to 'correct' Stavros' prison sentence

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider

the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials

Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sanstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERNIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velveteen wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

"PETE" THE RACCOON was a problem patron. He got out of a large monkey cage by prying

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Shean," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Homesick.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

For a pampered poodle, nothing but the best.

Creek, Gillette endorsed by teachers union panel

by PAM BIGFORD
Incumbent Robert Creek and newcomer Richard Gillette have been chosen as the "best qualified" candidates in the April 10 school board election by High School Dist. 211 union's political action committee.

Creek, 1603 Appleby, Inverness, who is board president, and Gillette, 311 W. Daniels Rd., Palatine, received letters from the committee stating they were "the best qualified of the three candidates" but that the committee was not able to endorse them because of some of their positions on issues affecting teachers.

A third candidate, Glenn Hargrave, 471 Creekwood Dr., Palatine, is also running for the board. Two three-year terms are open.

GILLETTE AND CREEK appeared before the union political action committee and spoke on school issues. Hargrave was unable to appear.

The letter to Gillette said that the committee found him to be "well-qualified, informed and of an independent mind. We feel the board could use a person of your qualification. Our differences on a few of your positions, such as merit pay, regrettably keeps the association from a full endorsement."

Union Pres. George Stewart said he could not comment on the letters until he had informed the union membership of what position had been taken.

Stewart told the Herald last week, however, that the union "is not interested in a lot of changes" on the board this year. He said the district "is one of the few in good financial shape, and for a lot of that we have to be thankful to Mr. Creek."

Gillette said the letter offered no support through campaigning or contributions.

Town Meeting '76 switched to October

Town Meeting '76 will be held Oct. 21 in Rolling Meadows, instead of in April, as earlier announced, to allow greater participation," Jaycee Ed Reames announced Friday.

The Bicentennial event is sponsored jointly by the Jaycees and the city Bicentennial committee. Members of the steering committee planning the day-long event are expected today to attend a training seminar presented by the Institute of Cultural Affairs.

The Institute of Cultural Affairs is a nonprofit research group that developed Town Meeting '76, endorsed by the Illinois Bicentennial Commission.

The training seminar is to be held at the ICA headquarters, 4750 N. Sheridan Dr., Chicago.

RESIDENTS WHO are interested in participating in Town Meeting '76 may contact Reames at 255-5282 or co-chairman Harry O'Brien at 398-3730.

Town Meeting '76 is an updated version of the traditional town meeting. For Rolling Meadows residents, the event will start at 9 a.m. with an informal session that will feature community singing, conversation and visiting.

Later activities will include workshop sessions, led off by a lunch featuring entertainment, two talks on "The Bicentennial Era" and the American Citizens" and a concluding session.

The meeting will be held from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Community Church, 2720 Kirchhoff Rd.

At the end of the day, those who participated will be given a document listing their proposals for the future and a story articulating the community's role in American history.

Women's club plans spring arts, crafts festival

The third annual Spring Arts and Crafts Festival sponsored by the Rolling Meadows Junior Women's Club will be held today and Sunday in the Rolling Meadows Shopping Center mall on Kirchhoff Rd.

About 50 area artists will display their works beginning at 10 a.m. today and noon Sunday.

Proceeds from the sale will be used for fine arts scholarships for high school students.

Included in the variety of items displayed and for sale are: Batik, wood-carving, shadow boxes, cut glass, doll clothes, miniature clay sculpture, jewelry, macrame, oils and acrylics on both canvas and wood, water color paintings, ceramics and boutique crafts.

Among those displaying are Barbara Piazza, Donna Paulson, Carol Arvo, Jean Young, Pam Cangelose, Donna Lichner, Ned Broadbent, Darlene Lobojko and Shirley Tetmeyer, all of Rolling Meadows.

Arlington Heights entrants are Mrs. E. A. Lawson, Ed Jirasek, Mark Gerleve, Marlene Michalsi, Marie Wagner, Betty Dorsch, Mary Harkness, Judy Brown, Patricia Dygard and Cary Einhorn.

Palatine participants are Sheryl Leak, Bonnie Beeferman and Joan Summers.

parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

• Prison officials at Sanstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.

"WHAT IT (the inquiry) effectively did for us was create an aura of special handling... a red flag," Benson said. When Stavros received his furlough he was warned by prison officials to avoid the "public eye" and newspaper reporters.

• Lexington prison officials searched Stavros and his belongings for a reported list of furloughs and parole releases that Stavros was collecting as evidence of unfair treatment.

• That Stavros sued the federal government in a Minnesota court under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act for release of prison and parole board documents.

Will's decision Friday could lead to another hearing if the parole board denies Stavros' release in July. The hearing will come as Stavros completes his second year in prison.

Boys baseball unit to discuss bylaws

Rolling Meadows Boys Baseball Assn. members will meet at 8 p.m. Tuesday to adopt new bylaws governing this season's play.

The meeting is open to all interested residents. Team managers must attend the session to be held in city hall at 3800 Kirchhoff Rd.

Approximately 400 boys have registered to play this season. Practice is scheduled to start in mid-May.

4th in family wins 'Ask Andy' contest

Carolyn Tritle, 15, of 3914 S. Wren, Rolling Meadows, recently became the fourth person in her family to win the "Ask Andy" contest run in the Herald.

Carolyn's question, "Are Zebras black with white stripes or white with black stripes?" won her a Yearbook of Science and the Future by Encyclopedia Britannica. She joins Kathy, Patrick and Mike Tritle as winners of the contest.

And, in case you are wondering, zebras are white with black stripes.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 230,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement..." Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Parks to weigh revised museum ownership draft

Palatine Park District commissioners Monday will study a revised draft of an agreement between the district and the Palatine Library Board to purchase and maintain a 103-year-old house to serve as the new Palatine Historical Society museum.

Representatives from the library board, the society and park director Fred Hall met Thursday. The group made minor language changes in the agreement, which provides for joint ownership of the museum by the park district and the library board.

The draft also includes an option for the historical society to lease the house for 99 years.

The historical society is presently located at 115 W. Johnson St. and has telephone service through a village hall number.

"WE WERE ALL in basic agreement (with the draft)," Hall said. "We just had several language suggestions, and now the park district commissioners may have suggestions too." The park board will meet at 8 p.m. at the Palatine Hills Golf Course, 512 W. Northwest Hwy.

Under the agreement, the library would contribute $48,000 toward buying the house at 224 E. Palatine Rd., and the historical society would raise $12,000 for refurbishing. The park dis-

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velvet wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, wolves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie. "Because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 10-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

"PETE" THE RACCOON was a problem patron. He got out of a large monkey cage by prying

Creek, Gillette backed in Dist. 211

by PAM BIGFORD

Incumbent Robert Creek and newcomer Richard Gillette have been chosen as the "best qualified" candidates in the April 10 school board election by High School Dist. 211 union's political action committee.

Creek, 1603 Appleby, Inverness, who is board president, and Gillette, 311 W. Daniels Rd., Palatine, received letters from the committee stating they were "the best qualified of the three candidates" but that the committee was not able to endorse them because of some of their positions on issues affecting teachers.

A third candidate, Glenn Hargrave, 471 Creekwood Dr., Palatine, is also running for the board. Two three-year terms are open.

GILLETTE AND CREEK appeared before the union political action committee and spoke on school issues. Hargrave was unable to appear.

The letter to Gillette said that the committee found him to be "well-qualified, informed and of an independent mind. We feel the board could use a person of your qualification. Our differences on a few of your positions, such as merit pay, regretfully keeps the association from a full endorsement."

Union Pres. George Stewart said he could not comment on the letters until he had informed the union membership of what position had been taken.

Stewart told the Herald last week, however, that the union "is not interested in a lot of changes" on the board this year. He said the district "is one of the few in good financial shape, and for a lot of that we have to be thankful to Mr. Creek."

Gillette said the letter offered no

support through campaigning or contributions.

CREEK SAID he had "mixed emotions" about this letter, which he said stated the committee "agreed with me on everything except locking everything into a contract. I am totally opposed to putting class size, working conditions and that kind of thing into a contract agreement." He said the district had never received any serious grievances on those subjects.

Creek said that on the whole he was "pleased." He said the letter did not seem to be coming from the teachers as a group, but from the teachers as an organized labor union.

The union took an active part in the campaign last year, endorsing Jody Albrecht, who was the top vote-getter in the election, and Dewane Barnes, who lost.

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Shean," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Homesick.

Tender loving care, just like home.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

Judge refuses to 'correct' Stavros' jail sentence

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sandstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

• Prison officials at Sandstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.

• "WHAT IT (the inquiry) effectively did for us was create an aura of special handling . . . a red flag," Benson said. When Stavros received his furlough he was warned by prison officials to avoid the "public eye" and newspaper reporters.

• Lexington prison officials searched Stavros and his belongings for a reported list of furloughs and parole releases that Stavros was collecting as evidence of unfair treatment.

• That Stavros sued the federal government in a Minnesota court under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act for release of prison and parole board documents.

Will's decision Friday could lead to another hearing if the parole board denies Stavros' release in July. The hearing will come as Stavros completes his second year in prison.

trict would be responsible for maintenance.

The park district levied a museum tax last year, which will net $7,500 for maintenance of the building. The levy came after the Palatine Bicentennial Commission, which first spearheaded the museum project, approached the park district.

Hall said yearly maintenance would not necessarily cost $7,500.

Should the park district commissioners raise any serious questions about the revised agreement, library board and historical society representatives may be asked to attend the commissioners' meeting April 13, Hall said.

Seniors council sets brunch-theater trip

Brunch and a theater matinee at the Marriott Hotel in Lincolnshire will be sponsored by the Palatine Township Senior Citizens Council Sunday.

A chartered bus will leave the center at 248 S. Brockway at 11:30 a.m. Brunch will be served at 12:30 p.m., and the show, "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," will begin at 2:30 p.m. Tickets for the excursion, including meal, transportation and theater, are $13.50. Call 901-1112 for reservations.

25's firing of a junior high school teacher for striking students.

In a unanimous decision, the court overturned an earlier verdict by a Cook County Circuit Court judge that the district should reinstate teacher John Fender, who was fired in 1972 for repeatedly using corporal punishment.

The opinion was handed down Thursday by Appellate Court Judge Edward F. Healy. The case has been in the Appellate Court nearly three years.

FENDER'S ATTORNEY, Edward Jackson, said Friday "We don't wish to make any comment at this time," when asked if he would now take the case to the Illinois Supreme Court.

The court decision stated that Fender "admitted striking students on the face or head on four occasions during the school year. Parents complained of (his) actions and in one instance, filed criminal charges against him."

Chamber VP to speak

Richard A. Apland, vice president and general manager of the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce, will be the guest speaker at the April 7 meeting of the Palatine Chamber of Commerce and Industry.

Apland will speak on a 1975 amendment increasing workmen's compensation and occupational disease benefits and a proposal to amend the Illinois Constitution to increase corporate income taxes.

Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. dinner at the Greenhouse restaurant, 1200 W. Northwest Hwy., are $8 in advance or $9 at the door.

The court found, "In light of all the evidence before it, the board was justified in finding (Fender) guilty of the charges set forth in the notice of dismissal."

In his lawsuit against the board, Fender charged that at the time he was fired he was president of the Dist. 25 teachers union, had received "no disciplinary sanctions from the board" and his evaluations as a teacher were good. Fender said he was "chosen for dismissal in retaliation for his activities on behalf of the teachers association."

HE ALSO CHARGED that the board should have given him written notice to cease corporal punishment before charges were brought against him and that the board's attorney was acting as prosecutor and at the same time acting as counsel for the school board.

The lower court upheld the contention Fender should have been given written notice and that the attorney was acting in two conflicting

Six in running for three Dist. 15 posts

Six candidates are running for three seats on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. Board of Education in the April 10 election. Two of the candidates are competing for a one-year term and four are seeking the two 3-year terms.

The candidates: One-year term — Incumbent Irene Sjostedt and newcomer E. Eric Jones. Three-year terms — Incumbent Leland Gibbs and newcomers Patsy Kelly, Anne Koller and Norman Knapp.

Stories by Diane Granat and Joanne Van Wye

Norman Knapp

Norman Knapp decided to run for the Dist. 15 Board of Education because he wanted to do something of community service.

Knapp entered the Palatine Library Board and Dist. 15 board race last month, but he said he withdrew from the library race when he saw there would be a conflict in the monthly meeting times.

Knapp said he decided to remain in the school board contest because he has children in the Dist. 15 schools and "there is a lot more challenge there."

There is a need for more communication between the school board and the community, Knapp said. He feels that parents and taxpayers do not receive enough information from the board at meetings.

"The board should not hold mass meetings to deal with large budgets," he said. Knapp suggests using the local PTAs as a sounding board for citizen opinions on the budget.

On other issues:

- School financing. "The district should work toward a balanced budget. I'm against a tax increase, but if I tell the budget cuts jeopardized the education our children are now receiving, I would favor it."

- Budget cutbacks. Knapp said special education programs should not be hearings. "The people in the audience were sitting there with no information and the board had all the information." He said parents and taxpayers should give the board guidelines where to make cuts. He suggested using the PTAs to achieve greater citizen participation.

- Teacher unions. "Teachers have a right to negotiate and form a collective bargaining unit. I do not agree with the teachers' right to strike."

- Quality education. Knapp said there should be a set number of required courses and some optional courses in Dist. 15, similar to the high schools. Required courses should be English, mathematics, science, social studies and physical education, he said. "I'd like to see more after-school activities and more social events for the kids on the junior high school level," Knapp said.

cut. "There can be cuts in areas where the individual parent can assume the expense," citing book fees as an example.

- Cardinal Drive School. "Schools should be in the area where the children live. If it was economically sound to close Cardinal Drive and it did not impair the students' education, I would see the benefit of closing the school."

- New schools. "I would not like to see new schools built, since it would add an additional burden on the taxpayers. That is the time to consider busing."

- Board-community relations. Knapp said that at the Dist. 15 budget

Irene Sjostedt

Irene Sjostedt was appointed to the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 board in September to fill a vacancy and she now is seeking election to complete the remaining one year of that term.

"The last six months have been a valuable education for me," Mrs. Sjostedt said. She said her personal goal now is "to attempt to get the full picture of Dist. 15, all 36 square miles and 12,000 children."

Mrs. Sjostedt said she brings the special strength of parenthood to her job as a school board member.

"I think it's important that each member brings something balanced to the board. As a parent and mother, I'm confident that my concern for the children is foremost," Mrs. Sjostedt said.

Mrs. Sjostedt said she is concerned that the state is asking school districts to provide more than they have time to offer.

"It's nice to believe that school boards have never been political, but those days are gone. They must voice their concerns to the legislature," she said.

- On other issues. Mrs. Sjostedt said: "On school financing, Dist. 15 should work with a balanced budget, Mrs. Sjostedt said. "With funding as it is, I'd rather see a bare bones budget expenses in the district. Putting money into that school may not be a wise investment."

- New schools. Mrs. Sjostedt said the district should use the census to predict the future enrollment in Dist. 15. She said the district does not need new schools now and "it's foolish to suggest what we need in five years."

- Board-community relations. "There is always room for more public involvement," Mrs. Sjostedt said. The board meetings held in different schools and the citizen involvement in the Program Improvement Plan are both valuable tools in getting more citizens involved in the district, she said.

- Teacher unions. "I like to think of teachers as professionals. I'm not in favor of teachers striking," Mrs. Sjostedt said she is satisfied with the pay levels Dist. 15 teachers are receiving.

and then see where we can go from there."

- "I would favor the district going for a referendum to increase taxes, but I'm not certain that will solve the entire problem," she said.

- Budget cutbacks. The board must define what the community's interpretation of quality education is and what the community wants before setting priorities for budget cuts, Mrs. Sjostedt said. The programs which affect the most children in the district should be the lowest priority for cuts, she said.

- Cardinal Drive School. "Closing Cardinal Drive School is one of the possibilities in lowering the operating

Leland Gibbs

The work of a school board member is so "challenging and interesting," said Leland "Bud" Gibbs, that he decided to seek a fourth term on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

"The school district at the present time is in the throes of one of the most difficult financial circumstances it has found itself in years," Gibbs said. "I feel it is work I can contribute to because of my background in Dist. 15."

The incumbent candidate said his background as a past president of the Northwest Suburban Special Education Cooperative gave him insight into the needs of exceptional children.

GIBBS SAID the schools have been "relegated to the position of being all things to all people." But the schools cannot do the job of parents and ministers, he said.

Gibbs suggested the schools might have to cut back some of the services they offer, such as music instruction, and leave some things to parents.

"Reading is the most important subject we can teach," Gibbs said. "If we can teach children to read well, when they leave us, they will be able to get along well in high school."

- On other issues: "My philosophy is for a balanced budget," Gibbs said. "It's a belt-tightening time. We're not getting in the money we used to get." Gibbs said he is not against holding a tax referendum to raise taxes in Dist.

ment projections showed a need to be close a school in Rolling Meadows. Cardinal Drive seemed to be the most likely choice.

- "I would be reluctant to say I would keep the school open," Gibbs said.

- New schools. There is no alternative to busing for handling declining enrollment in one portion of the district and growing enrollment in other areas, Gibbs said. Gibbs said a new school is opening in Hoffman Estates because student population will be increasing in that area.

- Board-community relations. "I go to any civic meeting I'm invited to. I don't object to answering questions," Gibbs said. He favors the Program Improvement Plan study group, which is not attempting to find out what parents want from Dist. 15.

- Teachers unions. Gibbs said he has no objections to teachers organizing on a basis — "I feel most differences can be worked out over a table." Gibbs said he views teachers as professionals, and the fact they have tenure is unusual in unions.

Endorsements: None.

The Issues: Dist. 15 is projecting a $2.2 million deficit for the 1976-77 school year if cutbacks are not made in the budget. Board members currently are discussing a number of ways to trim the budget, including closing Cardinal Drive School, Rolling Meadows, and cutting staff and some special programs.

The district is faced with the unique problem of declining enrollment in Rolling Meadows and a growing student population in Northern Palatine Township and Hoffman Estates. Palatine children have been bused up to 10 miles to emptying Rolling Meadows schools and a new school is being constructed to serve Hoffman Estates.

Several candidates have raised the issue that the make-up of the board does not represent the community. Of the seven members, only two have children in Dist. 15 schools.

Patsy Kelly

Patsy Kelly says she would make a good board member in Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 because she has a special interest in the district — she has two children attending Dist. 15 schools.

"Parents have the greatest concern for the education of children," Mrs. Kelly said. "Only two out of the seven people on the board now have children in the school district."

Mrs. Kelly said a quality education should have a major emphasis on the "3 Rs," without neglecting the arts. "It's one thing to learn the basics. It's another thing to enjoy life," she said.

HOWEVER, Mrs. Kelly said the district should not provide a broad education at the expense of the basics. She said if she is elected she would like to work on the board's curriculum committee because she is concerned about the decline in standardized test scores.

Mrs. Kelly said as much attention has not been given to the gifted program as to the special education program. She recommends exploring resources available outside the district for use by the gifted.

On other issues:

- School financing. Mrs. Kelly said Dist. 15 should work toward a balanced budget. She feels the district needs long-range financial planning to gain a clearer picture of where the money will be in the future. "We can't start programs this year and not have enough money to continue them next year," she said.

- Budget cutbacks. "Maybe in tightening our belt we will see our belt needed to be tightened," Mrs. Kelly said. She said there may be some overlapping programs in the district and now is the time to evaluate them.

Mrs. Kelly also said English, science, math and physical education are essential and should not be cut. She said she would prefer administrative cuts over cuts in teaching positions.

- Cardinal Drive School. "As far as I can see, this is a logical decision on the board's part to close Cardinal Drive School. I don't see how they could make any other decision, but it's the kind of decision no one likes to make."

Anne Koller

A projected nearly $2 million deficit and the resignation of Walter Sundling prompted Anne Koller to seek a seat on the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education.

"I wanted to get my two cents in on how spending cuts should be made," Mrs. Koller said, adding she was enticed by the vacancy created by Sundling's decision not to see reelection.

Mrs. Koller isn't a newcomer to Dist. 15. In the late 1960s she served as the League of Women Voters observer for Dist. 15.

"I always felt I had an obligation to see all the children in the area received a proper education," Mrs. Koller said.

Mrs. Koller's stand on specific issues confronting Dist. 15 are as follows:

- School financing. Mrs. Koller advocates a balanced budget. "I don't see issuing tax anticipation warrants as any solution to budget problems. The minute you start issuing warrants, you get deeper and deeper into debt."

- Budget cutbacks. "I don't want to see budget cuts that affect the child in the classroom," she says, but adds, "When there is a $2 million deficit, nothing is untouchable." Mrs. Koller supports increasing class sizes from 26 to 27 children to eliminate the need for 39 teachers and save an estimated $400,000, reduction in supplies and cutbacks in the number of clerical and supervisory personnel.

- Cardinal Drive School. Mrs. Koller isn't sure the Rolling Meadows school should be closed for the 1976-77 school year, but thinks it is just a matter of time before it will have to be closed. "It's not the most adequate school, to my mind. I wonder if children could benefit by going to a better equipped school."

- New schools. She feels there may be a need for a school in northern

Anne Koller

Palatine Township in the future, but existing schools should be used to their fullest capacity before new schools are constructed.

- Board-community relations. Mrs. Koller believes school board meetings should be open as required by law and attempts should be made to make the meetings understandable to the general public.

- Teacher unions. Mrs. Koller views teachers as professionals and doesn't see anything wrong with professional organizations, but does have reservations about unions. "When they become overly militant, I don't go along." She feels salaries in Dist. 15 are "pretty good," but thinks some provision should be made for merit increases.

- Quality education. She defines this as giving "every child a chance to be educated to the fullest of his capabilities."

Edwin Jones

Edwin Eric Jones Jr., a candidate for the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education, isn't exactly a new face around the district.

Jones is a former principal of Gray M. Sanborn School and was assistant superintendent when he resigned from the district in 1955. His wife is employed as a music teacher in the district.

Jones sees no conflict of interest with serving on the same board that employs his wife. He said he would participate and vote on teachers' contracts unless restrained by the courts because of the potential conflict.

THE PROJECTED budget deficit and declining achievement levels were the major reasons Jones decided to run for the Dist. 15 board.

"How can you come up with a $1.7 million deficit in one year?" he asks. He thinks most of the deficit could have been avoided with careful planning, despite the governor's veto of the educational air bill.

On other issues:

- School financing. Jones feels every effort should be made to balance the budget and avoid the issuance of tax anticipation warrants. He suggests developing a 10-year plan projecting the district's assessed valuation, enrollment, revenues and expenditures, so budget adjustments can be made annually "with no more than a one-year lag in reversing the deficit."

- Budget cutbacks. Budget cuts should be accomplished in the following order: noninstructional costs, administrative costs, building and capital the schools can be a focal point for greater community harmony. He thinks a new school should be built in northern Palatine township. He also supports building new and smaller schools to replace Kimball Hill, Salt and Pleasant Hills schools, which were built to only last 20 years. The new schools would be at the same location the old schools now stand.

- Board-community relations. Jones has not been to a Dist. 15 board meeting for more than 10 years, but said he has some reservations about the committee system of making decisions. If elected he would "attend to the inquiries and requests of the public consistent with prudent use of my personal time and when legitimate and conceptual in nature."

- Teacher unions. "Why argue either way? They are here. Let's do the best we can with them," Jones said. He feels that class size and curriculum school calendar are negotiable, along with salaries and benefits. Jones believes in merit pay for teachers and thinks the present system of a straight scale underpays some teachers and overpays others.

- Cardinal Drive School. Jones says the closing of Cardinal Drive School is an emotional issue and he would need more information before taking a stand.

Third of striking Teamsters settle

by United Press International

Two trucking associations and about a third of the striking Teamsters reached a tentative settlement Friday night, Labor Sec. W. J. Usery said.

Usery then immediately went back to the negotiations with hopes a settlement could be reached for the remaining 250,000 Teamsters not covered by the Motor Carriers Labor Advisory Council and Irregular Route Carriers agreement.

"I am happy to announce after many hard hours of almost continual bargaining we have reached an agreement," Usery said.

TEAMSTERS PRES. Frank Fitzsimmons, who announced the agreement along with Usery and MCLAC Pres. Frank Bridge, said he would not announce terms of the settlement until after the membership ratified the pact.

He said Teamsters in this settlement — plus those working under interim agreements — meant about 61 per cent of the membership would not be involved in the national strike. Officers of both the MCLAC and Irregular Route Carriers advised their truckers to return to work.

The two-day old strike has already begun to hurt the nation's economy and has sparked gunfire and beatings at truck depots and on the highways.

The settlement also bolstered White House policy to refrain from seeking an 80-day cooling off period under the Taft-Hartley Act and instead to let collective bargaining take its course.

PRESIDENT FORD, campaigning in Wisconsin, said earlier, "It is my belief the proper procedure is to let the negotiations take their course."

Asked if he thought the agreement was inflationary, Usery said, "I don't think it would be proper for me to stand here and say if it's inflationary or not inflationary."

"Now, we don't have to measure (just) the cost, we have to measure the cost of a continued national strike."

Usery said he would have preferred to announce an agreement for all the associations and Teamsters at this time, but it was not possible.

He said he would stay in Arlington Heights "as long as possible, as long as there is any chance of reaching a final agreement." He said he had no idea when that would be but "I would hope we could reach one tonight (Friday)."

VIOLENCE FLARED in at least five states. Snipers shot at rolling trucks and bands of angry men harassed and threatened those who tried to keep their rigs on the road.

A Bensenville truck driver was the first Illinois victim. Thomas Martina, 37, told police four assailants jumped him from behind and beat him with a metal pipe when he stopped on Ill. Rte. 83 near Third Street to help a woman motorist.

Martina attempted to chase his assailants in his truck but was stopped by Elk Grove Village police for erratic driving. He was treated and released at Alexian Brothers Medical Center in Elk Grove Village.

A bullet from a high-powered rifle shattered the window of Bryan Minter's truck on Interstate 75 in Toledo, Ohio. Minter was cut by flying glass. Bullets were fired into the trucks of two other drivers in Toledo and a steelhauler rolling along a highway in Cincinnati.

PENNSYLVANIA State Police said they had investigated 22 incidents of violence, most of them involving rocks being thrown at trucks. In Detroit, a driver and his helper escaped injury when two men rained bullets on their truck.

A nonstriker told police he was harassed and his life threatened near Rock Island, Ill.

Sheriff's deputies arrested 12 Teamster pickets at Whittier, Calif.

Utility rate hike hearing May 19

A May 19 hearing date has been set for testimony on rate increase proposals by Citizens Utilities Co.

In a prehearing conference this week, the Illinois Commerce Commission was presented documents by company officials justifying their request for raising water rates 70 per cent and sewer rates by as much as 178 per cent. The May 19 hearing will begin at 10 a.m. in the State of Illinois Building, 190 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

Citizens Utilities Co. services about 20,000 residents of Mount Prospect's New Town area, in addition to parts of Prospect Heights.

RESIDENTS OF the area currently pay $1.31 per 1,000 gallons of water a month, but that could rise if the ICC approves two "step" increases proposed by company officials.

The utility is asking for an immediate 31 per cent increase in rates to make up for losses officials say the company incurred because the last hike in 1974 was not sufficient. That would raise rates to $1.81 per 1,000 gallons a month.

A second "step" increase needed by the company in the future would raise water rates by 70 per cent. Residents using 8,000 gallons a month or less would pay a flat rate of $2.25 per 1,000 gallons. Water bills for customers using an average of 5,000 gallons a month would jump from $6.60 to $11.25 a month.

Rates for sewage collected by the utility, but processed by the Metropolitan Sanitary District, would increase 80 per cent from $6 to $10.80 a month. Sewage processed by the utility

Doggie motel pampers pets

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Brandy, a pampered St. Bernard, receives the same luxury treatment that his master looks forward to when vacationing.

He has come to expect only the best in gourmet canine meals, a stylish grooming and the creme de la creme in accommodations when his owner goes away.

Reservations for this 100-pound pet are made months in advance to assure Brandy a temperature-controlled unit with piped-in FM music, a drinking fountain and a 16-foot outdoor run.

And where is this place where man's best friend receives the attention that makes him the envy of any pet?

IT IS THE AMERICAN Pet Motel, located in Prairie View in Lake County, where nearly every detail is similar to a "people motel" for domesticated animals.

The $3-million facility is not the average animal shelter or veterinarian's office where housepets are frequently left when their owners go away.

The front doors open to a lobby and check-in desk that would be a familiar site in any Holiday Inn. There is a registration book on the counter and mailboxes on the wall, filled with mail for the "guests."

"Here's a postcard from a lady whose poodle is staying with us. The attendant read the postcard to the dog yesterday. We guarantee it," said Robert Leeds, owner and manager of the pet motel.

The postcard read, "Hope you are having fun and being a good girl. Have you made a lot of friends? I'm having a good time, but I miss you. Love, Mommy."

SOME PET OWNERS sleep on the postcards so that the animals can pick up the scent from their

Today

mail. Others send taped recorded messages, to which their pets respond with a howl.

A bit eccentric? Not really, when one considers the out-of-the-ordinary service that any house pet receives here, Leeds said.

Most dogs receive the average room and meals for $4.25 to $4.75 a day. An additional $2 is charged each day for "imperial" accommodations — the best the house has to offer. A bath is anywhere from $5 to $15, depending on the size of the dog. Exercising is $3 an hour.

A dispenser of "treats" sits on the check-in desk where a dish of fancy mints might normally be for people. Dog, cat and other pet magazines line tables in the lobby.

What otherwise would be a motel drug store is a pet care needs center; a typical lobby beauty parlor is, instead, a grooming shop for dogs.

THE GROOMING shop walls, decorated in pink velveteen wallpaper and gold mirrors, offer a "prima donna" atmosphere for the pets who get their hair trimmed and nails clipped in a window that provides a lobby view.

The pet motel has accommodated about 20,000 pets since it first opened three years ago. It can house 260 dogs, 150 cats, three horses and an assortment of other animals at any given time, Leeds said.

The motel guests have included dogs, cats, raccoons, horses, doves, foxes, snakes, snails, lizards, fish, monkeys, ducks and a goat.

"We say it with pride," said Leeds, who sports a wine-colored blazer and necktie, "because each of these animals is different and requires different care. It's a challenge."

"Challenge" may be a slight understatement when it comes to making a 16-foot boa constrictor comfortable or trying to keep a mischievous raccoon in one place.

Unit plan would benefit Dist. 59: study

by JUDY JOBBITT

The proposed unit school district for the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 area would be financially beneficial to that area but would hurt the remaining portion of High School Dist. 214, according to figures presented to the Dist. 59 citizens committee.

The figures also showed the possibility of the proposed unit district having a balanced budget with a lower tax rate than would be needed to balance the budgets of Dist. 214 and Dist. 59.

The figures show the combined tax rates for Districts 214 and 59 would have to be $5.32 per $100 assessed valuation next year for the budget to balance, but the proposed unit district would only need a tax rate of $4.83 per $100 assessed valuation for a balanced budget.

THE ILLINOIS SCHOOL Consultants, hired by Dist. 59 to provide information on forming a unit district, also presented projections showing the proposed unit district needing a tax rate of $6.21 for a balanced budget by the 1980-81 school year and Districts 214 and 59 needing a combined tax rate of $6.78 for a balanced budget that year.

If Dist. 59 formed a unit district, the remaining Dist. 214 area also would need to increase its tax rate by about 56 cents by the 1980-81 school year for a balanced budget above the needed increase for the current Dist. 214 area to have a balanced budget that year.

According to the report, the proposed unit district could set a higher tax rate despite the state's requirement for the high school district to cut its tax rate. Dist. 214 currently is required by the state to cut its tax rate, although the residents have approved a higher tax rate.

The consultants also presented figures showing a Unit Dist. 59 having a cumulative deficit of about $9.7 million by the 1980-81 school year if the maximum tax rate of $3.93 per $100 assessed valuation is used. Dist. 59 would have a deficit of about $10.7 million by that year.

DIST. 214 WOULD have a deficit of about $43.8 million by the 1980-81 school year and a deficit of about

Summer start seen for flu shots

ATLANTA (UPI) — Mass immunization against swine flu, a potential threat to nearly 60 million Americans, may start as early as this summer for high risk groups, federal health officials said Friday.

In Washington, the House Appropriations Committee Friday unanimously approved President Ford's request for $135 million to inoculate virtually all Americans against an expected outbreak of a long-dormant type of flu.

Rep. Robert H. Michel of Illinois, assistant House Republican leader, said he hoped the legislation could be on Ford's desk within two weeks.

Dr. David Sencer, director of the national Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, said persons with pulmonary and heart diseases and those over 65 would be considered to be among the high risk groups.

IN THE EARLY fall, he said, mass immunization of the entire population will begin, necessitating almost total mobilization of federal, state, local and private health agencies.

Sencer, speaking at an extraordinary meeting of state health officials and members of private physicians organizations and later at a news conference, said new influenza strains, such as the swine flu virus, have an attack rate of 25 per cent. With a population of 232 million, such an attack rate could mean that nearly 60 million persons in the United States might be influenza victims this winter.

Sencer said those persons in the high-risk groups would receive a bivalent vaccine to protect them against both the swine influenza and the A-Victoria strain. Others who receive their inoculations in the fall will get only the swine vaccine.

SENCER SAID a single dose of swine vaccine should afford 70 to 90 per cent protection for six months.

The new swine influenza was first discovered at Ft. Dix, N.J., last February. Health officials estimate as many as 500 soldiers came down with the disease. Although there have been no other cases of human to human transmission of swine influenza, public health officials believe it could be a major public health threat next fall.

Sencer stressed once again that public health officials still are not sure that there will be an epidemic of swine flu this fall and winter. He added, however, that President Ford's decision to request $135 million in federal money to finance a nationwide immunization program was "like taking out an insurance policy."

back the bars with his paws. Leeds found him asleep on the lobby floor one morning after he had rummaged through several bags of potato chips, packaged goods in the animal care center and had taken a bath in the grooming shop.

"Sheen," an Irish setter, is one of those dogs who can unlatch the lock on the gate of his room while "Kemo," a Siberian husky, skillfully sprays the ceiling with water from his drinking fountain.

The "Regency" care package includes carpeting and a brass bed with mattress, covered with a Charlie Brown sheet. The less expensive "Imperial" and "Deluxe" packages are different only in the room size and the attention the pets get from the attendants, Leeds said.

The average size room for a small dog is 3 by 4 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 3 by 12 feet. A "Regency" room is 6 by 6 feet with an adjacent outdoor run that is 6 by 12 feet.

Homesick.

FOR ALL THIS, there is a waiting list a mile long, especially for the summer months and holidays. Some pets come back as many as 40 times in three years. Some stay as long as four months, but the average stay is 10 days.

"This is the only motel for pets of its kind so far, and we hope to open another in the Oak Brook area next year. Then, one in every state after that," Leeds said.

He gave up his 17-year post as an industrial engineer director with General Motors to take on what he calls his "labor of love."

"This is a wonderful business to be in. You have to understand just how much most people love their pets. They think of them and treat them just like other human beings, sometimes they treat them even better than they would treat their own children," Leeds said.

"Yes, we offer something novel for most pet owners, but we aren't trying to offer something that is too expensive for most people to afford," he said.

"I watch the people who come to pick up their pets after a vacation or something. The pets light up when they see their masters. They jump all over them, and the owners get all excited," Leeds said.

"Now that's the kind of love that we try to give them while the owners are away. It's just a little something extra for these pets, because they are something special."

For a pampered poodle, nothing but the best.

The American Pet Motel — puppy heaven?

Judge won't 'correct' Stavros' jail term

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Convicted extortionist James Stavros, former Wheeling Township Democratic committeeman, was refused his plea for a "corrected sentence" by a federal judge Friday, but Stavros' attorney predicted he will be paroled this summer.

Atty. Thomas Foran said that Stavros is likely to leave the federal correctional institution at Sandstone, Minn., after a parole board hearing in July. Stavros received a four-year prison sentence from U. S. District Court Judge Hubert Will in 1974 after pleading guilty to federal extortion charges.

WILL REFUSED Friday to grant Foran's motion to "correct" Stavros' sentence.

The judge said he will reconsider

the motion after the July parole board hearing.

Foran told Will that the parole board has twice denied Stavros' pleas for release because federal officials have labeled him a prisoner of "unusual or national interests."

"It is a case of unusual interest," Assistant U.S. Atty. Steven J. Kadison told Will. "Tremendous sums of money . . . physical threats against witnesses . . . then length of time this man operated . . . make it unusual," he said.

WILL SAID: "Wheeling Township is not exactly the center of the earth in terms of major interests," adding that Stavros' conviction "is not as significant as" corruption charges involving Chicago aldermen and Cook County Board members.

Testimony of two prison officials Friday and documents produced by Foran indicate that Stavros' classification blocked furlough requests and two demands for parole, Will said.

The classification often is assigned to crime syndicate figures. A special hearing is required to label a prisoner as "unusual or national interest."

Stavros' former attorney, Joel Murray, said last year that Stavros was unfairly classified without a hearing. After a hearing before Will, prison officials denied the charge.

FRIDAY, STAVROS' "unit manager" at Sandstone, Robert Benson, said one reason for parole denial in September 1975 was opposition by federal prosecutors who identified Stavros as a figure of "unusual and national interest" in a report to the parole board.

"Parole consideration was adversely affected by his classification," Will said. Parole Board officials carefully followed hearing procedures "and got at every 'I' and crossed every 'T' but then ignored the substance of the recommendation" and denied parole, Will said.

Prison officials have recommended Stavros' release, said Foran, who talked of Stavros' six children, illness which once forced his transfer to a federal medical prison in Missouri and "exemplary" conduct in prison.

Testimony Friday by Benson and by William Slack, an employee at the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., revealed that:

- Prison officials at Sandstone hesitated to approve a furlough request by Stavros because a newspaper reporter inquired about the furlough.

"WHAT IT (the inquiry) effectively did for us was create an aura of special handling . . . a red flag," Benson said. When Stavros received his furlough he was warned by prison officials to avoid the "public eye" and newspaper reporters.

- Lexington prison officials searched Stavros and his belongings for a reported list of furloughs and parole releases that Stavros was collecting as evidence of unfair treatment.
- That Stavros sued the federal government in a Minnesota court under provisions of the Freedom of Information Act for release of prison and parole board documents.

Wills' decision Friday could lead to another hearing if the parole board denies Stavros' release in July. The hearing will come as Stavros completes his second year in prison.

$38.9 million if Dist. 59 withdrew and formed a unit district.

In addition, Dist. 214 would have to give the proposed unit a percentage of the total high school district's assets, which would be about $10 million in addition to the two high schools in the proposed district's area.

The figures also show Dist. 214 would have $1,722 available per student next year under the current set-up but would only have $1,627 available per student if Dist. 59 formed a unit district.

The figures also show the unit district would have $2,196 per student on the high school level next year.

The charts also show the Dist. 59 area is paying about $2,161 per high school student compared to the general Dist. 214 rate of $1,410 per student. The Dist. 59 area has about 27 per cent of the total Dist. 214 student body and has about 40 per cent of the high school's assessed valuation.

'The Drunkard' opening at Hersey High

A "horrid tale of temperance and temptation" will be told at Hersey High School in the form of a melodrama, "The Drunkard," Thursday through Saturday, April 10, at 8 p.m.

This much booed, hissed and cheered version of the story by W. H. Smith written in 1844 revolves around a young man of property and good social standing, played by Dennis McSherry, and his bitter struggle with "demon rum." In the early 1950's the play ended a 20-year stand before a combined audience of two million in Los Angeles.

Tickets for the performances, which will be held in the school theater, 1900 E. Thomas Ave., Arlington Heights, are $1.50. They may be purchased at the door or by calling 259-8500 ext. 71 during business hours. The management reserves the right to reserve seating for parties larger than 15 people.

'Birdie' to be staged at Wheeling High

It's hysteria, screaming teenagers, tear-streaked faces and autograph hounds. It's the good old days of rock 'n' roll brought back to life at Wheeling High School in "Bye, Bye Birdie."

The spring musical comedy is scheduled for Thursday through Saturday, April 10 at 8 p.m. in the school theater, 900 S. Elmhurst Rd., Wheeling.

The story revolves around a rock star, Conrad Birdie, played by Mike Tufano, who is joining the army and has agreed to give a fan, played by Carol Methisen, in a small Ohio town "One last kiss." The result is local hysteria for both teen-agers and parents. Albert is played by George Oslovich and Rose by Debbie Rubner.

Tickets for the production which is directed by Frank Dobler and Phil Stutz, are $2.50.

ty would cost customers $17 a month, instead of the $9.50 rate now charged. That is a 178 per cent increase.

RESIDENTS AND village officials are mobilizing to oppose the rate hike proposals, with the village promising to provide legal aid in the battle.

"The amounts requested are extremely high," said Mayor Robert D. Teichert. "It would be hard for individuals to unite and try to fight this on their own."

The village has fought the last two Citizens' rate hike requests, and attorney Raymond Peterson is handling the case for the village. Teichert said the village will share the legal expense with the Village of Bollingbrook, which also is served by Citizens Utilities Co.

The ICC also has set up a July 2 hearing to review progress on water quality monitoring system the utility has installed. The company is under orders by the ICC to upgrade the quality of water and service to its customers.

Four seek three-year terms in Dist. 59

There are four candidates for three 3-year terms in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Emil Bahnmaier, Erwin Poklacki and Judy Zanca. Newcomer Charles Canupp Jr.

Endorsements: None.

The Issues: The Dist. 59 board has wrestled with money problems all year and now is discussing what the impact of a balanced budget will have on the district. The district has been operating at a deficit for more than 15 years and the board was forced to borrow money by issuing teachers orders, a form of script, to pay the faculty for several months.

The board also successfully passed a tax rate increase referendum this year, but sees a need for another down the road if the financial picture does not improve.

Also at issue is the unit district study now under way by a citizen's committee, the unit district would combine elementary and high schools under one board and administration and would require two of the high schools now operated by High School Dist. 214.

Teachers in the district have grown increasingly aggressive in contract negotiations over the years and are now closely watching the board to see if staff cutbacks go beyond an amount which would be in proportion to the 4 per cent of declining enrollment in the district.

The board this year also introduced the concept of converting one of the district schools into an alternative school, where a more traditional structured approach to education would be stressed. Although the community opposed the idea in a series of public hearings, the board is interested in investigating the concept further.

Erwin Poklacki

"I have experience to bring to the board that is needed at this time," said Erwin Poklacki, Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board candidate.

Poklacki, who was appointed to the board last summer, also served on the board from 1971-74. He said through "the experience of being a board member you learn what is the best thing to do despite what the taxpayers think. It's sometimes a difficult, lonely situation."

He said during his years on the board he has come to realize "communications with the community will always be a problem. I don't see any solution to the problem" because the "education language must be learned."

POKLACKI SAID he also advocates looking into alternative schooling options in Dist. 59. "I pushed my fellow board members into this alternative school thing this year. It didn't turn out the way I'd hoped it would," he said. The alternative school was voted down for next year.

He said the major problem in holding hearings on the alternative school idea was that parents didn't realize it wouldn't jeopardize the programs in the regular schools.

On other issues Poklacki said:

• Deficit spending. Poklacki said he favors deficit spending. Before cutting programs, he said he would go et cuts "in principle" because all areas were cut at least 4 per cent, including special education, which is not suffering declining enrollment.

• Closing schools. "It won't come for a few years. I'm not in favor of pushing it, but if there is no program in a school to keep it open, it should be closed. The majority has to be served."

• Teachers strikes. "It's very possible, especially this year, to have a strike in Dist. 59. All the ingredients are there." He said if a strike hits the district, he would continue negotiating, close schools and seek mediation.

• Teachers unions. "It hasn't provided any benefits to the district or teachers for the last number of years. Probably the salaries would have been about the same without negotiations" — a salary he says is "equitable." He said the union, however, doesn't necessarily represent the teachers.

into deficit spending because budget cuts "should mean a less educated student coming out of our schools." He said "deficit spending can be handled very efficiently. It's easier than raising the tax level."

• Budget cuts. "We shouldn't go into panic cutting of programs at this time." He said he is "very happy with the way the district is handling budget cuts — a little from everything — rather than cutting total programs." He wants the board to "make a commitment now" about what it will do if it faces an inflation factor greater than 5 per cent, the figure used in setting the current budget. Poklacki said he voted against the recent bud-

Charles Canupp

Charles Canupp decided to challenge the three incumbents up for reelection to the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 Board of Education because of his interest in the district.

"It was projected to be an uncontested race and I have had a great interest in Dist. 59 — my two children. I wanted to take the opportunity to get more involved in the decision making of the district," he said.

Canupp said one of his "prime" goals is to improve communications between the board and the community.

"I want to get more public involvement with the board," he said. Canupp suggested that the board send out newsletters more often and questionnaires to get residents' suggestions. He also wants information about the topics to be discussed at board meetings available to the public in advance to "help get the people out to meetings."

Canupp said the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic are the most important subjects taught in the elementary schools because they set the base for future study. He advocates a "curriculum that would best give a strong education that would let children expand as they get older."

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "I would like to move toward a balanced budget. The cost of borrowing money can get quite expensive." He said he wants to get a date for "getting the district in the black" and work to meet it.

• Budget cuts. He said he would "have to really get into the details and look at what areas could survive a cutback." If programs had to be cut back, he said he would "pick a program with as little impact as possible" and avoid touching the basics.

He said the district should also look at the individual schools and assess their needs when cutting back staff and other areas rather than taking "one That is the worst mistake you can make."

• Closing schools. When a school's enrollment drops to about 50 per cent of its capacity, the district should "implement a study to see what would be the most economical way to go" — closing it or maintaining it, he said.

• Referendum. He said all sources of revenue should be examined to see if there is "an alternative source of money" before the board tries for a tax rate increase. "If referendum is the only way to get out of deficit, then pursue it."

Judith Zanca

The problems confronting school boards from declining enrollment and rising costs to dropping revenue require "experienced board members to be around," says Judith Zanca who is running for her third 3-year term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 board.

"I've been on the board six years and feel I've done a good job. I want to continue," she said.

She said one of the major accomplishments during her time on the board was firing former Supt. James Erviti. "I don't know if it is something to be proud of but it was necessary."

MRS. ZANCA SAID she is pleased with the current administration under Supt. Roger Bardwell. "We have an administration that is more responsive to the community," she said.

She also feels the current board is "responsive to what we hear from the community. Our phones are in tune."

The board also is planning to hold community forums every three months to answer questions and listen to problems. She said she hopes this program will bring more parents in contact with the board.

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "We're at the mercy of inflation and negotiation settlements. I don't know how we can get out of part of our revenue being tax

• Alternative schools. "In the 60s, everyone said there is only one way of learning. I do not believe that. We must offer the alternatives." She said the district should offer a range of teaching styles from a very structured program to an open school setup.

• Teachers strikes. If Dist. 59 confronted a teachers strike, Mrs. Zanca said she would "keep the schools open. I don't think the community would stand for closing the schools." She said she would continue negotiating and would not seek a court injunction to get teachers back in school.

• Teachers unions. "The only issue I ever hear about is money and now some about job security. We also don't hear from anybody but the leadership." She said Dist. 59 teachers are paid "just about right. We're competitive with our neighbors."

anticipation warrants," a form of borrowed money. She said the board is "going to strive to make the bottom dollar balance" but still needs to borrow.

• Budget cuts. She said the "largest place to save money is with the teacher ration." By increasing the student/teacher ratio by one, she said the district could save about $250,000. She said the board also developed a list of "27 sacred cows" that would have a "terrible effect" on the district if cut. She said "before attacking the 27 cows, there must be input from the community, principals and teachers."

• Closing schools. "When enrollment gets below 150 kids at a school, we would have to consider closing schools." She said she is not in favor of changing school boundaries to enable the district to close a school.

Emil Bahnmaier

Emil Bahnmaier wants to "keep the good things in this district" as he seeks a second term on the Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 school board.

"I've learned a lot about Dist. 59 and education during the last three years. I've done my apprenticeship," he said. "We're going to be going into a rough year. Experience is going to be invaluable."

He would like the district to do more evaluation of programs. "I want to see if we are getting maximum education value out of a program or if other programs are better," he said.

ONE AREA he feels has improved during his term on the board is the board's contacts with the community.

"I think we have opened up. I like to think I was part of that because I came on the board with a hangup about it," he said.

He would like to improve the board's communication further by setting up parent advisory committees at each school. "They would be advisory, to bring the views of the community into the schools," he said.

He also is pleased with the establishment of a gifted program for talented students in various areas. He sees the "talented program as a way to have fall-out to the regular classroom" on special programs and indivisualized instruction.

On other issues:

• Deficit spending. "Right now there is no way out of tax anticipation warrants," a method of borrowing money, he said. "We hope for, and I support, a balanced budget for this year but the balanced budget depends on the outcome of teacher negotiations."

• Budget cuts. The first area to cut back would be the teaching staff, he said. Bahnmaier said he would consider increasing the student/teacher ration to cut back on the number of teachers needed. "Only when that would hurt the education would I touch any education programs. Our special programs are things that make our district unique."

• Closing schools. "The present position is we would not close them down until enrollment reaches 125 students. It is conceivable the time will arrive when it will be financially unfeasible to keep a school open."

• Unit district. "I think the taxpayers should have the right to determine if they want a unit district. I lean towards a unit district. I have seen figures that show financial advantages" for Dist. 59 forming a unit district.

• Referendum. He said the earliest he would ask the taxpayers to support a tax rate increase would be during the 1979-80 school year.

3 hopefuls seek 2 seats on Dist. 26 school board

Three candidates are seeking two seats on the River Trails Dist. 26 Board of Education in the April 10 election.

The candidates: Incumbents Peggy Golden and William Hasse. Newcomer Patrick Fauceglia.

Endorsements: River Trails Dist. 26 General Caucus endorsed all three candidates.

The Issues: The district has projected bankruptcy by 1977 and board members have started making staff and other cutbacks to pull the district out of its deficit.

Stories by Diane Granat

Board members have also proposed closing one of the district's six elementary schools because of a steady decline in enrollment.

Peggy Golden

The financial crisis facing River Trails Dist. 26 is a prime concern of Peggy Golden, who is running for her first full term on the Dist. 26 board.

Mrs. Golden, who was appointed to the board last August to fill a vacancy, said Dist. 26 must do long-range planning to deal with the district's financial problems.

"We must start to adjust our spending right now and know the types of changes we must make to achieve solvency, quality education and efficient building use," Mrs. Golden said.

MRS. GOLDEN said she thinks in terms of how fiscal responsibility will affect the education in the schools. "We are basically a no frills district and there is very little we could cut in the way of programs," she said.

Mrs. Golden has been the Dist. 26 representative to the North Suburban Special Education Organization since

She said the open classroom arrangement at Bond School is a "good organizational plan," but it is something developed within a building with a specific principal and group of teachers.

On other issues:

• Class size. Mrs. Golden favors the board's decision to raise class size from an average of 20 to 25 per class. However, Mrs. Golden also said

Patrick Fauceglia

Patrick J. Fauceglia decided to run for the River Trails Dist. 26 school board because of the financial crisis the district faces.

"There is a great concern about the accomplishments of our educational system today, but are we getting a better product for the additional money spent?" Fauceglia asked.

Fauceglia received endorsement from the Dist. 26 caucus in February but then withdrew from the race. "I had not fully considered the time implications," he said. After his initial decision to withdraw he said he received many phone calls urging him to reconsider, so he decided to reenter the race.

FAUCEGLIA SAID Dist. 26 must work with a balanced budget. "Programs that were once considered sacred will have to be reevaluated," he said.

A quality education should prepare a student to either go on to college or to leave high school and get a job, so the schools must also provide career education, Fauceglia said.

Fauceglia said increased spending in education has brought lower results in achievement. "We've increased our allocation to education, lowered class size and introduced modern techniques, and we show no improvement," he said.

The district should come up with methods of analyzing the educational achievement of its pupils, based on suburban districts in this area, instead of using nationally-based tests, Fauceglia said.

On other issues:

• Class size: Fauceglia said Dist. 26 teachers will have to work with a

3 run for 2 spots on Harper board

There are three candidates running for two seats on the Harper Community College Board of Trustees in the April 10 election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Shirley Munson and Jessalyn Nicklas and newcomer Stephen Carponelli.

Endorsements: None.

Shirley Munson

by WANDALYN RICE

The public now has its own place on the Harper College board's agenda and the board adheres strictly to the letter and the spirit of the Illinois Open Meeting Act.

Those two things are what Shirley Munson, who is completing a two-year term on the board, believes are her greatest accomplishments as a Harper board member.

Mrs. Munson, 47, of 639 N. Benton, Palatine, is a teacher's aide in Palatine Rolling Meadows Dist. 15.

The agenda item — called "public participation" — hasn't been widely used, but it does provide a way for the public to reach the board, Mrs. Munson says.

She also says her insistence on adherence to the open meetings law has broken "a pattern that had been set before." She says she can't really place the blame for that pattern, but is glad things have changed now.

AS A BOARD member and this past year's board president, Mrs. Munson sometimes has been considered an opponent of the college administration and particularly of Pres. Robert Lahti.

However, she says she doesn't consider herself an "enemy" of the administration. "I've tried very hard to work with Dr. Lahti," she says. "I have found him responsive to my positive attitude."

The biggest issue facing the college in coming years is the decision about expanding to a second campus, while keeping costs in line, she says.

Although the college last fall passed the referendum, which she wholeheartedly supported, to buy a second campus, she says she is not ready to make a decision yet about actually building on the second campus.

SHE SAYS she thinks the second campus is a good idea "if we can hold the line on increases in our costs per student. I don't think we have been provided enough figures yet to determine that."

Shirley Munson

The decision on the second campus "has to be made as soon as the administration comes forth with some figures on the projected costs," she says. "I really think it has to be done this year."

Mrs. Munson says she hasn't decided whether she would run again for the board presidency if she is reelected.

In continuing on the board, Mrs. Munson says she wants to continue to encourage openness and "to have a board that is cohesive enough to provide objective questioning without shattering the board."

On other issues, Mrs. Munson says:

Faculty relations. "I think we have improved them. We do have a place on the agenda early in the meeting for a faculty report." She has changed her position on the advisability of giving the faculty a nonvoting board seat. "I've had to revise my position to some degree, because of the possibility of faculty unionization. It might be possible sometime in the future."

Finances. "This year there is no problem, but next year it looks like we might have to raise tuition." If state funding continues to be less than the college needs, "sometime in the future we're going to have to look at an education fund property tax increase. We haven't had one since the college started."

Gov. Daniel Walker's charges the college offers "frill" courses. "If there are any, they are totally financially independent and they are not taking space from other programs."

The Issues: Harper College this fall passed a referendum to enable the college to purchase land for a second campus near Schoenbeck and Palatine roads. The decision now lies with the board when to build on that land and what type of second campus is needed.

Gov. Daniel Walker during the primary campaign in

Stephen Carponelli

by DIANE GRANAT

Running for the Harper College Board of Trustees was "the most obvious step in the direction of public service that I could make," Stephen Carponelli said.

As a newcomer in the race, Carponelli said, "I am not running against anyone, as much as I am running for the board."

Carponelli, 28, of 2135 E. Peachtree Ln., Arlington Heights, is an attorney.

Carponelli said Harper enjoys an "excellent" reputation and is doing very well at this point. "The junior colleges are meeting the problem of having too many people with bachelor's degrees without any skills," he said.

ANOTHER REASON for Carponelli's decision to run for the Harper board was because he recently finished college and he said the interests of Harper are close to his own. "The average age at Harper is the same as mine," he said.

Carponelli said Harper should emphasize the transfer program, as well as the career education program. He also said there is room for continuing education at the college.

"If you can make use of the facility for adult education, then you should. It should not be one or the other," Carponelli said.

CARPONELLI SAID his first goal 41, elected to the board, would be to attend every meeting and "to make sure I am prepared in advance for every meeting." He said he would start with these basic goals and determine more "far-reaching goals" at a later date.

Student representation on the college board is a good educational tool,

March challenged the role of the community colleges, saying they offer too many "frills" by offering classes like painting and seminars.

Walker also warned community colleges to beware of expansion and prepare for a decline in enrollment that has already been felt by many elementary and high

Stephen Carponelli

Carponelli said, and he feels the board should listen to student opinions.

One other issue, Carponelli said:

Second campus. "I am all for the development of this second campus. I hope the college will grow as the demand requires it. I don't see the need for extension centers if the second campus is built, but I could see continuing the extension centers if people request classes there."

Finances. Carponelli said tuition at Harper might warrant a modest increase. He said there should be an organized approach to see that funds from the state are obtained. He said he would favor a tax rate increase if it were necessary to maintain the services and high standards at Harper.

On Gov. Walker's charge the college offers "frill" courses. "The governor's position on frills was wrong. There are a substantial number of courses that are worthwhile that the community can take advantage of."

Faculty relations: "The faculty is entitled to a very substantial voice in the governance of the college." Carponelli said he does not know whether it is legal to create a faculty seat on the board, but "if you could overcome the legal problem, the faculty should have a right to be represented on the board."

Jessalyn Nicklas

by TOM WELLMAN

Jessalyn Nicklas didn't intend to run for reelection to the Harper College Board of Trustees — that is, until some members of the public encouraged her to run for another term.

Mrs. Nicklas, 450 N. Ayrshire, Inverness, the only original board member still serving, said she received many phone calls of encouragement before she made her decision.

The 60-year-old board member served on the group which made the first feasibility study for the college in 1960. She's served on the board since 1965 and has been reelected three times since the first election.

SHE'S AN OPPONENT of cutbacks at the institution, merely for the sake of saving money. She emphasizes that the state's community colleges have always pursued an open-door admissions policy. "We should provide opportunities as long as we can, and not just for the young," she says.

Are there frills at Harper? If they're there, they aren't excessive, she says. A variety of seminars provide learning opportunities for many persons, and Continuing Education — criticized last month by Gov. Daniel Walker — is a self-contained program which pays for itself, she says.

The college's budget is constantly monitored by the board to prevent excesses, she says. Some programs, such as the developmental programs, are costly, but they provide a necessary service for certain persons, she says.

MRS. NICKLAS has been active in liaison with the various state agencies that help govern Harper. She stresses that "a better understanding" is needed between the state and the community colleges, which she refers to as "teen-agers" in the development.

Does the institution face a future tax hike? "I hope not," she says. The tax rate for Harper has always been comparatively low; she's like to see the state assume more of a responsibility for providing tax revenue for the college.

She's satisfied with Harper's curriculum, "but if you're satisfied, you never grow and improve," she says. She reports that the curriculum has developed as the result of "careful study," she mentions physical and health therapy as one area which could be added at Harper.

On other issues:
Second campus. She supported the referendum for the new campus last fall. "I felt we should designate some land. If it wasn't needed we could sell it," she says.

Now, the college is undertaking extensive studies before a decision on construction is reached this summer — and she's awaiting the results of those studies.

Faculty Unionization. "Up to them." Such action by college teachers is a "growing trend in the country."

She supports merit recognition pay as a way of rewarding teaching excellence. "I don't believe in a step system (of pay)," she says.

Administration. She calls it "excellent." One area where modest improvement is needed is in communication with the public. And she's pleased with the job College Pres. Robert Lahti's doing.

If Mrs. Nicklas is reelected to a fifth term on the board, it'll be with the realization "you can't always please people, but you must be willing to make the hard decisions." Unless you can build and maintain a good institution, then everyone's hurt, she says.

Two seats open

Dist. 23 election uncontested

There are only two candidates running for two 3-year terms on the Prospect Heights Dist. 23 Board of Education elections April 10 — making it the only district in the Northwest suburbs with an uncontested election.

The Candidates: Incumbents Alan Krinsky and Sallyann Okuno.

Endorsements: None.

Alan Krinsky

Alan Krinsky, 38, of 2027 Rosehill, Arlington Heights, decided to seek his third term on the board because he believes he has "done a good job and that I can continue to do a good job." School board positions have to be filled, and he noted that there "were not too many volunteers this year."

Finances. "School is going to go on" no matter what happens, Krinsky said, but the state legislature is making it very difficult for school boards to plan their budgets.

"This whole finance thing depends on at what rate the state is going to fund us," Krinsky said. He said the district will not be in as bad financial shape if it is fully funded this year as it would be if funding were dropped 85 per cent, as has been rumored, he said.

Even if full funding is realized, the district will still be in some financial trouble this year because of declining enrollment, he said.

"We have only one small section of housing construction in the district, and the rest is apartments and condominiums, which just don't bring kids," he said.

Referendum. Krinsky does not believe passing a tax rate increase referendum would be of much value to the district generally although it might help in the building fund.

"We're already taxing at maximum in the education fund," he said, which would mean that if the tax rate were increased, the state would withhold some of its state aid.

Budget cuts. Krinsky said he has no desire to cut anything out of the budget, but if cuts had to be made, he would cut last those items which directly affect the educational process.

"I'm not saying we should cut administrators or maintenance or any-

Sallyann Okuno

Sallyann Okuno is seeking her second term on the board because she believes it takes a board member one term "just to get into the swing of things."

Mrs. Okuno, 35, of 2 Garden Ct., Prospect Heights, said she is still interested in the board and in making decisions on the financial and educational concerns of the district.

Finances. Mrs. Okuno believes it will take "a long time" to reach a point where the district can operate without going into tax anticipation warrants, which is borrowing on the next year's anticipated tax revenues.

It is especially difficult to plan a budget for next year because "we don't know what aid will be coming from downstate, and so we can only assume — and hope our assumptions are right."

Referendum. "I don't think a referendum would pass," Mrs. Okuno said. "That's why we're talking about making some cutbacks. We don't want to go to more tax anticipation warrants."

Budget cuts. Mrs. Okuno disagrees with some district boards that are making extracurricular activities cutbacks before anything else.

"Extracurricular activities are part of the makeup of the district and are part of a well-rounded education," she said.

Mrs. Okuno would consider raising the average class size slightly to save money, but "I wouldn't want to go over 30 kids in a class. Each child is different and has individual needs." She said if declining enrollment shows "definite proof" that fewer teachers are needed, she would be willing to release some teachers. "But I want to keep the level of education where it is and I would want to be sure that there were really no positions available."

Mrs. Okuno would prefer "to modify" several programs rather than cutting one out completely. "We would have to see how much we could cut and still maintain the educational value."

Teachers union. "I think there is a lot of good rapport between the board and the union," Mrs. Okuno said. She said she knows the Dist. 23 teacher salaries "are lower than some other districts, but with the amount we have to work with, we're doing the best we can."

Communication. "I think we have had fairly open and good communication with the public," Mrs. Okuno said. "We send home newsletters after the board meetings, and people at board meetings are allowed to speak. But there's always room for improvement."

COOPERATIVE BLOOD REPLACEMENT PLAN 477-7500

William Haase

William Haase has served as chairman of the budget and finance committee in River Trails Dist. 26 for the past three years and he believes that type of experience is essential in Dist. 26, which faces bankruptcy by 1977.

Haase is a Certified Public Accountant and the director of personnel development for an international CPA firm. He said these are qualifications which help him face the complex financial and personnel problems facing Dist. 26 schools today.

In the four years he has served on the Dist. 26 board, Haase said he prepared the financial forecasts and plans for the board. "We now have a budgeting system that makes sense and a realistic view of our revenues and expenditures," Haase said.

Haase said the items which should be cut out of the budget to avoid a continued deficit are those which will hurt education least. The district must ask "what is the price tag on our educational plans," he said.

Community involvement: River Trails Dist. 26 school board member since 1972; Mount Prospect finance commission, 1975-76; Boy Scout Committee; Euclid-Lake Homeowners Assn., president, 1971; Indian Grove PTA, president, 1972.

fire all of the teachers it had slated for cuts because of financial problems. Haase said he consistently voted to cut the full number of teachers.

"I disagreed very strongly with their (the board's) judgment," Haase said "I tried very hard but unsuccessfully to persuade the other board members," he said.

Haase said an important part of his educational philosophy is to have a school system where the children enjoy going to school. To achieve this it is necessary to have "excellent, highly motivated teachers who are satisfied with their jobs," as well as good buildings and materials, he said.

Haase said one of his long-range goals for Dist. 26 is to find a way to finance more enrichment programs. "We spend a great deal of money for slow learners, but we do little for enrichment," he said.

On other issues.
• Class size:

"We have gone from a luxury situation of 20 to 25 students per class, which is a manageable size," Haase said. "It's easier to have 16 to 20 students per class, but it's possible to accomplish things with 25," he said. Haase said he would have trouble with class size going above an average of 30 students per class.

• Closing Schools

Haase said he supports closing a school in Dist. 26 because it is the best way to achieve the class size of 25 with an equitable distribution. "I would not have favored closing a school just to save the $60,000 to $80,000," he said. Haase said he has urged the board to hold a public hearing on which school to close.

class size of 26 pupils, which the board recently adopted.

He said there is no evidence which states that class size has an effect on learning. He added that "anything beyond 30 (per class) becomes unwieldy."

• Closing Schools: With a choice between closing a school in Dist. 26 and going deeper into deficit spending, Fauceglia said he favors closing a school. He also said he thinks most residents in the district would favor a school closing as a budget cutback.

• Teacher unions: "The right to organize and the right to collective bargaining is a right any group has in our society," Fauceglia said.

• Teacher strikes: Fauceglia said he looks skeptically at the subject of strikes since they are illegal. He said, however, if a strike occurred in Dist. 26 he would continue to negotiate. "But financial conditions would direct us toward how much longer I'd negotiate," he said.

Fauceglia said he would try to keep the schools open if a strike occurred.

Peggy Golden

there is also a limit to raising class size. "I don't want to see a galloping increase in class size. If we exceed a certain number of children per class we can't meet our educational needs," she said.

• Closing schools: Mrs. Golden said as the number of children in the district declines they do not need as many schools. "I favor closing a school if it will make more efficient use of empty classroom space. We must be willing to change as the circumstances around us change," she said.

• Teacher unions: "I think teacher unions are here to stay," Mrs. Golden said. She said unionization helps the teachers and she feels that the board's relations with Dist. 26 teachers has been very good.

• Teachers strikes: There are ways to circumvent a strike, Mrs. Golden said, but she said she does not anticipate that Dist. 26 will ever have to face the problem.
